"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION
CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

COAL.
HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:
HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.
In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, and to meet rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

Sunlight at Midnight.

[Cor. Utica Herald.]

All the world of St. Petersburgh drives out upon the islands at night, and gathers at "The Point," where the land looks to the north and the Gulf of Finland, to honor the sun at its setting. The hour was half-past nine and no cloud obscured the royal orb. A broad line of orange ran along the horizon in which the sun floated, until it gradually settled down as into an ocean of color. The orange became paler, changed to amber and then to yellow, and the whole sky was flooded with it, when finally it became cold and metallic. Before the sun set, a rose pink suffused the waters away out to the mouth of the river and the far-off gulf. Then it darkened into purple, and finally shaded into a gray, hard flint. So we saw the sun set again, off Basil Island, in the Gulf of Finland, but then less color prevailed, and only shades of orange yellow appeared on sea or earth or sky. The sun in neither case went down with decided movement as it does with us, but rather faded and sank as an exhausted old life may flicker in its socket. The rays grow cool and weak. The shadows fall. The sensation is strange, to have the sun shine and material objects seem not to intercept it, for the light is the same back of them as on either side. For a long while before the shadows cease, they gradually diminish in distinctness. The pencil is dull for limning. In its absence, one discovers the marvelous power of light and shade, and learns to admire more than ever the mastery of Rembrandt.

At half-past ten the rays of the sun already below the horizon were playing on the pinnacle of St. Peter and St. Paul. Young people were delighting themselves with games of graces in Alexander Park. At eleven the windows had not lost the day's reflected light. It was a cool twilight, June and October struggling for the evening. No sense of lateness prevailed. Women and children were alone in the streets as at midday, and while the shops are closed, dilligent search discovers only two or three artificial lights in long blocks of occupied buildings. These words are written just as the clock strikes eleven, and the cross of Our Lady of Kazen is yet tinged by the sun, which is wandering only just beneath the horizen far away in the north.

The night becomes no darker; at twelve and one a person may read coarse print in the streets, and before two o'clock, aurora tints the morning sky. The experience is unique, for one may almost refer to the Scripture text and say here is no night. Something mysterious, wonderful because unknown, appears to be in the air. It is not the absence of night which will make heaven, but the weariness which longs for night will not be there, for even light may become a burden, and the day may extend itself to a master.

The good people of St. Petersburg are happy in their situation, and in this long, bright night, they are celebrating a fete in honor of Peter the Great. We met them not long before eleven o'clock, going in crewds by carriage and by boat and on foot, out to Petrovski island, where Punch and Judy were performing, and games were in progress, and fruit and eggs and bread and beer were for sale, and mirth and jollity went hand in hand with good order.

A Patchwork Head.

[Danbury News.]

Here is something remarkable. A woman in New Haven was recently bereft of her scalp by the idiosyncracies of a shaft and belt. The doctors saw that to remedy the evil they would have to recourse to transplanting, and so they actually succeeded in getting a sufficient number of pieces from other people's heads to give this unfortunate woman a new scalp. We hope those New Haven doctors used more discretion than did he who attended a man named Finlay, who met with a similar accident in Oriskany, N. Y., some thirteen years ago. Bits of scalp from seventeen different persons were secured by this doctor and adroitly stitched to the head of Mr. Finlay. When it was done, people came miles to see Finlay's head, and Finlay himself, with his checkerboard cranium, was the happiest man in Oriskany. But when the capillary glands got in working order, and the hair commenced to grow, the top of that man's head presented the most extraordinary spectacle on record. The doctor, who was about half the time in liquor, had consulted expediency rather than judgment, and secured that new scalp without any reference to future developments. We never saw anything like it. Here was a tuft of yellow hair, and next to it a bit of black, and then a flame of red, and a little like silk, and more like tow, with brown hair and gray hair, and sandy hair, and cream-colored hair scattered over his entire skull. And what a mad man that Finlay was, and nobody could blame him. He would stand up against the barn for an hour at a time, and sob and swear. It was very fortunate that the doctor was dead. He went off two weeks before with the blue ague, which is a mild sort of disease. Finlay kept his hair cut short, but that didn't make any difference. Then he tried dyes, but they only made matters worse. Then he got a wig, and this covered up the deformity; but sometimes at church he would get asleep, and the wig would fall off and make the children cry. Once at the county fair he fell asleep and the wig dropped off, and the committee on domestic goods, when they came around, stood in front of Finlay's head for some five minutes in wrapt delight. They then immediately declared that it was the most ingenious piece of patchwork in the list, and never discovered the mistake until they attempted to pin the premium card to it. At that Finlay awoke, and knocked down the chairman of the committee and chased the others out of the building. We hope those New Haven doctors have been more particular, as it is not a subject to trifle with.

PROFILE HOUSE, SEPT. 15.

The six-in-all have reason to be particularly pleased with the courtesy tendered them thus far, and left the Twin Mountain House by rail for Bethlehem station this morning, with pleasant remembrances of much kindness on the part of Messrs. Barron and Cutting. We met Gen. Natt Head at the Twin, Saturday, with Gov. Howard of Rhode Island, and on arriving here this evening found him snugly ensconced with Taft & Greenleaf. Vice President Henry Wilson has been sojourning in the mountain region. The general impression prevails that he will never again assume the duties of his office, as a return to his accustomed labors is liable to bring on a fatal attack of paralysis.

During our passage through the farming towns of this county, the little party has done duty which would entitle it to the respect of the Grangers, and the husbandmen have been found obliging in every regard. We walked from Bethlehem station to the Profile to-day, twelve miles, and have a trip of fifteen miles laid out for to-morrow. Passing through Bethlehem, which, next to Franconia, is the most beautiful town in New Hampshire, we were introduced to Mr. Joel Winch, a hale and hearty man of 90 years, who is the oldest citizen of Bethlehem. He says but one of the citizens who resided in Bethlehem 68 years ago, when he migrated there from Framingham, Mass., remains. The old gentleman is in vigorous health and gave the youngsters of the party advice recommending them to religion as a guide and source of content.

At Bethlehem, we took a last look of Mount Washington, half enveloped in clouds, but with the summit and base plainly visible. Snow fell there last night and could be plainly seen. Here a fellow tramp overtook us who proved to be Mr. Charles Joy of Newmarket, a very agreeable companion; further on we were fortunate in encountering an honest old farmer, whose name is familiar to many Portsmouth people—Mr. I. S. Quimby who represented Bethlehem in the legislature, in 1846. He wished his democratic friends in old Strawberry Bank to know that he has lost nohe of his democracy. Mr. Quimby relieved us of our baggage which was placed on his team as we went marching on.

That tent and those guns, blankets and cooking apparatus haven't been heard from since leaving Portsmouth, and camping has been abandoned. Mr. C. C. Burbank of Carroll aided us in our endeavors to remain comfortable. We left hope behind when we left the Twin Mountain region, leaving directions to have the tent, etc., speedily returned to Portsmouth should it ever arrive. We sent home by express all the baggage we could spare, and struck inland from all railroad connections with the smallest amount of incumbrances possible. This living on birch bark and postal cards isn't conducive to fleshifying purposes, and we were rejoiced on reaching the promised land whose oleaginous substance we have partaken of in the shape of raspberries, black and blue berries. Halting about three and a half miles from the Notch we had a cracker and milk supper at the boarding house of D. K. Priest—milk that was milk. The view from this place is magnificent and if we can induce our wives' relations and their relatives' friends to summer there in the future, we know that contentment will be theirs. Just think of the neatest and best of tables, the most agreeable of company and all modern conveniences at hand, for only a dollar a day!

We came through from Mr. Priest's to Echo Lake up the two-mile hill and more in 53 minutes, leaving the stage behind. Our plans include for to-morrow visits to the Flume and environs and a march down the Pemigewasset valley as far as possible; the next day's travel to be by boat or raft down the river should its waters flow deeply.

Yellow Fever.

This dreadful and dreaded scourge of the South has made its appearance this year in a very malignant form, and is committing terrible ravages in the sections visited. From Shreveport, La., which so far is the chief sufferer from the pestilence, we daily receive heartrending accounts of the terribly destructive effects of the disease. Shreveport is a town not larger than Portsmouth, and there are said to be six hundred cases there now, there not being well people enough to care for the sick. The fever is said to be of a peculiarly malignant type, known as the Mexican vomito, and is said to have been introduced by a circus. This will account for the fact of its appearance so far inland, there being no reports of its appearance in the Gulf ports, its usual home.

—"Emma," said a little girl to a schoolmate, "wouldn't it be awful if somebody should shoot our schoolmistress?" "Yes" was the reply, "but then, wouldn't it be nice not to have any school?"

—A French lady, hearing that a tunnel cost 5,000 francs a yard importuned her husband to buy her a dress of that material.

The evacuation of France by the Germans was completed on Tuesday.

Lima, Peru, is again threatened with serious danger resulting from a land slide.

A passenger train on the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad was thrown from the track by running over a cow, Monday night, and two passengers were killed.

The yellow fever epidemic at Shreveport still prevails with terrible severity, and there is no abatement of the disease at Memphis. It is reported to be spreading in northern Louisiana. Subscriptions for the relief of Shreveport are being made in all the principal cities.

Bellini, the tight-rope acrobat, who advertised to cross Niagara, stretched his cable below the falls last Friday, made his practice trip in private, and then left for Buffalo to complete his preparations. While he was away, Stephen Pierre, a young and inexperienced Canadian, who had longed to journey in a similar way since the days of Blondin, seized the opportunity to immortalize himself, and taking the renowned Bellini's pole and flags, strode across through wind and spray to the American side, in the presence of numerous apprehensive spectators, who greeted his success with encouraging expressions that impelled him to complete the round trip. His passage back was leisurely, and his confidence led him to lay at full length upon the rope with thirty feet sag when half over. He reached the Canadian shore in safety, much to the relief of visitors to the world-famed resort.

A red hot aerolite came whizzing down through the trees at Marysville, Cal., recently, burying itself eight feet deep in the ground. It weighed twelve pounds and was so hot, even after an hour had been spent in digging it up, that it set fire to the cart in which it was being conveyed to the town.

State Items.

The Inter-Ocean is confident that the forth-coming report on civil service reform will convince the country that the rules have been strictly acted upon at Washington, and disprove, therefore, the malicious charge so often thoughtlessly repeated, that the whole system has fallen into disuse and contempt. On the contrary, it has been the steady purpose of the administration to perfect it.

This is the statement of the position of the Democracy which comes from Council Bluffs: The "Democratic party wants to be trusted not for what it has been, but for what it says it will be. The people only know it by what it has been. By that it has been judged in former years and condemned. It will be the same way this year. The people prefer a party whose past record gives assurance of good government and honesty and economy in the future."

That the political contests in the South are increasing in fervor, is shown by the outbreak of peculiarly characteristic "fine writing" in the papers of that section. For example, a correspondent of the Richmond Enquirer, who has attended a meeting in Westmoreland County, Va., breaks forth in this style: "It was as when two giants had met in deadly conflict and one was slain. The first was an old scarred veteran of many battles, who had been brought from afar. Resorting to strategy, wearing the armor of Radicalism, and with its sword and shield in hand, came panting for the fight. The other was a young warrior—one of Virginia's own—untrained, but strong. He knew no cunning and sought no shelter, but leaping with herculean strength upon the arena of political strife—with the sword of truth only at his command—sought there an honest victory or an honored grave. Our efficient Chairman of the Conservative Executive Committee will pardon a suggestion as to his own duty, and that is, to order W. W. Walker to the front without delay, that Radicalism in Virginia may receive another blow, and howl another and final howl of death and despair."

A call has been issued in Louisiana for a State Delegate Convention of colored men, to be held in New-Orleans on Monday, Nov. 17, to elect a committee to proceed to Washington with the proofs that have been collected of the frauds perpetrated against the Republican voters of the State at the election in November of last year.

A movement, not yet well defined, has been started in the States of the Northwest looking to a convention of representative producers of that section of the country, to be held in some central locality this Fall. The Chicago papers are urging that it be held in that city during the Exposition.

State News.

Penacook Academy, at Fisherville, has 100 pupils.

On the 12th, six brass bands had a picnic at Peterborough. The air resounded.

New Hampshire will be represented at the meeting of the National Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., in Baltimore, by Past Grand Master Amos Jones, of Lebanon.

The foundation for a new Episcopal church, in Hanover, is now being laid. The building will be of granite, given by Mr. Balch, of Hanover, trimmed with freestone. It will be 100 feet by 55, and will have a tower 140 feet high. The society is flourishing. Rev. James Houghton, Jr., the present rector, is now in Switzerland with his wife, that being her native place.

The Rochester Courier says that a short time since as Mr. Osgood, the mail contractor from North Conway to Littleton, was driving a loaded six-horse stage coach through the Notch, when passing the old Crawford place, now owned by Dr Bemis, one of his lead horses was attacked suddenly by a three year old bull and lifted several feet in the air. The bull then landed on the cross trees and was carried down hill but got disentangled without doing further injury. He was subsequently killed.

Free-Lovers—A visit to the Wallingford "Community."

A correspondent of the Boston Post has lately been at Wallingford, Ct., to see what the "Community," or as it is sometimes called, the band of "Free-Lovers," are like unto. This community is about fourteen miles from New Haven, and has long been successfully established. They are prosperous, and, as far as the fraternal effect on their neighbors is concerned, it is advantageous, as the advance of property since the formation of the sect shows. The correspondent, after looking around the farm, says:

Then I slowly wended my way back to the house, and, as I entered, I was invited into a sitting-room by a pleasing-looking female. In the room, seated on benches without backs, were seven females dressed in calico bloomer costume, wearing their hair short. All were sewing. I tried to induce them to converse with me, but by the sly glances they cast behind the house I inferred that they were either watched or afraid of somebody. As they would not talk to me I took a good look at them. I must be pardoned if I do not describe appearance, because a description would not be complimentary. Suffice it to say, they were not lovely in form nor less than forty years of age. As soon as Mr. Olds, the Superintendent, returned, they all began talking to me at a high rate of speed, and probably would have continued until the present time had it not been that Mr. Olds rescued me from being talked to death by female Communists, and took me into the room he and I were in during the morning. Then he began the conversation by giving me a long dissertation on the Bible, the divinity of Christ, and the apostolic influence of St. Paul. I cut him short by asking him if they had any special rules of internal economy or home government. He replied: "We have daily evening meetings, and a weekly system of mutual criticism."

Correspondent—Will you be kind enough to describe this method of criticism, Mr. Olds?

Mr. Olds—Well, it takes the place of backbiting. Sometimes persons are criticised by the entire family; at other times by a committee of six, eight, twelve, or more. In these criticisms the most perfect sincerity exists, and whenever I am criticised about my faults I try to mend them, and I love the people who have criticised me. In determining upon any course of action we act unitedly or not at all, and therefore our business harmony is perfect, and only our private life is criticised.

Correspondent—Have you many new converts, and are they chiefly males or females?

Mr. Olds—At present we have about one hundred applications annually, equally divided between the sexes, but we reject them all. Joining the Community is like marriage, and we want the parties who do join us to know about us beforehand, be in full sympathy with us, believe in all our religious and social doctrines, pay all their debts, secure their freedom from kindred, and to count well the cost of enlisting with us for life.

Correspondent—Now, Mr. Olds, will you be kind enough to tell me what you expect to attain in the end?

Mr. Olds—Peace, tranquillity, independence, social elevation of the sexes, and we hope in time to do away with jails, prisons, and laws. The criminal laws are for the bad, not for the good. Look at the corruption that exists at Washington; isn't it true that cheating and lying and stealing are going on throughout the country, and that from the President of the United States down to the lowest man, all are corrupt. Our religion teaches us to do good only. We hope to improve the human race. By observing care, we hope to produce a race of men and women which shall be healthy, spirited, handsome and enduring. We propose beginning as the Jews did, and we will continue it as long as we find it advantageous to our doctrines for improving the races.

Southern History.

Jubal Early, President of the recently-formed Southern Historical Society, has sent to the Virginia papers a letter from Gen. Dabney H. Maury, wherein the latter says:

"Soon after the war was closed my attention was called to the fact that not only had we been subjugated to the power of the North, but the history of our revolution was being written exclusively by our conquerors, and every effort was being made by them to misrepresent us, our cause, its principles, and our conduct during the war, which was forced upon us in defence of our country. The whole power of the newspaper press, of the pulpit, magazine literature, the makers of history books, of the school teachers, and most potent of all, of the school-book makers, was combined to falsify and degrade us in the eyes of posterity. The effect of all this was plainly manifested upon the character and demeanor of our own people. We had become so familiarized with the odious names and the odious light in which we were presented, that we were losing our self-respect, and seemed ready to acquiesce in all the degradations thus prepared for us, and to be ready to transmit, without an effort at retrieval, our names to our children with all the odium a malignant, unrelenting, active, and unscrupulous enemy could throw around them. The policy of "rendering treason odious," which was announced by Andrew Johnson when he manacled our President and cast him into prison to die of slow torture, when he judicially murdered Wirz, and hanged an aged and innocent woman contrary to the evidence and without the forms of constitutional law, had reached such a practical result as must have been satisfactory to the most exacting "loyalty." We had been called "rebels" until nine-tenths of us felt we had been rebels; and it was impossible to recognize in the anxious, cowed aspects of the men of the South, whose only care seemed to be to avoid everything which could give offence or which would not be entirely pleasant to our Northern masters, the gallant spirits of the once proud Southern Confederacy, who had challenged the admiration of the world by their heroic defence of their country. All that was now left to us was to rescue the true history of that defence from oblivion and destruction, and to leave posterity to judge us and our cause by the testimony we should place before it. This and this alone is the scope and object of the Southern Historical Society. And for this I inaugurated in New Orleans, more than five years ago, the first step in a movement which now at last seems likely to produce the result we have aimed at."

Business Notices.

There is scarcely any disease in which purgative medicines are not more or less required, and much sickness and suffering might be prevented were they more generally used. No person can feel well while a costive habit of the body prevails; besides, it soon generates serious and often fatal diseases, which might have been avoided by a timely and judicious use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or Sugar-Coated, Concentrated Root and Herbal Juice, Anti-Bilious Granules—25 cents by Druggists.

Out of Health.

In this common expression is comprehended an immense amount of bodily and mental suffering. It is not necessary to be affected with positive disease in order to experience unutterable wretchedness. A person out of health is weak, languid, low spirited, incapable of much exertion, nervous, irritable, and as sensitive to every change of temperature as the mercury in a thermometer. What such a person requires is invigoration, and Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will supply it. No need of applying to a physician in such a case. The fee would be thrown away. At the nearest drug store may be had the most efficacious and healthful vegetable tonic that the world contains. Twenty-five years experience has established the fact that among all the stomachics and alteratives known to modern pharmacy this powerful restorative stands supreme, unapproached. Every bottle of Hostetter's Bitters contains more blessings than there were curses in Pandora's box.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a nervous chaos. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long, disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—(Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.)

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavins, galls, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. Thousands are published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including deformed limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSS & CO., 58 Broadway, New York.

Castoria is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in e xistence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

(OPPOSITE POST-OFFICE.)

The subscriber would respectfully announce to the citizens of Portsmouth and vicinity that on the 25th of September, 1873, he will open a school in the city of Portsmouth a CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, which shall, in point of merit, equal any similar institution in New England. None but the very best of teachers will be employed to teach the following branches: Formation and Cultivation of the Voice; Singing in the English, German and Italian languages; Harmony; Counterpoint; Imitation; Canon; Fugue and Composition; Piano-forte; Pipe Organ; Cabinet Organ, and all brass and stringed instruments. Also, the French, German and Italian languages. The payment of $8, $10 or $15—according to classification—will entitle the pupil to a course of lessons in any one of the departments, besides a card of admission to all the free advantages of the institution.

Lessons will begin on the 25th of September, and applications for examination and classification should be made as early as possible after the 15th of September to Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter II of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, residing in any school district in which a public school is annually taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, within two miles by the nearest road from his residence, shall cause such child to attend such public school for twelve weeks at least in every year, from and after the first day of September next, six weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that the physical or mental condition of such child was such as to prevent his attendance at school for the period named, or that such child was instructed in a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during such year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, or have acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non-compliance with Section 1:

FOR THE FIRST OFFENCE A FORFEIT OF $10, AND $20 FOR THE SECOND AND EVERY SUBSEQUENT OFFENCE.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake, with the iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into tumors, tubercles, etc. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucborrhea arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

Narrow Escape from Drowning.

As the Steamer Major was about leaving the wharf on an excursion trip to Gloucester on Wednesday morning, the captain was solicited to take in tow as far as the Narrows two craft, a dory and a sail-boat. He complied with the request, and the bow line of one of the boats was made fast to the steamer, and that of the other was secured to the boat in tow. While the Major was steaming out into the river, by some means the painter of the after boat got fouled with the middle thwart of the forward boat and the former was capsized in a twinkling, carrying with it its only occupant, a small boy, who sat in the stern sheets. The occupant of the other boat was also a boy, who, seeing his companion upset, plunged into the swift running tide in the wild endeavor to save him. A seaman on board the steamer doffed nearly all his clothes and jumping overboard only added another to the list of those in peril. Meantime, a sturdy fisherman pulled out from the pier, and picked up the two who were bent on saving life, and failing to find the body of the lad who was capsized, pulled alongside of the upset boat, turned it right side up and found the lad stowed away under the thwarts, as good as new! The boat had been inverted so quickly as to prevent any air from rushing out and consequently no water could come in; so that if it had been righted as suddenly as it was overturned, the youngster would not even have got a wet jacket!

Laconics.

The depositors in the Portsmouth Savings Bank, (who have not done so since August 1st) are requested to bring in their books to have the regular and extra dividends added thereto.

Our citizens will be glad to learn that Mr. Amos Pearson has made arrangements to return to active duty as a teacher of music. Mr. Pearson has now been a resident of Portsmouth for nearly twenty years, and during that time has built up a reputation for ability in his chosen profession second to no music-teacher who ever resided here. Instruction received at his hands is marked by thoroughness—whatever is learned is learned well.

James Hare, while carelessly meandering around on a dump car which was being hauled over the Eastern railroad a day or two since, was suddenly precipitated head foremost into a gravel pit alongside the track. The cause of this sudden summersault was the failure of some one to secure the car after having been emptied of its load. It cost Mr. Hare about two dollars for the services of a doctor to extract the rocks and gravel from his face and head.

A meeting of citizens interested in the improvement of Richards Avenue was held Tuesday evening according to adjournment. Engineer Johnson presented a drawing of the proposed improvement in accordance with the suggestion of Mr. Elwyn. It was unanimously voted to accept it. A committee consisting of Mayor Marvin, Alderman Wilson and H. F. Wendell, was appointed to confer with Col. Joshua W. Pierce and ascertain upon what terms the same improvement can be extended through land owned by him on the same side of the avenue. Said committee to report tomorrow evening.

The following route of procession will be observed on the reception of the Newburyport Odd Fellows: From Depot Avenue, down Vaughan, Congress and Daniel streets, through Chapel, down State to Water; thence by Water, Pleasant and Court to Haymarket Square, and down State to the ward room, where a collation will be spread. After the repast has received due attention, the procession will re-form, and march by way of Pleasant, Congress, Islington, Cabot, State and Middle streets, to Wibird's Hill, where carriages will be in readiness to convey the party to the Farragut House. The reception committee desire that citizens along the route will decorate their dwellings and stores.

Danbury Newslings.

With the display now required for a first-class funeral, people are beginning to understand what are the terrors of death.

The cider apple is on the move, making diseased bodies, desolate hearts, wretched homes, and cucumber pickles.

There will be plenty of butternuts and chestnuts this fall. Mothers are hiding their extra pillow cases, and the agricultural members of the community are putting their guns in order.

Men whose shirts are made at home are rejoiced that the hot term is almost over. A woman never attempts to fit a shirt to her husband only on a hot day, and when to make a move almost stifles him.

The churches were well filled, Sunday. The shape is an improvement, but the trimming is not wholly satisfactory. They set a little further back on the head than the summer styles, we think.

A horse ran away on Liberty street, on Saturday afternoon, and a man on the side, walk, with wonderful presence of mind, threw his hat at the animal, screamed fire, and immediately jumped over a fence and disappeared in a cellar-way.

A chap who has owed us seven dollars for almost as many years, came in yesterday to consult our taste in the matter of a present to his oldest son. He was quite anxious to know if a row boat would be as suitable as a harp with a gilt eagle on top.

A Division-street man got up before dawn, Sunday morning, to see the sun rise, and was shot at by the exasperated owner of a melon patch, next door. In May last he made a similar effort and was bitten on the heel by a strange dog. He thinks of hiring a boy to do the early rising for his family.

An absent-minded smoker named Yancy, undertook to whisper something of importance in the ear of old Mr. Reynolds, Saturday, but in his absent-mindedness neglected to remove his cigar, the fire end of which was driven right into the old gentleman's ear. Mr. Reynolds jumped straight up in the air about six feet, and on coming down split Yancy's nose by a well-directed blow. Yancy picked himself up, and started for home, declaring in a rage that he'd be hanged before he'd tell old Reynolds what he was going to.

This is the season of preparation for fairs. The honest yeomen are picking out the best grain from several acres to exhibit as the average yield. The little girl, twelve years old, who shows such clear, handsome bread, has been to see her grandmother about having it made, and the advantages of agriculture are further illustrated by impossible angels fondling improbable poodles in lisle thread and canvas. Everybody should take a personal interest in these farm gatherings, and if he has no horse of his own, should draw his balance from the bank and unhesitatingly plank it on the races.

How to keep boys from running to evil, and wasting talents, opportunities, and health in dissipation, is a subject that is at present receiving considerable attention in the public prints, and many remedies are suggested. One of the best we clip from an agricultural paper. We don't know how it may strike others, but it seems to us that the plan suggested by our agricultural friend will prove effectual. We do not sympathize with his language exactly, but we know not how much he may have suffered from the actions of wayward sons. He says:—"To keep Damsons—Put them into stone jars; set the jars up to their necks in a kettle of cold water and boil them half an hour; then cork up tightly."

How Much Will Keep a Horse.

A horse weighing from ten to twelve hundred pounds will eat about six tons of hay, or its equivalent, in a year. And we suppose the real point to get at is, whether one can keep his horses cheaper on some other product than hay. This is an exceedingly difficult question to answer, it depends so much on circumstances. We shall not attempt to answer it fully at this time, but will merely say, that, in our opinion, three and a half tons of corn stalks and two and a half tons of corn would keep a horse a year in fully as good condition as six tons of good hay.

We may estimate, also, that it will take three and a half tons of oat straw, and two and a half tons of oats, to keep a horse a year. A bushel of oats weighs thirty-two pounds; so that it will take over one hundred and fifty-five bushels and three and a half tons of straw to keep a horse a year. It would take about two acres of good land to produce this amount.

—Over the shop door of a pork butcher in a village in the eastern counties of England may be seen a signboard representing a man in a black coat, brandishing a hatchet, with the inscription—"John Smith kills pigs like his father."

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find the exaggerated qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—The Portland Transcript says that the railroad men of Maine have kept their temper pretty well in the midst of camp-meeting crowds. The one conductor who swore at the pious throng that jostled him reminds the Transcript of the sexton of one of the Portland churches, who was overworked by the extra evening meetings of a revival season; he overheard him swearing to himself that "he'd be ——— if he would keep his place another year at his present salary, and run the risk of a revival?"

—The St. Albans Messenger remarks, "There is a good little boy in St. Albans who did it with his little hatchet in the following manner: He requested his big brother to put his toe upon the chair, that he might cut it off. His big brother laughingly complied with the request, when this remarkable little rascal deliberately chopped it off. He will evidently die young."

—The Kingstom (N.Y.) Journal recently had an old subscriber call and pay a subscription that had been running thirty-one years. He said as he "might not be around again right away," he would pay for ten years ahead. This he did, together with a subscription of twelve years for his mother. He left $94 with the astonished newspaper proprietor. He had long been a non est man, and will probably continue so for another decade, at least.

—An innocent young man in Des Moines was asked by Rev. Mr. Hammond, the revivalist, if he was laboring for the good of his soul. "No," was the reply, "I work for Billy Moore."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE. SIX BOTTLES, $5.

Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company.
COAL.
HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:
HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.
In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at Philadelphia depots, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no mines will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.
We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also
LEHIGH, WILKESBARRE, PITTSTON
And other first class Coal. For sale by the Cargo, Car-load or at retail from our wharf.

Lectures, Lecturers and Prices.

The following will be of interest to lecture committees who are making up their programmes for the coming season:

Miss Susan B. Anthony tells about "My Trial" for $50 to $100. Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake combines "The Wife, Mother, and Citizen" for from $25 to $50. Henry Ward Beecher combines "Manhood and Money" on liberal terms, while R. Laird Collier tells what he knows "On the Joining of hands; Rings, Fools, &c.," for $75. E. H. Chapin spends an hour on "Columbus" for $150, while Col. R. H. Conwell charges only $50 for making "A Plea for Lawyers. R. J. De Cordova tells all he knows about "Our First Baby" for $125.

"The Morning Dawns" on Mrs. Jane O. DeForest, at the low price of $50 to $100; and that brilliant Paul B. Du Chaillu will for $150 give, with a matinee, his Gorilla Chimpanzee, Gibbon, and Ourang-Outang." Mary F. Eastman will "Lend a hand at anything she can get; and Mrs. Lillian Edgarton, for $150, will let you know that "Woman is Coming," at which price she ought not to come too often. Edward Eggleston will "Talk" for $100, while Kate Field goes up "Among the Adirondacks" for $150. The "Fat Contributor" asks you "What will you Take?" for $75; and Rev. H. M. Gallaher will "Put Money in thy Purse" for $100. W. Gladden will allow you to "Help Yourselves" for anything he can get; while Grace Greenwood goes "Indoors" for $100. R. J. Griffith's, LL. D., of England, goes "Between Two Loves" for $25; very cheap. Matilda Gage Joslyn will decide "The United States on Trial, not Susan B. Anthony," for any sum obtainable; while Bret Harte tells about "Some Bad People" for $250; they must be frightful examples. John Hay lets "Day Break in Spain" for $100; and the Rev. George H. Hepworth "Humbugs" his audience for $100. May Hamilton would be glad to let a congregation enjoy "Social Life in Washington" very cheap; while the irresistible Judson Kilpatrick gets on "The American Stump" for little or nothing. Dr. Paul Hoffman goes "Drifting About," if anybody wants him on any terms. Eli Perkins for $50 to $100, according to what article the old gentleman is asked to advance on. Prof. S. K. Murdoch will for $75 discuss that interesting question to a popular audience, "Rise and Progress of the Order of Knights Templar;" and Prof. W. H. Niles "Rambles Among the High Alps" at $100 an hour; and all about "The Coming Man" will be told by Dr. Samuel Osgood for $100. Mrs. E. A. Pollard combines a scientific discussion of "Bubbles and Show Windows, or Fashionable Life in Washington;" while Prof. J. H. Pepper, of England, will for $300 an hour "Handle Red-Hot Metals," or "Introduce a Ghost;" and for $200 Wendell Phillips will draw "Some Inferences from Froude," and for $100 Mrs. Zena Fay Pierce undertakes "The Regeneration of the Democratic Party," an enterprise which to us looks hopeless. Matthew Hale Smith, for $75, discourses on that new, thrilling, and interesting history of "Our New Minister at Hardscrabble." John G. Saxe gets a "Love" for $125, and Elizabeth Cady Stanton hugs "The Coming Girl" for from $85 to $100, according to size. For $100 Colonel Homer B. Sprague gives a beautiful philosophical disquisition on "When I was in Jail," and the Hon. Carl Schurz for $200 is ready to talk on anything. Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe reads her own books for $125 an hour. Mrs. Minnie Swayze has an attack of "Free Hate" for $60, and Rev. T. De Witt Talmage charges $200 for getting on the "Rocks upon which People Split"—high, but they must be dangerous. Ben F. Taylor has the presumption to insist on getting $100 for asking the conundrum, "What Made Him Do It?" and Theodore Tilton handles the "American Woman" for $100. E. D. Taylor says that "Just for Fun" he will charge $50, and Miss Virginia Vaughn reads "The Poetry of the Future" for the same amount, (how she obtained it is not stated.) For $125 Professor E. L. Youmans will have "The Correlation of Forces," and Emma Webb closes the list with $50 worth of "Petrarch and Laura."

Youthful Depravity.

The Paris correspondent of the London Daily News, gives an account of a trial of a band of youthful brigands, in Paris on the 27th of August. They had accepted a villain named Gelignetr for their leader.

They numbered in all, nine. The majority of the gang are under sixteen. One is a girl of dissolute life, another is a clerk in the Ministry of Finance, and a cousin of Madame Earnest Picard, the ex-Ambassadress at the Court of Leopold II. The history of Gelignetr and his associates is stamped upon him. All of them, except David, are withered and stunted with indulgence in precocious vices. Three of them are reduced to a state of semi-idiocy. Craft, violence, sensuality and stupidity are all graven in the lines of a face which might rest upon the shoulders of an old hag.

The leader is of good family, and has a fair education; but has led a wild and vicious life, leading others to become as bad as himself. Taken all in all the prisoners showed plainly enough to what a life of dissipation and crime can reduce any man or woman, no matter of how noble birth.

Wayside Pencilings.

NORTH WOODSTOCK, Sept. 17.

We left the Profile early yesterday morning and had a very enjoyable day at the Pool and Flume. The extent of our wanderings during the day was eighteen miles. The stay at the Flume was so protracted that darkness overtook us four miles short of our destination. But we found comfortable quarters at the boarding house of Mr. William M. Dearborn, whose excellent housewife did every thing to make our stay pleasant.

The party was photographed at the Flume and present a decidedly outre appearance. Prof. Merrill, at the Pool, discoursed in his usual interesting manner on the theory of a world in the centre of the earth, where Sir John Franklin may have entered via the North Pole. Various were the suggestions offered by the "boys," but the Professor could not be muddled.

We tramp to Plymouth to-day, 20 miles.

Farming Memoranda.

As this is the season for Agricultural Fairs and shows of fruits, vegetables and the usual products of the farm, it perhaps will be interesting to those of our readers who are so engrossed in their respective employments that they have not had the opportunity to inform themselves, to scan a recapitulation of the present condition of the farmer's store.

The leading articles of produce hereabouts may be summed up in the following list: Corn, hay, potatoes, roots of various kinds, apples, pears, squashes, melons, cucumbers and cabbages. There are other products almost without number, but these will suffice for an ordinary inspection. The first on our list is corn, than which there is no article of consumption more indispensable. A less than average crop is reported, notwithstanding it promised well in the earlier part of the season; the cold weather of the last month stinting it and causing the ears to remain unfilled, and "smutty"—as it is termed.

The yield of hay is good, and unusually well harvested, as the weather during the haying season was favorable, and most of the grass was cut early; as farmers say—while in the milk. The "fall shack," upon which so much depends for a crop on the year following, is excellent, although not quite up to that of last year. A large quantity of second crop is being secured, and yet the grass springs up almost as soon as the machine has left the field.

Potatoes are yielding well and are of superior quality; although signs of rot are frequent and late planted potatoes we fear must suffer severely from this scourge. Prices of these valuable articles of consumption rule high, which, at this season, is indicative of scarcity. There were many potatoes planted last spring, we think, more than usual, which fact leads us to believe that in spite of the rot, there will be enough to supply the markets at a reasonable price.

The roots (embracing carrots, turnips, beets, mangel wurtzels, ruta bagas, etc.,) are doing finely everywhere, and the yield will be abundant. The value of many of these for their milk-producing qualities cannot be over estimated.

The apple crop is almost an entire failure. There are some fall apples, but winter apples are very scarce, and those that grow are gnarly and unmarketable.

Pears of all kinds flood the market. The prices are lower than usual, although our dealers are keeping the figures up pretty well. The most delicate flavored pear that grows—the Bartlett — especially abounds this year. The best of these bring but three dollars per bushel, and dealers are holding them at fifty cents per dozen; i. e. for the first quality!

Squashes have failed to come to time in this immediate vicinity, and we are obliged to depend almost entirely on Boston and distant markets for a supply of this valuable product. It is said that the vines thrive and grow well during the first part of the season, but suddenly they wilt and die through the agency of a mischievous maggot worm that burrows in the root and destroys it.

Melons, both musk and water, are plentiful, of good quality, and cheap.

Cucumbers abound, and if those who are fond of pickles fail to lay in a good supply it will not be for the lack of the article.

Cabbages are also plenty and are growing large enough to satisfy the wants of a thorough bred Hibernian.

Thus we see in running over a few of the farm products that while the farmer will be zealously recommended by the several Governors in their Thanksgiving proclamations to "feel profoundly grateful for the plenitude of the harvest," still, the labor they are required to bestow for the receipts is of so arduous a nature as to adulterate their gratitude, and sometimes change it to complaint. "Farmers will grumble" is a trite saying, but a little reflection upon the risk of reaping a paying crop against the amount of slavish work expended, will tend to modify our surprise, and make us admire the pursuit of agriculture through the song of some sentimental poet or through some other mirror that will as effectually disguise it rather than through the medium of the "shovel and the hoe."

State Items.

The New Hampshire General Association of Congregational churches is in session at Laconia.

Joseph N. Lane, of Salisbury, Mass. who married a young lady of Exeter some months ago, has been arrested on a charge of having committed bigamy and bound over to answer for the offence. Lane's wife was divorced from him a year or more ago, in Massachusetts, but he was not divorced from her; that is, Mrs. Lane ceased to be Mr. Lane's wife, and could marry again, but Mr. Lane did not cease to be Mrs. Lane's husband, and for him to marry again was to commit double-barrelled matrimony, which the law does not approve. Verily, the common sense in that scrap of Massachusetts law is too carefully concealed to be ferreted out by the common mind.

The balloon fizzle is the cause of over five columns of cards, testimonials and explanatory statements in the Graphic of Wednesday, from the publishers relative to the responsibility of the failure of the great European-balloon-trip humbug. It would appear that Professor Wise is mainly to blame for the collapse of the enterprise—if not the balloon—and the Graphic managers produce evidence enough to place the distinguished aeronant in rather an unenviable light before the public. From what we can gather of the statements of those immediately concerned, it looks as though each party labored hard and shrewdly to make more than the other out of the thing, and in so doing worked against each other. Confidence gave place to jealousy, the greatest humbug since Barnum's Joice Heth was exposed, and we are all ready for another.

Base ball: Boston 20, Atlantic 4.

The trial of the American prisoners at Fort Garry has resulted in light sentences—twenty-four hours' imprisonment—on Hoy, Keegan and Bentley, who plead guilty. Fletcher plead not guilty, and his case was continued. Gordon is charged with larceny and forgery, and is closely confined.

A gang of counterfeiters of three and five cent pieces were discovered at work and arrested at New York Tuesday night.

James Harkins fatally shot his wife at Portland, Me., Tuesday.

The seventh annual reunion of the army of the Cumberland was held Wednesday at Pittsburgh, Pa. Generals Sherman and Sheridan and Governor Hartranft of Pennsylvania were present.

Chicago was visited with another serious fire on Wednesday destroying sixty-four dwelling houses and rendering scores of families homeless. The loss is set at $300,000.

The assertion of a Detroit reporter that the has shaken hands during the last year with hirteen different Buffalo Bills induces Mr. Wm. F. Cody to write a newspaper card denouncing the other twelve frauds. Mr. Cody's card ends in the heroics as follows: "When I die it will be in maintaining honor —that which constitutes the safeguard of society, whether it apply to man or to woman." How sad it would be, now, if Cody should die of the mumps.

Ex-Gov. Wise publishes a card in which he declares his intention to support the republican ticket in Virginia. He considers that the material interests of his State depend upon the success of the republican party and states that he is anxious to do anything to resuscitate Virginia.

A Railroad War.

On Tuesday evening last, a war commenced between the Eastern and B. & M. railroads which but for the wise conclusion of the E. R. R. officials to refer the matter to the courts for settlement, might have proved serious. The Boston and Maine Company claim that they not only own Smiths' wharf but also the switch that connects the wharf tracks with the main tracks, and that as Mr. Smith's title was good for the flats on which the Grand Trunk and Eastern Railroad built Commercial street, the title has never been vitiated by the building of the street or by the grant of the city to the latter roads. The city and railroads only had granted to them by Mr. Smith's deed the right of way and right to fill the flats with earth.

Accordingly Roadmaster Smith of the Boston and Maine, and a force of track-layers cut the rails, tore up the track and put in their frog. About four o'clock on Wednesday morning a force of men belonging to the Eastern road proceeded to the spot where the frog had been put in and tore it up. At nine o'clock the Eastern railroad had run a locomotive over the spot, and all the morning had an engine lying over the place. At one o'clock, when the Grand Trunk were to take possession of the road, Superintendent Furber of the Boston and Maine gave his men orders to take the engine out of the way. The Eastern engineer made some resistance but soon succumbed. The Eastern train came up but could not pass for an hour. The Eastern will now let it remain and will contest the matter in the courts.

Studies and Sport.

The London Times says: "Sports may be made in many ways a valuable training. They may teach a boy moderation and self-command, as well as courage and a love of fair play and of active exertion. And yet, with the strongest sympathy for all this, we must repeat the opinion that things have been allowed to go too far. The course followed has been so easy that it has, not unnaturally, been followed a little to excess. There need be no opposition made between studies and sports. The two can go on very well together; they will even aid one another, if both are properly pursued. But this will involve the surrender of much that is now sought for. We must give up the aim after a professional standard of merit; we must even esteem it a degrading thing to reach it. Boys must be taught that the principal use of games is as a relaxation in the interest of after-study; that both study and sport are of value only for the effect they have on mind and character, and for the degree in which they fit a man for after-life; and that in all this study is of an importance quite infinitely greater than sport. The remedy against the present state of things can only be gradual. A sounder public opinion will show itself in altered tone among both boys and masters. Boys as a body will never love books; but they will always honor those distinctions which they see are honored by their parents and by the world. Sports may be trusted to flourish without much encouragement; but studies need all the fostering care which can be employed, and even then illness and stupidity will often be too strong for all the efforts of the schoolmaster. It is not much to ask that he at least should be faithful to his trust; and that, in any controversy of studies and sports, he should stand out as the uncompromising upholder of studies."

The Ashantee at Home.

Mr. Winwood Reade in his second letter to the Pall Mall Gazette has the following:

"The King is allowed to have 3,333 wives, but not to exceed that number. Some of these ladies are merely slaves, who work in the royal plantation and furnish the Court with cassada and plantains; others reside in rooms luxuriously furnished, guarded by eunuchs, enjoying the delights of tobacco and palm wine in true Oriental style. Intrigue with a royal wife is punished by death; the executioners torture the offender from sunrise to sunset, leading him about the town and performing fantasias upon his body with knives before the houses of all noted chieftains or strangers of distinction. Finally, they lead him to the presence of the King, and literally cut him to pieces before the throne. This horrible method of execution is only employed for the above mentioned offence and for the crime of murder. It is a curious custom in Ashantee that if the condemned man cries out a certain word or phrase he cannot be killed, it gives him the right of sanctuary; the executioners, therefore, steal upon their victims from behind, and begin proceedings by passing a dagger through both cheeks, whreby the man is effectively gagged.

When the King dies, a number of lords-in-waiting kill themselves to serve as his escort to the Shadowy Land. These persons are called okras, or 'souls' and wear a peculiar gold badge which indicates their office. At that time also a saturnalia of blood is celebrated; hundreds of victims are sacrificed, and the young men of the royal house run about the town shooting whom they please—even the highest personages of the land. Thus the death of the King is a national misfortune, and that, perhaps, gives the clue to the origin of these extraordinary customs.

The Ashantees believe in a life after death, as we believe in the existence of lands beyond the sea. Their Hades or Sheol is situated underground; there this life is continued, and becomes eternal. The king resumes his royalty, and the slave remains a slave. Death therefore, for them is only a migration, and they depart from life with equanimity. A woman slave, who was one of those condemned to die, was stripped according to custom, and knocked on the head. Being only stunned by the blow, she recovered her senses, and saw herself surrounded by dead bodies. She ran into the town; found the nobles sitting in council, told them she had been to the land of the dead, and that she had been sent back because she had no clothes. They must dress her finely and kill her over again, which accordingly was done. This happened in a small kingdom adjoining Ashantee, the laws and customs of which are the same.

One noble who had committed some crime offered a large ransom for his life, and finally his weight in gold. But the King cut off his head and also took possession of his gold, which just amounted in weight to that of the corpse. I have myself seen a coast native of no great importance with a thousand pounds' worth of gold upon him; and most of that gold came from the mines of Ashantee.

Finally, as to war. The Ashantee army is the nation. When the order for the march is given, all able-bodied men join their respective companies and leave the town, carrying with them a kind of meal as food. The women then parade the streets, and, if they detect a man skulking behind, beat him unmercifully. In battle the generals occupy the rear, and cut down all those who retreat. If the battle is lost, they kill themselves. One suicide of this kind I witnessed on the Volta. A battle took place between our allies and some allies of the Ashantees. The latter were defeated, and the Ashantee chief, who was present, threw the insignia of his rank into the river, and then, sitting on a powder barrel, blew himself into the air.

How to Preserve Pears.

Pears are unusually plenty this year. Below we give one of the modes of preserving them:

Take pears not quite ripe, and peel off the skins. Prepare a syrup with three-quarters of a pound of sugar to each pound of fruit. Melt it and boil for half an hour, removing all the scum which rises. Put in the pears and let them boil for ten minutes, or just long enough to soften them a little; then take out and cover tightly with paper wet in whisky or alcohol, and cover with another paper placed over the mouth of the jar.

An Example for Young Men,

We clip the following concerning Hon. John Eaton, Jr., our Commissioner of Education, from the Washington correspondence of a Western journal:

"In the region of Sutton, New Hampshire, his native place, was a young man who was in the midst of a promising career as a high school teacher, and the first school young Eaton was privileged to attend, outside his own district, was the high school taught at Bradford, by this teacher. The school boys in the country had to work then, and during the first term when not engaged in school duties, Eaton and his chum dug an aqueduct ditch three feet deep and nearly a quarter of a mile in length, as part payment for their board. This teacher continued his profession in the towns neighboring. Young Eaton went on with his education, passing from it to the duties and honors of teacher, principal, superintendent of a city's schools, colonel in the army, State superintendent of Instruction, and at length to the head of the National Bureau of Education. Meanwhile, in another department, (the Postal) was found his first esteemed high school teacher, serving as a subordinate clerk. Recently the latter has returned to New Hampshire to die a farmer, but Gen. Eaton is only midway up the ascent before him, his name already familiar to the educators of this and other countries."

Business Notices.

There is scarcely any disease in which purgative medicines are not more or less required, and much sickness and suffering might be prevented were they more generally used. No person can feel well while a costive habit of the body prevails; besides, it soon generates serious and often fatal diseases, which might have been avoided by a timely and judicious use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or Sugar-Coated, Concentrated Root and Herbal Juice, Anti-Bilious Granules—25 cents by Druggists.

Out of Health.

In this common expression is comprehended an immense amount of bodily and mental suffering. It is not necessary to be affected with positive disease in order to experience unutterable wretchedness. A person out of health is weak, languid, low spirited, incapable of much exertion, nervous, irritable, and as sensitive to every change of temperature as the mercury in a thermometer. What such a person requires is invigorating, and Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will supply it. No need of applying to a physician in such a case. The fee would be thrown away. At the nearest drug store may be had the most efficient and healthful vegetable tonic that the world contains. Twenty-five years' experience has established the fact that among all the stomachics and alteratives known to modern pharmacy this powerful restorative stands supreme, unapproached. Every bottle of Hostetter's Bitters contains more blessings than there were curses in Pandora's box.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangements of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing painreliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic-rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a pamphlet containing testimonials, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter II of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, residing in any school district in which a public school is annually taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, within two miles by the nearest road from his residence, shall cause such child to attend such public school for twelve weeks at least in every year, from and after the first day of September next, six weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or the board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that the physical or mental condition of such child was such as to prevent his attendance at school for the period required, or that such child was instructed in a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during such year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, or having acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non-compliance with Section 1:

FOR THE FIRST OFFENCE A FORFEIT OF $10, AND $20 FOR THE SECOND AND EVERY SUBSEQUENT OFFENCE.

DEPOSITS, $2,081,363.47.

William Simes, President. J. F. Shores, Treas.

THE Treasurer hereby gives notice to the Depositors:—

1st, That in conformity with the law of the State passed June, 1872, this Bank will declare an EXTRA DIVIDEND on the 1st of July 1875, and every TWO years thereafter, on all sums that shall have been in the bank six months or longer.

2d, That these Extra dividends will be based on the interest which may have accrued on the DEPOSITS of each depositor during the two preceding years: thus giving to each the FULL SHARE of all the net earnings of the bank.

3d, That the method heretofore followed of extra dividends every five years will of course be discontinued.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they diseased and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucchorrhœa Arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

More About Wagner.

The more we hear about the murderer Wagner, the more puzzled we are to understand what manner of man he is. His recent attempt to escape from the jail at Alfred and his conduct at his recapture stamped him as either insane or idiotic. A conversation with the man, however, will soon convince one that neither of these adjectives will apply to him, although he is not brilliant. Again he figures before the public as follows: On Friday night of last week a hole was discovered in the wall that separates the cell in which Wagner is confined from that of a prisoner named John Curtis. This aperture was evidently made by both Curtis and Wagner, and when large enough to admit the body of the latter he crawled through and went to work on the lock of the door of Curtis' cell and soon had the bolt sprung back. This occurred about midnight, Wagner stepping into the corridor concluded he would call upon his companions in confinement and accordingly went to a cell occupied by three women, picked the lock of the door and walked in. As he passed out of this cell and closed the door, he remarked to the women that Bennett, the Deputy Jailor, would have some difficulty in opening it as he had injured the lock. It is alleged that Bennett's wife occasionally enters the Jail on business. About six o'clock in the morning and that it was Wagner's intention to pass out if she entered on that Saturday morning. Accordingly Wagner entered his own cell and had the door nearly closed, watching and waiting for the hour which would bring some one into the jail. It so happened that Bennett himself entered and Wagner immediately closed the cell door which fastened by a spring. What followed thereafter is thus given by an occupant of the Jail. "When Bennett reached the cell where the woman were confined, they refused some favor of him which required the opening of their cell door, when he inserted his key for this purpose, but finding the lock had been tampered with, remarked in substance "this is some of Jim Avery's work." The women denied this and then Bennett guessed again. "It's Curtis then." This was also denied, and they refused to tell who had done the mischief.

Later in the day one of the women was taken out into the jailor's quarters and after some little time told who had visited them. Bennett's astonishment may be imagined when he heard that the noted prisoner Wagner had walked out of his cell and been treading the corridor of the jail. Of course Bennett was now anxious to take a look at Wagner and assure himself that his prisoner was still in jail and also led to the discovery of the mode of exit from the cell. It was finally concluded to separate Wagner and Curtis.

Laconics.

Mrs. Partington was in town on Wednesday.

It is said there are 120 places in this city where liquor can be purchased.

The depositors in the Portsmouth Savings Bank, (who have not done so since August 1st) are requested to bring in their books to have the regular and extra dividends added thereto.

Lower harbor was filled on Thursday with fishing craft, about 150 sail having been driven in by stress of weather. They complain of great scarcity of mackerel the past week, only one or two vessels of the fleet having met with good success.

The storekeepers in Market street complain of the clouds of dust that rolled up from that newly paved thoroughfare on Thursday and sigh for a street sprinkler. At the present date of writing it looks as though Nature might do something for them in the matter of sprinkling.

It will be seen by an advertisement in another column that the Flora Myers Dramatic Company are to give two entertainments at the Temple on Monday and Tuesday evenings of next week. We notice that they are highly spoken of by the press in the different localities where they have been playing.

The hearing of the petitioners for the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors was had before the Board of Aldermen at their regular session last evening. After a full hearing, it was voted to refer the matter to the voters for decision at a town meeting io be held early next week.

There are to be no less than nine new stores ready to be leased within a few weeks. This is cheering; as store rents are very high, at present, and the fact alluded to must tend to reduce them. How in the name of everything that is plausible, can so many storekeepers as there are in Portsmouth get a living from their business, is beyond our comprehension.

The Newburyport Odd Fellows are expected this morning at 10 o'clock, when they will be received by Mt. Sinai Encampment of this city, marched about town (we have already published the route) after which a collation will be served at the ward room on State Street. After the repast has received due attention, the procession will re-form, and march to Wibird's Hill, where carriages will be in readiness to convey the party to the Farragut House.

If the owners of the land on the corner of Pleasant and Washington streets would cut the weeds and thistles growing there in such rankness as to remind one of a deserted pigyard, it would greatly improve the lot and also assist the little boys in finding their lost arrows and stray balls. We do not ask that the proprietors aforesaid shall grade up the lot alluded to and give it a neat and tidy appearance; we simply ask them to cut down the unsightly weeds.

The Times says: The widow of the late Hon. Abner Greenleaf, the first Mayor of this city, is thought to be fatally ill at the residence of one of her sons, G. F. Greenleaf, Esq., in this city. Her age is eighty-four years. She was a daughter of Matthew Bell, of New Castle, and one of a large family of sisters, of whom one was the mother of the late General Andrews of Salem. Mrs. Greenleaf was a relative of Sir William Pepperrell, and has long worn one of the mourning rings distributed at his funeral to her parents.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuble is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

Daily Chronicle.

MISS BROWN'S SUMMER TRIP.

It was early morning, but the air was already hot and sultry when Mary Brown returned from the depot, where she had said "good-by" to her friends, the C.'s, who were to spend the summer in Switzerland. She found on her table a letter from her cousin Belle, describing the delights of Newport,—charming hops—romantic drives—exciting flirtations. Mary was too old and too sensible to care for hops and flirtations, but she longed for the sea and a change of scene, and the gay letter aroused a discontented feeling which clung to her all day. The burning summer heat was a thorn in the flesh to her, and in spite of herself, her spirit put out the thorns of a sharp tongue and an irritable temper. She found her daily duties irksome and distasteful; her visitors stupid and commonplace; and, in the hours which she usually gave to French and German, she reflected upon the narrowness of woman's sphere and the poverty of her individual lot. But in the evening, when she sat on the piazza at her father's feet and felt the beauty of lake and mountain which had been around her all day, she blushed with shame at the sound of her mother's voice, saying, "John, I think our eldest needs a change; we must send her to the sea-shore."

"I'm afraid it can't be done," said Dr. Brown with a puzzled air. "We can't afford to take her, and I suppose it isn't just the thing for a young woman to go alone to such places."

But the wise mother smoothed away all difficulties, wrote to her friends, the Ayreses, who were spending the summer in a farm-house at Hampton, to engage a room for Miss Mary Brown, and received full and explicit directions for the journey. Mary, who was naturally timid, had been trained to self-reliance; so she laughed at what she called "mother's red-tape preliminaries," boasted that she had travelled alone to New York and Boston, and declared that it was quite impossible that she should have any trouble. But she felt a pang of self-reproach when her mother kissed her "good-by," for she knew that the dear woman who planned her pleasure had had no rest or change herself for twenty years.

"Good-by," shouted brother Tom. "Perhaps you'll have an adventure and meet your affinity."

"Don't put such notions into the girl's head," remarked Mrs. Brown with severity, forgetting that her girl was a woman of 30.

"Let her take this essay of Darwin's along," said the doctor, whose hobby was sound reading. "If she tries to understand his theory of natural selection she'll forget all about the affinity."

"I've packed your lunch in this little box, which you can throw away," said her provident sister. "You are so careless you would be sure to lose a basket."

And thus provided with Darwin and dinner; powerful defenses against sentiment and starvation, Miss Brown started on her summer trip. Short, plump and fair, Miss Brown's personal appearance was not at all remarkable; except for an extremely youthful air which had always been a source of great annoyance to her in travelling. A woman with views, she looked with disfavor on the boyish gallantry and paternal attentions to which her unfortunate appearance exposed her, and had, in self-defense, adopted what she called her travelling-dress manner, a style of behavior more suggestive of a deaf mute than a vivacious woman.

Assuming an intellectual expression for the benefit of her fellow-travellers, she took up Darwin with dutiful devotion; but she soon found the "Descent of Man" too much for her and took a survey of the humanity around her. Not a very promising company—stolid business men, care-worn, narrow-faced women, and only one original, an aggressive little western school-mistress Mary saw only four fresh, attractive faces: the school-mistress's pretty cousin, a man with a sailor air, and two charming little school-girls. The younger of these, a lovely child, whose broad, benevolent brow was shaded by a cloud of sunny hair, had, much to the relief of the company, adopted a poor little waif of a baby whose mother had been suddenly taken ill, and made such a bright, untiring little nurse that there was a general murmur of dismay, when she rose to go, saying simply, as she offered her charge to the school-mistress, "You'll take your turn, now, ma'am."

That lady received the infant with the awkwardness of a young minister, head erect and elbows stiff; held it at arm's length a moment, and then with an expression which said: "Where there's a will, there's a way," and a gesture intended to be maternal, she flattened its nose against the buttons of her dress. A howl from the baby, a snicker from the rude boys behind her, and the school-mistress's face grew very hot and red, when her pretty cousin came to her assistance. Her sure, steady clasp and gentle, steady touch told baby that he had found a new haven of rest, and he nestled within the encircling arms with a quiet sob of satisfaction. The big sailor leaned over with an admiring glance.

"Well, now, he's quite contented with you, ain't he? No wonder; I'd be contented if I was in his place!"

Miss Brown was a woman of refined sensibilities, and she shuddered inwardly at this broad compliment; but the country girl, bending over the baby, said demurely, "I'm used to children, sir," and the honest fellow fell back into his place. Their acquaintance would have gone no further had not baby, at this juncture, taken upon himself to deny the soft impeachment that he was content with a pretty girl, and began to cry most lustily. Nothing could pacify him. The school-mistress smiled to herself and thought, "I'm not so unlike other women after all." The pale mother turned an uneasy glance from the seat where she lay, and the self-instituted baby-tender blushed and seemed ready to cry. The sailor seemed almost as troubled as she, when a happy thought struck him, and, after fumbling in his valise, he said hesitatingly: "I beg pardon, Miss, but couldn't something be done with an orange?" and dropped one on her lap.

That knowing baby went for it then and there. Crowing, he seized it and kept the round, golden ball going in a game of toss-up and roll-away, until at last, sucking its delightful sweetness he fell asleep.

Then the sailor rose to explain how it was one of a dozen he was taking to his sister's children in Salem.

"Why," said the girl, "I live in Salem." And then it came out that she knew his sister and her children, and he knew her brother, and they fell to talking like old friends; and when Miss Brown left them, the two, with an orange apiece, and that blessed baby between them, looked as happy as if it were Fourth of July, and they a-celebrating. She lost sight of them in the change of cars, and in her new place found nothing so interesting. At 12 o'clock, being a person of regular habits, she ate her lunch. Like all travellers' food it tasted stale and smoky, and she thought, as she threw the box away, "I'm glad I've no more eating to do until I reach Hampton." Then she took out her letter from the Ayreses and read its explicit directions for her journey. "Have your baggage checked for Portsmouth," it said, "and there take the train for Hampton."

Thus fortified against mistakes, she made all changes with an easy mind, and towards the end of the day, sat calmly reading Darwin, when a new conductor passed through the car.

"Where are you going, ma'am?" said he.

"To Portsmouth and then to Hampton."

"The train from Portsmouth doesn't stop at Hampton. You must get off at Greenland and take the stage."

"But these were my friends' directions."

"Your friends don't know anything about it. If you want to stay at Portsmouth all night, why, go there."

All night at Portsmouth and the next day Sunday! This decided our lone woman, and when the gruff fellow made his rounds again and said, "Will you get out at Greenland, ma'am?" she assented.

"Greenland," he shouted. Out got the passengers for Rye. Out went Miss Brown's trunk and she found herself face to face with the stage-driver.

"I want to go to Hampton."

"Whew!" he whistled as the train steamed away. "You ought to have got off at New Market."

"I did as the conductor told me," she said in all the dignity of conscious rectitude, and then, plaintively, "What am I to do?"

"Wa-al, it's too bad," said the man in his emphatic twang. "The fact is, there ain't but one accommodating man in Greenland, but I'll send him down for you," and off he drove, leaving our heroine to wait for this rara avis of the region. The Greenland of the frigid zone, she thought, could not look more inhospitable. Not a house in sight, and from the dreary platform opened the dreariest of waiting-rooms, with no furniture but a hard sofa and a clock. It was 6 by the clock when she sat down to wait for the Accommodating Man. In half an hour, she heard the sound of wheels, and bag in hand went out upon the platform; but it was only a gay party returning from a drive. Again and again, she was disappointed. Her spirits sank.

Mariana was not more desolate.

"He cometh not," she said;
She said, "I'm a-weary, I'm a-weary,
I would that I were dead."

At last she could bear the waiting-room and its ticking clock no longer, and began to pace up and down the platform. This proceeding called out the inhabitants of the depot. Four children came, one by one, and stared at her, and, last of all, an overgrown youth of 18.

"Are you the man that is to take me to Hampton?" she said.

"No," was the reply, "and I reckon it'll be considerable of a while before he'll get round. You see he'll have his horse to put up, and his cows to milk, and his chores to do, first; so you may as well make up your mind to be patient," and with this cheerful advice he disappeared.

Considerable of a while! and patient! No traveller in the desert ever longed for an oasis as did Mary for that Accommodating Man. Another hour passed. It grew chilly, and a sickly woman came out and asked her to come into the kitchen and get warm; and while she was sitting there the young man came in.

"Do you think that man is coming at all?" she said.

"Wa'al," said he, reflectively, "it's pretty late—after eight o'clock. I rather guess not. But," he added with a sympathizing grin, "you mustn't be lonesome cause you're here among strangers."

Mary turned to the woman. "Can I stay here over night?"

"Well," she whined, "I really don't see how I can keep you. I'm sick, and got company, and hain't but one room, and that's occupied. I think you'd better go to Hatch's and see what you can do."

Upon inquiry it appeared that Hatch's was two miles off.

"I can't go there alone."

"This young man will go with you and show you the way. You needn't be at all troubled of your company. Isaac's a good steady boy and my nephew."

"Well, I'll go, said Mary, resignedly, and the woman addressed Isaac in a high imperative voice as if he were either hard of hearing or slow of understanding.

"Now, Isaac, you jes' listen to me. You go to Hatch's and tell him I sent you. Be sure you tell him that I'm sick, and got company, and hain't but one room, and that's occupied, and I want him to take this lady and keep her over night. D'ye understand?"

Isaac listened and obeyed; and he and Miss Brown were soon on their way to Hatch's.

"I reckon you'll find your health benefitted by staying at the beach," said her escort. "When I was there I gained a pound a day."

As his companion had never had a day's sickness, and was already a plump little woman, this prospect of a daily increase in weight had no charms for her and she was silent.

He was not discouraged, but extended his hand to her with: "Allow me to present you with a roll of lozenges."

"This hobble-de-hoy treats me like a young girl," she thought, indignantly, and although she felt that even lozenges might bring some comfort to a woman who had eaten nothing since noon, she declined them, saying cheerfully, "No, thank you, I never eat anything after riding in the cars."

"You don't say so," said Isaac, evidently astonished at this extraordinary idiosyncrasy. "You're from the country, ain't you?"

"No indeed," she said, anxious to impress him with the idea that she was a being from another sphere! "It's quite a city."

"I want to know!"

They drew near Hatch's, and Mary turned to her escort with, "What shall I give you for your trouble, sir?"

"Nothing at all," said he sturdily. "I only want to do as I'd be done by."

Mary had made arrangements to stay at the Hatch's over night, when a wagon stopped at the door and a man's voice said: "Lady here for Hampton?" It was the Accommodating Man. "The folks at the depot told me I'd find her here, so here I am."

"I'm all ready," she said, and took her seat beside him and they started. Suddenly her driver stopped his horse. "Where do you want to go?" he said.

"A. G. Babcock's," was the prompt reply.

"There's three or four Babcocks in Hampton. There's John and Amos and—you want to go to John's?"

"No," she said with asperity. "A. G. Babcock. John doesn't begin with an A."

"Surely, surely," said the man, perfectly unruffled. "A. G.—let me see——." And then, as if struck with a brilliant idea, "Why, that must be Amos Babcock."

"Very likely!" said Miss Brown, dryly.

"Yes, you want to go to Amos Babcock's. Now, I know where John lives, but I don't feel sure about Amos. But I guess we'll find it." And with this comforting assurance, he drove along. They had reached a lonely spot, far from any house, when the horse stopped again; and this time her companion stood up in the wagon. "What now?" she thought, with a beating heart.

"By jingo!" he said, "I've got the cramp in my leg;" and began to kick vigorously.

"Is it very bad, sir?" said Mary meekly.

"Well, sometimes I have it so I can't do nothing at all. I don't know how it will be with this."

Mary was speechless with horror. At night on a lonely road, in company with a man who had the cramp!—this was to her an exceptional experience, and what to do she could not tell. But after a good deal of kicking and stamping, the cramp proved accommodating, and its victim was able to drive on.

"You won't know these roads when you go over them again, will you?" said he.

It was pitch dark, and Mary assented. She should not know them; and she reflected that neither should she know the Accommodating Man. However, from his voice, his manner, and his cramp, she made up her mind that he was an old farmer, perhaps an American cousin of jolly Mark Tapley. Indeed, there never was his equal for accommodating himself to circumstances. It began to rain, and he remarked, "An umbrella would be handy, but this is better than riding in the hot sun."

Whenever they came to a fork in the road and this often happened, he invariably remarked, "Well, I don't know which of these roads goes to Babcock's, but I'll take this one," and drove along as calmly as if he were sure of his way. He thus kept Mary in such a state of uncertainty that it was a delightful surprise to her when he stopped before a rambling farm-house saying, "I calculate we've got to Babcock's."

A man with a lantern came out.

"Is this where Mrs. Ayres boards?"

Just then Mrs. Ayres' head appeared at a window.

"O, Mary," she said, "we've given you up and gone to bed; and you were to lodge at another house—and could you go there and come over in the morning?"

Off started our wanderer once more, but stopped this time at a little cottage, where she parted from the Accommodating Man and was ushered by a kind old lady into her room on the first floor.

"You needn't be at all nervous," said the latter, as she turned the wooden button that fastened the house door; "there's no one in the house but another lady and yourself."

Nervous! Mary thought she should never be nervous again. She was only too glad to find a place to lay her head.

In the morning Mr. Ayres came to take her to the big house to breakfast, and afterward, in the Ayres' pleasant sitting-room she told the story of her adventures. Of course, she tried to be as funny as she could and made the Ayres girls scream with laughter at her account of the Knight of the Lozenges and the Accommodating Man.

Readables.

Great excitement was created in financial circles on Thursday by the announcement that the well known banking house of Jay Cooke & Co. had failed. The suspension of this house, hitherto considered as sound as the government itself, was the entering wedge to the downfall of leading banking houses in New York and other large cities. The First National Bank of Washington, Richard Schell, Robinson and Sugdam of New York, E. W. Clarke & Co. of Philadelphia, Fisk, Hatch & Co., are among those who have gone down. Jay Cooke says the failure of his house was precipitated by a general, universal and growing distrust of the future of the money market and the immediate success of the great railroad undertaking of the West, and the tightness of this season, felt not only by his firm but by all dealers in money. The latest reports give a slight improvement in the feelings of money changers, and it is hoped that the panic is virtually ended.

A great disturbance occurred at Plymouth (England) Theatre recently in consequence of a party of naval officers making a demonstration against Charles Reade's play of "It's Never Too Late to Mend," which was being performed. The party occupied the pit, and as they continued the disturbance, the audience called for their removal. The police interfered, and the officers resisted so much that the police had to seek the aid of civilians to take them to the station house. The performance was stopped for nearly an hour, during the whole of which the house and stage were in a great uproar, many women fainting. One of the officers jumped on to the stage and was handcuffed with the handcuffs intended for one of the convicts in the play.

Mrs. Victoria Woodhull and her followers are continuing to make themselves ridiculous, and disgracing their sex. At the annual convention of the national Association of Spiritualist in Chicago on Wednesday Mrs. Anna M. Middlebrook, a boasted Woodhullite, gave utterance to the following: "I stand here, as far as the Christian religion is concerned, determined on its destruction. In politics I am a rebel. I avow it boldly. This is a sham republic. With reference to social problems, I am a revolutionist. Why should we, in the nineteenth century, go back 1800 years for our doctrines? Is there not more than we can learn from the living present? If we live up to our philosophy we will see the time when the mummery creeds of Christianity will be overturned."

Several hundred people in St. Louis recently witnessed a somnambulistic circumsperformance by moonlight. A car conductor, who had been to Barnum's circus, leaped from his bedroom window to a roof below, turned all sorts of summersaults and handsprings, went through a series of exercises on a fire-alarm telegraph wire, and ended the show by taking a flying leap through the window again. His friends found him lying on the floor with his hands and feet bleeding, but he could give no account of how it happened.

While a couple of Chicopee boys were fooling with a loaded pistol, Sunday forenoon, it went off, wounding one of them, an eleven-year-old son of Eli Lanean, quite seriously in the jaw, near the ear. His father went to get Dr. Shepherd to dress the wound, and, not being able to speak English, could only say, "bang, bang" and point to his jaw. But he secured the attendance of the doctor.

The Ohio Democratic State Committee held a little meeting in Columbus one day last week, and although a quorum was not present, proceeded at once to "business." Their conference related almost solely to the methods of raising the funds required to carry on the canvass, and the talk on this point was a little gloomy. The correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette writes: "It was said that Senator Thurman had given the committee plainly to understand that $5,000 contributed by himself must be used in close counties, and no other. Thurman don't expect to elect Allen. He is looking to his seat in the United States Senate, and he wants his money placed where it will do the most good. The members of the Committee seemed a little restless and humiliated at the idea that the Democratic organization in Ohio is being run simply for Allen G. Thurman's private benefit; but John G. Thompson, who is Thurman's right bower, assured them that it was all right, and silenced their murmurs. The meeting broke up, however, with a pretty decided feeling that the Democratic Party of Ohio is sold out."

Old Time Chronicles, No. 56.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

THE TREADWELL FAMILY, AND THE TREADWELL HOUSE IN SOUTH NEWMARKET. The Treadwell family was formerly influential and celebrated in New England. The first account we have of it was in Ipswich, Mass. It was there more than 150 years ago and, as seen by Brewster's Rambles about Portsmouth, first series, page 135, the first of the name came to Portsmouth from Ipswich in 1724. His name was Charles He married Mary Kelley of Newcastle. She was a lady of accomplishments and ability and persuaded her husband to provide a shop for the retail of goods in a part of their dwelling. She gave personal attention to this, her husband assisting, as the business increased.

Affairs were shrewdly managed and wealth accumulated. She induced her husband to purchase other lots in the place and on them buildings were erected. One of these houses was afterwards remodelled and became the City Hotel. Another, on the corner of Congress and Middle streets, became what was called later the Stover mansion. Another lot was on the corner of what is now State and Fleet streets. On this a large house was erected.

The Treadwells of Portsmouth were connected with the press. In 1793 C. Pierce established a paper called "The United States Oracle of the Day." Three years later, William and Daniel Treadwell became publishers. These were grandsons of Charles and Mary Treadwell, above named. William retired after a time, but Daniel was connected with the paper till 1813. The name of the paper was changed in 1825 to Portsmouth Journal and is now in the eightieth year of its existence. It is venerable with age, but fresh, strong and vigorous. The NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE is old enough to be its grandfather, but its natural fame is not abated. Both are good for the right.

Connecticut had a distinguished civilian named John Treadwell. He was a native of that State. He was of strict Puritanic principles and perhaps was connected with the Ipswich family of the name. He was a lawyer, held several important offices and for two years ending in 1811, was Governor of the State. He was the first President of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

But now to the Portsmouth Treadwells again and the family that resided in Newmarket. Charles and Mary, his wife, had a son, who resided at the corner of State and Fleet streets. A son of his named Charles occupied a part of the house. He became a sea captain and some time after the close of the second war with England in 1815, moved to Newmarket. The dwelling, portions of which are still there, is a few rods north of the station called Newmarket Junction, in what is now South Newmarket. The house is on the east side of the road and in sight of the railway station. The house had been occupied we think as a tavern and kept by Gen. Hill, but was owned when the Treadwells purchased it by the Exeter Bank.

It is a tradition in the Treadwell family, probably correct, that this house was once occupied as a parsonage by the pastor of the Congregational church, Rev. John Moody; if so, it is at least 100 years old. Likely it is much older. It bears the appearance of great age, although it has been kept in good repair. Rev. John Moody was the first minister settled in Newmarket. The town was chartered in 1727 and Mr. Moody was settled in 1730. He died in 1773, aged 73. The last meeting house of the society stood nearly opposite the Treadwell house. The ministers that followed Mr. Moody were Ewen, Tombs and Thurston. The Congregationalists ceasing to occupy, Rev. J. Broadhead, a Methodist, preached some.

The Treadwell house is singular in form and was evidently not built at the same time. A large part fronts northerly, another large part westerly, or towards the street. The timber used was large and substantial, some of it oak, as usual in early times. Some of the stairways were elegantly worked, especially as to the rails. Good boards from the old majestic pines were used. Over the fire-place in the kitchen of the south wing is a board in the breast work, nearly three feet wide and perfectly free from sap, knots or other blemish. The rooms are high and spacious. What is very singular there are two cellars, one below the other. One of them was for choice wines when the house was for public entertainment.

Capt. Treadwell followed the seas after coming to town. He died possessed of a good property in 1843. Rev. J. F. Adams and Rev. M. Newhall, both of Greenland have for their present wives daughters of Capt. Treadwell.

Briggs' Baby.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Thomas Briggs of Twelfth street has a boy baby about ten months old, who is admitted at the beginning of this article to look just like his father, and to be the smartest boy baby of his age in Detroit. Yesterday morning the child was sitting on the floor, playing with five or six big coat buttons on a string, and taking an occasionable nibble at an apple to bring out his first crop of teeth. Mrs. Briggs and a neighbor were talking away as only women can gossip, when the baby hid the buttons under a mat and started to finish the apple. A bit of the skin got in his throat and he gave a cough and a whoop and pawed the air and rolled over on his head. "Oh, the buttons! he has swallowed them buttons!" cried the mother as she yanked him up and shook him. "Pound him on the back!" yelled the other woman, trying to hold the baby's legs still. "Run for the neighbors!" cried Mrs. Briggs. "Oh, he'll die! he'll die!" screamed the other, as she ran out. And the neighbors came in and made him lie on his stomach and cough, and then turned him on his back and rubbed his stomach, and joggled him about all sorts of ways until he got mad and he went to howling. Then a boy ran for Briggs, and Briggs ran for a doctor, and the doctor came and choked the baby, and ordered sweet oil and mustard plaster, and told them to hold him on his back. Everybody knew that those six great buttons were lodged in that baby's throat, because he was red in the face, and because he strangled as he howled and wept. They poured down sweet oil, and put mustard across him, and wept over him; and the mother said she could never forgive herself. Boys drove by calling out "Slab wood for sale!" and the scissors man went by shouting "Sharp! sharp!" but that distressed crowd held the baby down and shed their tears over his whole length. The doctor was looking serious, and Briggs was thinking that he hadn't done anything to deserve such a blow, when one of the women pushed the mat and discovered the buttons. Then everybody laughed and danced, and they kicked the sweet-oil bottle under the bed, threw the mustard plaster at the doctor, and Mrs. Briggs hugged the howling angel to her bosom and called him her "wopsy, topsy, hopsy, dropsy, popsy little cherubim."

Business Notices.

So successful has Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery proven, as a constitutional treatment for Catarrh, when coupled with the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, applied locally by the use of Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche (the only method of reaching the upper and back cavities of the head,) that the proprietor of these medicines has long offered a standing reward of $500 for a case of Catarrh which he cannot cure. Out of Health.

In this common expression is comprehended an immense amount of bodily and mental suffering. It is not necessary to be affected with positive disease in order to experience unutterable wretchedness. A person out of health is weak, languid, low spirited, incapable of much exertion, nervous, irritable, and as sensitive to every change of temperature as the mercury in a thermometer. What such a person requires is invigoration, and Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will supply it. No need of applying to a physician in such a case. The fee would be thrown away. At the nearest drug store may be had the most efficient and healthful vegetable tonic that the world contains. Twenty-five years' experience has established the fact that among all the stomachics and alteratives known to modern pharmacy this powerful restorative stands supreme, unapproached. Every bottle of Hostetter's Bitters contains more blessings than there were curses in Pandora's box.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of our functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing painkiller. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic-rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, and all details, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to sewing machines competing, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, when it is that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND SEVENTY THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (270,758) machines, being out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in efficiency and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

Odd Fellows' Reception.

The invitation of Mt. Sinai and Strawberry Bank Encampments, I. O. of O. F. of this city to the Merrimac Encampment of Newburyport was responded to by sixty-one visiting Patriarchs who put in an appearance here on Friday morning, arriving on the 10 o'clock train. They were received at the Eastern depot by the two Encampments before named, and without delay took up the line of march over the route designated, the U. S. Naval Band and the Haverhill Cornet Band furnishing the music. The members of the Portsmouth Encampments turned out with well-filled ranks numbering with their visitors, nearly two hundred men in line. Major M. T. Betton was Chief Marshal of the procession, E. D. Coffin and Robert C. Sides acting as aides. The principal officers of Straw-Bank Encampment were Robert C. Sides, Jr., Senior Warden in charge, Benj. R. Curtis, High Priest; Mt. Sinai Encampment, Horace Mudge Chief Patriarch, Benjamin Walker High Priest, W. A. Hidden Senior Warden, Horace Waldron Junior Warden; Merrimac Encampment, Benjamin G. Davis Chief Patriarch, James S. Blake High Priest, Charles W. Woods Acting Senior Warden, Joseph Little Junior Warden.

After marching through the streets for about an hour, they halted at the Ward Room on State street, where a generous collation, consisting of cold meats, pastry, cake of different kinds, apples, &c., was spread upon the tables running the whole length of the hall. At the repast, a short speech of welcome by the Chief Patriarch of Mt. Sinai Encampment was made to the visiting brethren, which was as briefly responded to by James S. Blake in behalf of the Merrimac Encampment. The banquet at the Ward Room was entirely free from formality and was noticeable for the good humor and general freedom that prevailed. A short stroll about the streets was brought to a sudden termination by the roll of the drum summoning the patriarchs into line once more for the purpose of taking another march about town. After passing through some of the principal streets to Wibird's Hill the procession halted, broke ranks and took carriages for the Farragut House, where a sumptuous dinner was served which was eagerly partaken of by the brethren, the long ride combined with the sea air giving them keen appetites. The rain storm did not greatly interfere with the fulfillment of the programme, although a fair day would have given more satisfaction to those whose lot compelled them to ride to the beach in open carriages. Still it was much more agreeable than a hot, dusty day, when the perspiration of men on the march is equal to the effects of a moderate shower.

The evening's entertainment consisted of a ball at Congress Hall for those whose inclinations led them in such a direction, while many of the visiting Encampment sought the quiet retirement of Odd Fellows' Hall where they were allowed the opportunity of witnessing the work of the Royal Purple degree, one candidate having made an oblation of himself for the edification of the Patriarchs and for the purpose of obtaining the honor which this degree confers.

Shortly after midnight the members of the Merrimac Encampment took the cars for home evidently well pleased with their reception. And well they might be, for, take it all in all it was one of the most hospitable and generous receptions of the kind that was ever witnessed in Portsmouth. With full ranks, hearty greetings, liberal decorations, sumptuous repasts, pleasant entertainments, together with a general freedom from formality or reserve, none could fail to enjoy themselves, whether host or guest.

Did our space permit us, we would be pleased to note the decorations about the city. These were quite general among the members of the Order, many private dwellings being adorned elaborately and tastily. The Kearsarge House was finely dressed with flags gracefully hung over the front of the building.

Hon. John H. Bailey, besides having his residence neatly decorated, had a small tent erected in his front yard and on it the motto, "Brother, here is rest." An innocent looking white goat was tied near by, possibly as a symbol of the purity of the tenets of the Order, but more probably as a representative of that mystical goat of which we have all heard so much, and which has been represented as difficult for even the most accomplished equestrian to ride without being suddenly dismounted.

—At Louisville, last week, appeared in the railway station a pretty girl barefooted, with a pair of shoes and a bag in her hand. On inquiry, it appeared that she had walked eighteen miles, from Salt River, to be married to the young fellow of her heart. She was modest, and, being annoyed by the observation which she had attracted, marched off unsearch of her intended.

Portsmouth Baptist Association.

This organization consists of most of the Baptist churches in Rockingham county, and those of Dover and Great Falls in Strafford county. The session was held in Brentwood, 17th and 18th inst Rev. W. H. Alden of Portsmouth was chosen Moderator and Rev. H. O. Walker of Deerfield, Clerk. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. J. N. Chase; subject, the gospel must be defended and ministers chosen to defend it.

In the afternoon reports from the churches were read, indicating harmony and prosperity, although the net increase has been small. The doctrinal sermon was by Rev. J. W. Sewell of South Hampton. It is an interesting arrangement of the Association to have a history of one of the churches given each year. In this way those of Newton, Brentwood, Exeter and Deerfield have been given. This year it was that of Portsmouth and was given by the pastor, Rev. W. H. Alden. It was well prepared and full of the particulars of the past history of that church. There was a discourse in the evening, also exercises the next day.

Money Found.

While two truckmen were riding together along Russell street on Thursday evening one of them espied lying near the sidewalk a roll of bank notes. Jumping from the team he seized the prize and showing it to his companion, exclaimed, "this is mine!" "Not by a —— sight" said the other, "I saw it at the same time you did." Then arose an altercation that came near ending in blows, but they were finally quieted. The man who claimed to have found the money asked the less fortunate chap to take a drink, and settle up the quarrel. But no settlement could be effected short of a "divvy" of one-half the money found, and hence the friendship of the two individuals has been changed to that of malignant hatred. It seems to us however, that there is yet another party who should have something to say about the dividing of this sum of money—the owner, whoever he may be. It is rather a questionable case of honor, the picking up of a sum of money and without ascertaining who lost it or even taking the trouble to make any inquiries in such a direction, proceed to quarrel over the division of it!

Some of the fishermen who are visiting us are quiet and well behaved while others are given to noise and tumult. In the latter case rum invariably does it.

The annual gathering at Salisbury Beach took place on Thursday. The speakers announced failed to come and the affair is represented as of being up to that of previous years.

The depositors in the Portsmouth Savings Bank, (who have not done so since August 1st) are requested to bring in their books to have the regular and extra dividends added thereto.

The many friends hereabouts of Mrs. Freeman, the landlady of the Cape Neddick House, at York, so long a favorite resort of pleasure-seekers, will regret to learn that the old lady is seriously ill.

The Board of Alderman on Thursday evening voted not to pay the $500 to the Portsmouth City Guards that was allotted them out of the Fourth of July fund by the Citizens, Committee. Yeas: Spinney, Sise, and Letavour; Nays, Wilson, Garrett, Davis and Trefethen.

Rev. John A. Goss will speak from the following text, in the Court street Christian Chapel, on Sunday afternoon, at 2 1-2 o'clock: Habakkuk 2d, 15th—"Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also." All are welcome.

The store of A. D. Brown near the depot at Hampton, was broken open on Thursday night and $25 in money, besides a roll of water-proof cloth, with a few other articles of trifling value, were taken by the scamps. A neighbor living near by also had a web of cotton cloth stolen from the yard where it had been put to bleach.

A gentleman in this city recently, having business in Calais, Maine, left Boston on the Eastern Railroad for Calais via St. Stephen, N. B., on Tuesday night, and returned to Boston on Thursday, having made the round trip of 796 miles eleven hours quicker than it was ever made before.

Mr. John J. IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, and is easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend All inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signatures of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

Taylor's Boy.

[Maj. Muldoon in N. Y. World.]

Taylor's boy is a white boy. He is rather large of his age, which numbers the best part of ten summers and nine winters, for he stands on his two naked feet amid the briars and rocks of Pennsylvania nigh unto five feet high. And rather old for his age is Taylor's boy, for he knows how to unhang gates, fasten tin kettles to dog's tails and suck eggs better, more securely and more expeditiously than any boy in this—the stump-speaker's—broad land. Taylor's boy's figure is like unto a stick split at one end and thrust into a short pair of trousers. Taylor's boy's father says the cotton factories running on short time can't make cloth fast enough to keep his boy in trousers. The truth of which assertion is plainly apparent to any one from even a cursory inspection of Taylor's boy's trousers, which on week days, reach just below his knees; and if he hath Sunday trousers of a longer pattern, Taylor's boy never wears them. Taylor's boy's entire wardrobe seems to consist of one pair of trowsers, one pair of leather suspenders and one straw hat. Taylor's boy wears the crown of his straw hat on the back of his head; the front part of the brim, which is detached from the rest of his hat, usually rests on Taylor's boy's nose. Taylor's boy takes his observations through the opening between the crown and the brim. Taylor's boy's head is shaped like the heads of the Aztec children, who used to exhibit in the side shows of the moral circus—it runs rather conspicuously in the rear. Pete Johnsing, as his mother calls him, is a colored boy. Pete is rather small for his age, which is all the way from one year to five, just as Mrs. Johnsing happens to recollect it. Pete is just about the size of a hand-organ monkey. Pete is rather young for his years, unsophisticated, and innocent like. Pete spends most of his time catching at the hind parts of wagons, playing in sand puddles in the road, and in climbing spouts. The agility with which Pete will mount the smoothest spout makes me think of Darwin. Like Taylor's boy, Pete runs a great deal to trousers; but Pete's trousers are as much too large as Taylor's boy's trousers are too small. The average of trousers between them is all right, but the individual fit is awful. Pete's trousers reaches up to his neck, and trail ten or twelve inches in the rear. Pete's mother is economical in hat; Pete has no hat excepting his hair. A few days since, while I was drowning out the dyspepsia with the sweat of my brow in my father's garden, Taylor's boy leaped over the wall like a young giraffe, and wished to know if I would allow him to pick some of the raspberries. As Taylor's boy looked as if raspberries would help him some, I consented. Soon after, Pete Johnsing came over and made the same request; and as I am not the man to make any invidious distinctions on account of color as to another man's raspberries, I consented to Pete's picking. In my father's garden there is a large cistern, used to catch rain-water for carriage washing and vegetable invigoration. Near the opening in the top of the cistern—said aperture being about four feet square—a box is usually kept, ostensibly to cover the opening, but really to enable any night trespasser to trip over the same, with a lively chance of pitching into the cistern; and there have been lying near the cistern the relics of a pump—one of these patent pumps which won't pump and never would, such as lunatics invent and disingenuous pump-peddlers beguile honest folks with. When they had eaten their fill of raspberries, Taylor's boy suggested that they have a circus. And without consulting me, Taylor's boy selected the top of the cistern, near the box and patent pump, as a suitable place for his gymnastic performances. It is proper for me to state in this connection that, knowing something of Taylor's boy's idiosyncrasy for getting kittens and colored boys into trouble, I should have selected some other place had I been consulted. But, as I have remarked, I was not consulted. Nor had I any idea that there was a circus exhibiting in the neighborhood until I was startled by the loud shouting of Taylor's boy—"Nigger in the well; nigger in the well." Taylor's boy's presence of mind did not desert him. Feeling that a fellow-creature's life was in danger, first, Taylor's boy threw into the cistern a piece of plank, then a pickaxe, and was tugging away at the patent pump as if to throw that in, when I accosted him. "What are you about there, Taylor's boy?"

"Nigger in the well, mister! nigger in the well; I'm giving him something to keep him up."

"Keep him up!" I remarked. "How long do you suppose a pickaxe will keep the boy afloat?"

Taylor's boy made no reply, but vociferated vehemently: "Nigger in the well! nigger in the well!"

Taylor's boy's shouting brought Mrs. Johnsing to the door, Mrs. Johnsing being engaged just then at our family wash-tub; Mrs. Johnsing took in the situation at once and started for the cistern; just as she reached it her foot caught in some of the gearing of the patent pump; she tripped, and went headlong into the cistern.

"Two niggers in the well!" cried Taylor's boy. "The well is full of niggers!" And up the street he started, shouting at the top of his voice: "The well is full of niggers! The well is full of niggers!"

As you may well suppose, things were rather lively in that neighborhood for a few minutes. Taylor's boy's statement of the well, alarmed all the neighbors, who rushing into the streets and hearing Mrs. Johnsing's and Pete's screams for help, and not being able to locate these, ran madly to and fro against each other, in quest of the immersed colored folks. At length we fished them out. Mrs. Johnsing, as soon as she reached dry land, getting her son and heir into the proper position, administered to his person a heavy dose of shoe; and Pete, released from the maternal embrace, observed to Taylor's boy who had assembled again: "See here, Jim Taylor! Did you frow my mother into dat well?"

The Spider's Bridge.

[Hearth and Home.]

One chilly day I was left at home alone; and, after I was tired of reading Robinson Crusoe, I caught a spider, and brought him into the house to play with. Funny kind of playmate, wasn't it? Well, I took a washbasin, and fastened up a stick in it like a liberty pole or a vessel's mast, and then poured in water enough to turn the mast into an island for my spider, which I named Crusoe, and put him on the mast. As soon as he was fairly cast away, he anxiously commenced running round to find the mainland. He'd scamper down the mast to the water, stick out a foot, get it wet, shake it, run round the stick, and try the other side, and then run back up to the top again. Pretty soon it became a serious matter to Mr. Robinson, and he sat down to think over it. As in a moment he acted as if he wanted to shout for a boat, and was afraid he was going to be hungry, I put molasses on the stick. A fly came, but Crusoe wasn't hungry for flies just then. He was homesick for his web in the corner of the wood-shed. He went slowly down the pole to the water, and touched it all around, shaking his feet like pussy, when she wets her stockings in the grass, and suddenly a thought appeared to strike him. Up he went like a rocket to the top, and commenced playing circus. He held one foot in the air, then another, and turned round two or three times. He got excited, and nearly stood on his head, before I found out what he knew; and that was this, that the draught of air made by the fire would carry a line ashore on which he could escape from his desert island. He pushed out a web that went floating in the air, until it caught on the table. Then he hauled on the rope until it was tight, struck it several times to see if it was strong enough to hold him, and walked ashore. I thought he had earned his liberty, so I put him back in his wood-shed again.

—The slowly-starving editor of a paper at Brattleboro', Vt., drops into rhyme as follows:

"We had sweet dreams the other night,
When all around was still—
We dreamed we saw a host of folks
Pay up their printer's bill.
We wish our dream would come to pass,
And our empty pockets fill—
Tar daump a te diddle dum,
Te tump te iddle dill.

—Here is the Union City (Tenn.) Herald's mortuary record for the week: "Died—Gideon Bransford, J. Y. Jinken's babe, T. Briest's infant, Smoot's infant, Swagart's child, with brain fever, in the country. Old Mr. Carmon, also with old age of 90 years."

—The clearness of the air on mountain-tops deceives the eye, and brings the distant objects near; and, in like manner, the clearer the talent of an author, the easier it seems to reach.

—Life is divided into three terms: that which was, which is, and which will be. Let us learn from the past to profit by the present, and from the present to live better for the future.

—The defensive armor of a shrinking and timid policy ought not to govern men who are conscious that they have the majesty of truth to guide them.

—Shanghai chickens wade the Wabash river with impunity and dry their spurs at Lafayette.

Daily Chronicle.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1873.

Readables.

The financial panic in New York has not affected the mercantile community to any great extent, failures being confined wholly to stock brokers. The panic is ascribed to building and extending railroads in advance of the growth or needs of the country.

The Union Trust Company, has suspended. The Secretary, Mr. Carlton is said to be a defaulter in a very large amount.

The missing crew of the Polaris are at Dundee, Scotland, having been rescued by a whaler. The Juniata has been stopped in her search, but nothing has been heard from the Tigress.

Carl Meisel, of Boston, for many years connected with the Mendelssohn Quintet Club, has been drowned in Germany.

A dispatch from Calcutta announces the loss at sea of the ship Indus, Coolie laden. Four hundred and eighteen Coolies perished.

The national association of Spiritualists has elected Mrs. Woodhull president, and those opposed to her theories have seceded from the organization.

The Emperor of Morocco is dead.

Barnum confirms the report that he is taking into serious consideration the investment of $50,000 in a trans-Atlantic balloon project next season.

The proprietors of the New York Graphic are having a new silk balloon made for the purpose of crossing the ocean. Mr. Washington H. Donaldson, the aeronaut, is reconstructing the cotton balloon, and announces his intention of starting for Europe in it in three weeks.

Two young women in San Francisco have gone into business as wood engravers.

Col. Bob Ingersoll, a great Illinois stump speaker, has taken to preaching.

The New York Herald calls Colfax "simply the incarnation of the franking privilege."

In Iowa the price of a marriage license has been reduced to a quarter of a dollar.

A Newport, Rhode Island, lady, supposed to be on her death bed, made the singular request, a few days since, to hear the brass band, which was complied with, the band appearing in the evening and playing several sacred pieces, which appeared to comfort her much.

A rich joke was played on the American band of Providence, recently. They were playing at a certain residence, the owner of which furnished ale for the guests from casks in his cellar. A waiter proceeded to look out for the band, but instead of drawing from the ale casks tapped a neighboring barrel of yeast. It was creamy looking, but one taste satisfied the band, and for once they left the goblets full.

Mr. Ross Winans, the Baltimore millionaire, has just completed, in the southwestern part of that city, one hundred and thirteen brick dwelling houses, four stories high, suitable for families in moderate circumstances, all of the houses being laid off and built alike, and possessing unusual accommodations for dwellings of their class. These houses cost at least $500,000 in all, and will accommodate about one thousand, five hundred people.

Secretary Richardson visited the sub-Treasury at New York, elbowing the bulls and bears of Wall street, who did not know him. He is reported as having said afterwards: "There will be no more speculation in gold."

State Items.

The Dover & Great Falls Branch Railroad is to be built on the line running westerly of the Sawyer School-house and up through the Factory field.

The Rochester Courier says: In times of drouth in the whiskey business of Rochester, her guzzlers have had their jugs and pocket pistols filled at Great Falls, but now "things have changed," and the metropolis of Strafford county, the temperance city of Dover, furnishes Rochester and Great Falls with their bad rum, and the majority of the cases of drunkenness to be seen at the present time were gotten up on Dover whiskey.

Great Falls holds some rascals who richly deserve hanging. Friday evening, J. V. Edgerly, a lawyer who has been prominent in prosecuting liquor dealers, was called out of his house and assaulted with a club. Mr. Edgerly was too much for his antagonist, however. The latter then drew a pistol and aimed it at his abdomen but the shot took effect in Mr. Edgerly's left arm. The cowardly assailant escaped in the darkness. It is said that Mr. Edgerly prosecuted the dealers because they sold rum to a friend after he had requested them not to. Such assaults as that of Friday will only tend to weaken the dealers.

John Peaslee of Bristol, aged about 65, committed suicide by poison. Domestic troubles were the cause.

William Pattee of New Hampton was arrested at Campton, Friday, charged with the murder of his wife, who was found dead, suspended by the neck, in their house a few days since. He confesses she died during a scuffle with him, he having his hand over her mouth at the time, and that he placed her where she was found.

The twentieth annual meeting of the State Teachers' Association will be held at Claremont, on Thursday and Friday, October 30 and 31.

Hon. William H. Y. Hackett, of Portsmouth, Hon. John J. Morrill, of Gilford, Hon. Chas. H. Bell, of Exeter, and Hon. Dexter Richards of Newport, are eligible for republican gubernatorial candidates.

The grade of the Ogdensburg road through the White Mountain notch will be about 117 feet to the mile.

Wagner.

Judge Barrows, of Maine, gave the following points in the decision of the Law Courts for over-ruling the exceptions in Wagner's case:

When the political authorities of a State have actually claimed and received a jurisdiction over a particular locality, the Courts of that State are thereby concluded, and will respect such decision, and act accordingly without questioning the validity of such claim.

The prisoner was not wronged by the instructions given in this case that proof that the crime was committed on the Island called Smutty Nose is equivalent to proof that it was committed within the county of York, and would make the crime properly cognizable by the court sitting in the county. That instruction was correct.

The outcries of a person deceased made during the perpetration of the assault which results in death, or upon the approach of the assailant, are competent evidence upon the trial of a party charged with the murder of such person, and may be considered by the jury with other circumstances and testimony upon the question of the identity of the accused.

The outcries of another person who was murdered by the same party a few minutes previously during the perpetration of one and the same burglary, but on another part of the premises, are admitted under like circumstances for the same purpose upon each trial.

Such exclamations are competent as part of the res gestæ.

Moreover their admission may be distinctly justified for the same reasons which are held to justify the admission of dying declarations.

The contents of the prisoner's pockets found when he is arrested may be put in evidence when there is testimony tending to show that they or a portion of them came from the recent possession of the deceased ceased or from the locality of the crime.

Articles which a witness identifies as the property of the prisoner, and in his possession shortly before the crime was committed, when found shortly after its perpetration, at the house where the crime was committed, may be offered in evidence.

A Sorry Lover Watched by a Big Dog.

[Max Adeler.]

Young Manglebury will probably not visit Miss Skittles again. He called upon her a few evenings ago, and as she was not at home, he sat down on the porch to wait for her. In a few minutes old Skittles' big dog came up, and after eyeing Manglebury, and growling at him in a manner which made chills run up and down his back, the dog walked up and began to sniff Manglebury's legs. While the animal was performing this operation the young man maintained a condition of absolute repose. It is doubtful if he will again be as perfectly still as he was then until his immortal soul is in the land of everlasting rest. When the ceremony was concluded, the dog lay down by Manglebury's chair. As soon as Manglebury felt certain the brute was asleep, he thought he would go home without seeing Miss Skittles; but when he attempted to rise from his chair, the dog leaped up and growled so menacingly that Manglebury immediately sat down again. Then he thought perhaps it would be better not to go home at once. It occurred to him, however, that it would be as well to call for some one to remove the dog in case circumstances should render it desirable for him to depart; but at the very first yell, Skittles' dog jumped to his feet, gave a fiendish bark, and began to take a few more critical smells at Manglebury's legs. And whenever Manglebury shuffled his feet, or moved his arms, or uttered the slightest sound, that infamous dog was instantly up and at him. Once, when he had to sneeze, he thought, from the boisterous indignation manifested by the dog, that his hour at last had come. Manglebury had often before wanted to see Miss Skittles alone, but now he felt as if he would welcome any member of the Skittles family, even the cook, with a feeling approaching enthusiasm. Finally he heard voices in the parlor. It was Miss Skittles and a young man who had come home with her and entered the side door. And they sat there at the window, not thirty feet from Manglebury, sparking and cooing, and every now and then making some disagreeable remark about Manglebury, until at last the visitor left and Miss Skittles locked the door, closed the shutters, and went to bed. And the dog never moved until morning, when old Skittles came down to look at the thermometer and found that faithful guardian still watching over the miserable Manglebury, who still sat in the chair in which he began to wait for Miss Skittles. Old Skittles offered to shoot the dog, in order to soothe Manglebury, but that person was beyond reach of such remedies. He was too mad. He cut the Skittles family dead; and he is now endeavoring to select a social circle whose members do not keep dogs. He hates a dog now worse than a doctor hates a healthy climate.

Libel Suit.

Messrs. Watson & Sons, proprietors of the Daily Evening Times, Biddeford, were arraigned in the Supreme Judical Court at Alfred, Friday, to answer to an indictment found the present term for publishing an alleged libel on Justice Barrows, of the Supreme Court, and the jury sitting at the time of the Wagner trial in June last. The article in question was published in the absence of the senior publisher, without his knowledge or consent, and questioned the correctness of the verdict, which verdict was subsequently endorsed by an editorial in that paper.

—"You must have lived here a long time," said a traveling Englishman to an Oregon pioneer. "Yes, sir, I have. Do you see that mountain? Well, when I came here that mountain was a hole in the ground." The Englishman opened his half shut eyes.

Wholesale Elopement.

"A few days ago," says the Leavenworth Times, "a letter was received at police headquarters in this city, from Bethany, Harrison county, Mo., stating that a young man by the name of Samuel Frost had stolen his mother's best span of horses and eloped with the wife of a prominent judge and merchant of that place. Besides the woman and her two children (one at the breast) the young renegade managed to get away with the horse and carriage of the venerable judge; and last but not least of all his thievings, did feloniously steal and carry against her will the light, fragile and delicate corn-fed servant girl, who kicks the beam at exactly two hundred and fifty pounds. Then he fled the town and goaded the horses on to happy Kansas, where he expected to settle down. Officer Spaulding got wind of a camping party of one man and two women on Three-mile Creek, and concluded to go out and see who they were. As soon as he saw the portly domestic he 'knew his man at once,' and apologizing to the women for his intrusion, laid his hand on Frost's shoulder, and told him he was his prisoner. Of course the women fainted, and the two hundred and fifty pounds of servant-galism rolled her eyes widely towards heaven and flopped. But this affecting tableau did not affect the officer in the least. He took the two horses, a wagon and the man Frost and returned to the city, leaving the women in camp to lament the loss of their protector. The judge's horse and buggy were sold about ten miles across the river in Missouri. He has been notified of the arrest of the parties, and will probably send for his recreant wife at once. Frost is young and unsophisticated, and is entirely overcome with the calamity which has befallen him and his harem."

Indian Hunting.

[October Galaxy.]

The Indian method of hunting the deer and antelope seems to a looker-on, not heated by the chase, cruel sport. But food is the object of the Indian hunter, and he is wonderfully successful in securing it. Notwithstanding their great speed and bottom, these animals seldom escape their pursuers on the open prairie. Mounted on their swift ponies, the Indians become as it were a pack of hounds that run by sight. In all directions they move, searching the country with eyes that see everything. On discovering deer no attempt is made at concealment, but with bridle reins between their teeth, loading their guns or adjusting their arrows as they ride, the hunters bear down on the doomed animals. Off bound the deer, but the Indians are before them; they run to the right—more Indians; to the left—still Indians. The country, which at first seemed open, narrows to a small circle. The deer double on themselves. Hemmed in on every side, there is no escape; the bullet and the arrow do their work. All their hunting, whether of man or beast, involves a system of surrounding. It is this method, thoroughly understood, and invariably practised where numbers will allow, that renders the Indian so formidable on the prairie. Although numbers are in at the death, there is no dispute as to the distribution of the carcases.

Ridiculous Muss.

A Keokuk lady, while engaged in the pursuit of her domestic duties encountered a mouse in the flour barrel. Now most ladies under similar circumstances would have uttered a few feminine shrieks and then sought safety in the garret. But this one possesses more than the ordinary degree of female courage. She summoned the hired man and told him to get the shot gun, call the bull dog, and station himself at a convenient distance. Then she climbed half way up the stairs and commenced to punch the flour barrel vigorously with a pole. Presently the mouse made its appearance and started across the floor. The bull dog at once went in pursuit. The man fired and the dog dropped dead. The lady fainted and fell down the stairs, and the hired man, thinking that she was killed, and fearing that he would be arrested for murder, lit out, and has not been seen since. The mouse escaped.

The Railroad War.

[Portland Press.]

Among the most disgraceful features of the undignified and childish railway squabble which has disgusted the town for two or three days was the employment by one of the roads of a crowd of the lowest roughs and bruisers in the city, under the leadership of the notorious Nelse Leighton. The collection of a large body of rum-fired desperadoes with the avowed purpose of making an affray under certain circumstances is not a respectable nor a reputable operation, and will certainly react upon its perpetrators. If any such lawless and reckless proceeding be again attempted, we trust that our city authorities will take effective action to check it. The other road took a manly and dignified course by quietly retiring from the contest after such agencies had been invoked.

—A sad-looking man was sniveling over the loss of three hundred dollars to three-monte men, on the Hudson River railroad, recently, and taking out the cards to show a sympathizing passenger how it was done, he awakened so much interest among the men standing around that in less than twenty minutes he had won a handsome sum. After he had left they began to understand that they had been gulled by the monte man himself.

—The lady in Millais' famous picture would fain save her lover's life from the massacre of Bartholomew by binding the popish badge around his arm; he kisses her for her love, but firmly removes the badge. So when the dearest friends we have, out of mistaken tenderness, would persuade us to avoid persecution by relinquishing principle, and doing as others do, we should thank them for their love, but with unbending decision refuse to be numbered with the world.

—The editor of the Pleasanton Stock Journal gives the modus operandi of capturing wild horses in Texas: "As soon as a herd of horses is discovered, the party of hunters divide, one portion striking camp while the other sets off in pursuit of the herd. The frightened animals go bounding across the prairie through the prickly pear and dense chaparral, leaving a trail which the hunters steadily pursue at an easy gait until they come in sight of the herd, which scampers off as before. These tactics are kept up by pursuers and pursued for days, the mustangs returning to their first starting point—which they are sure to do—when the camping party takes the place of the tired pursuers, and thus follows the herd until the poor, wearied, and half-starved creatures, with swollen limbs and bloodshot eyes, give up the struggle and submit to be driven anywhere. The object of the hunters has been merely to keep close enough to the mustangs to keep them from grazing. Starvation soon brings them to terms, and the prairie monarch, with drooping crest and dejected look, leaves his native wilds henceforth to become the slave of man." This is what hunters call "walking mustangs down."

—A country merchant who had been dunned a number of times for a bill which he claimed to have already paid, finally sent the money to the farm in Waterbury, and wrote as follows: "Please, if you can, send me a receipt that will last until the appearance of the angel that stands with one foot on the sea and the other on the land and proclaims that time shall be no more, and oblige, yours," etc. The senior partner replied, inclosing the receipt, as follows: "The receipt runs from the creation of the world, and is good for the above amount until time shall be no more, however that fact may be announced to the public."

—The Newcastle Journal gives the following process for putting on tight boots: "Our fairy-footed 'nice young men' will be rejoiced to learn that tight boots may be drawn on easily by a simple process. The patient lies down on the floor and holds his feet straight up in the air until the blood runs out of them, thus diminishing the size of the foot by several ounces, when it will slip into the boot as sleek as sliding into a gutter on a dark night. To enjoy perfect immunity from pedal torture while the foot is thus incased, it is only necessary to remain in the position until ready to draw off the boots."

—A man whose morning dram had been too much for him, in saddling his horse got the saddle wrong end foremost. Just as he was about to mount, a neighbor came up and called his attention to the mistake. The horseman gazed for a moment at the intruder, as if in deep thought, and then said, "You let that saddle alone. How do you know which way I am going?" And he looked daggers at the officious neighbor.

—It is no great matter to live lovingly with humble and meek persons; but he that can do so with the froward, with the peevish and perverse, he only hath true charity; always remembering that our solid, true peace consists rather in complying with others than in being complied with; in suffering and forbearing, rather than in contention and victory.

Out of Health.

In this common expression is comprehended an immense amount of bodily and mental suffering. It is not necessary to be affected with positive disease in order to experience unutterable wretchedness. A person out of health is weak, languid, low spirited, incapable of much exertion, nervous, irritable, and as sensitive to every change of temperature as the mercury in a thermometer. What such a person requires is invigoration, and Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will supply it. No need of applying to a physician in such a case. The fee would be thrown away. At the nearest drug store may be had the most efficient and healthful vegetable tonic that the world contains. Twenty-five years' experience has established the fact that among all the stomachics and alteratives known to modern pharmacy this powerful restorative stands supreme, unapproached. Every bottle of Hostetter's Bitters contains more blessings than there were curses in Pandora's box.

Sano Corporc. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing painreliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweeney horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & CO., 33 Broadway, New York.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Local Matters.

The Churches on Sunday.

The delightful weather of Sunday brought out a full attendance at the churches. Rarely, even in less rigorous climes, do air and sun unite their forces to produce such a perfect day. The recent movement of the friends of temperance for the enforcement of the prohibitory law very naturally occupies a prominent place in the minds of our church-going people, and it was alluded to at more or less length in some of the sermons. As previously announced, Rev. Mr. Goss preached a regular temperance discourse at the Christian Baptist church in the afternoon. It was listened to with close attention, and will do much to awaken renewed interest in the subject.

At the Unitarian church the pastor, Rev. James De Normandie, occupied the pulpit, it being his second appearance (counting by Sundays) since his summer vacation. The good effects of his rest are visible in a recuperation of strength and vigor, and, in a mental point of view, were finely exhibited in his morning discourse. His text was the 9th verse of the 78th Psalm: "The children of Ephraim, being armed, and carrying bows, turned back in the day of battle." The subject of the discourse was "Moral Cowardice," which was ranked next to ignorance as the cause of most of the evils that penetrate our social life. The discourse abounded in evidences of thoughtful study, and was distinguished for refreshingly plain speaking. Alluding to the alarming extent to which the evil treated of pervades every phase and grade of official life, the reverend gentlemen asked how we could expect good and wise laws, when our legislators, as a class, were ignorant, selfish, unprincipled men, who stood in the most pressing need of prayer? He did not believe that government should concern itself with religion, morality or business; if it was true, as reported on Saturday, that the administration had decided to aid a firm of bankrupt brokers, the President should be impeached at once. Some good people had thought that the temperance reform would be promoted by the enactment of a prohibitory law. He did not agree with them, but there was the law on the statute-book, and to what a farce we have come when we must petition to have it enforced! And then we must vote on the question whether our authorities shall do what they have solemnly sworn to do! Why, their lives are a daily perjury so long as this condition of things remains. Passing to other branches of his subject, the speaker denounced in scathing terms the practice which was becoming common with those who had amassed wealth by any and every means, of founding churches, schools and hospitals. Neither religion, nor education, nor charity, was promoted by such gifts.

At the North Church, in the evening, a union meeting was held in behalf of the cause of peace, and more particularly of the principle of international arbitration. The body of the church was comfortably filled. The exercises were opened with an earnest prayer by Rev. Mr. De Normandie. Rev. Carlos Martyn then delivered an address, too brief, full of pith and point, on the general subject, and closed by introducing Rev. Mr. Haynes, an agent of the American Peace Society. This gentleman entered upon a prolix description of the horrors of war, and entertained his hearers with a sneer at Tennyson's blood-stirring tribute to martial heroism, the "Charge of the Light Brigade." Mr. Haynes' discourse, as a whole, was an example of a good cause in bungling hands. At its close, a collection was taken up, after which Dr. Bingham, of St. John's church, made a few discreet remarks. The audience was then dismissed after singing another hymn.

Return of the Six.

The trampers returned from the mountains, Friday evening, after an absence of eight days, during which time they travelled 260 miles. Messrs. Norton and Dow completed 100 miles on foot by walking from Plymouth to Centre Harbor and climbing Red Hill, on Thursday. The other members of the party walked from 55 to 80 miles each, and all came home in excellent condition, with improved health and increased weight. Thursday night was passed at the boarding house of Rev. Mr. Benson, at Centre Harbor, the evening being spent in singing, the family joining. From Centre Harbor, the return was made by steamer across Lake Winnipesaukee and by rail from 'Wolfeboro'. The weather during the trip was remarkably pleasant. So satisfied were the party with their experience, it was unanimously determined to repeat the tour next year. All are now enjoying the luxury of boiled shirts and polished boots!

While walking to Centre Harbor, Messrs. Dow and Norton arrived at Squam Lake five minutes too late to intercept W. S. Pattee, the alleged murderer of his wife, who plunged into an outlet of the Lake and after swimming across, disappeared in the woods as they approached.

"Josh Billings" (Henry W. Shaw) was at the Profile during the brief stay of the party there. Mr. Hazlett requested his autograph and obtained the following: "The time to be carefullest is when you have a hand full of trumps. Josh Billings."

Lacontes.

U. S. S. Monongahela goes into commission to-day. A squad of marines arrived on Saturday.

A street argument against the temperance movement: "If I sell meat let me sell meat; if I sell rum, let me sell rum." This clinches it.

"Kent" telegraphs the Traveller that from present appearances it is more than probable that no benefit will be derived from the action of the petitioners, or that of the Aldermen or citizens' meeting.

We are promised an enjoyable dramatic performance in "Shin Fane," at the Temple, this evening, Flora Myers appearing, assisted by a good stock company. The Portland papers speak highly of the performance there. They remain here two nights.

A meeting of liquor-sellers was held on Friday night at a fashionable hostelry. It was only attended by the smaller fry, and didn't do anything very alarming. The larger dealers have a lordly contempt for the efforts being made by the "fanatics and women."

The Portsmouth Washingtonian Total Abstinence Society has chosen the following officers for the current year: President, B. F. Thorndike; Vice President, J. Horace Kent; Sec. and Treas., A. F. Craig; Exec. Com., Rev. John A. Goss, F. W. Miller, John S. Rand, A. H. Harlow, Wm. D. Fernald, Rev. A. C. Hardy, Wm. T. Lyons.

We hear that the liquor-dealers have agreed upon a novel punishment for the few tipplers whose names appeared on the temperance petition. If the movement results in a fizzle, as the dealers confidently expect, they will sternly refuse any application from the said signers for the warming punch, the genial cocktail, or any other form of stimulant. Think of the agonies the thirsty souls will suffer, when they receive this sort of cold shoulder.

It wouldn't be much of a joke on the Aldermen were the liquor dealers and their friends to march to the polls to-morrow, by the side of the temperance men, and vote "yes" on the question of enforcing the prohibitory law—would it? No one believes that the law will be enforced even if the yeas are in the majority. The action of the voters is only advisory and does not interfere with the duty of the Aldermen as imposed by the law.

Judges at the State Fair, to be holden at Manchester Sept. 30, Oct. 1, 2 and 3, are appointed from Portsmouth as follows: Matched Driving Horses, E. H. Winchester; Working Horses, Josiah Morrison; Colts, Wm. A. Pierce; Devon Stock, Samuel Langdon; Grade Cows and Heifers, S. S. Whidden; Pulling of Oxen, C. H. Hayes; Beeves, Cyrus L. Brown; Flour, Grain and Seeds, Harry Hartshorn; Fruit, Daniel H. Spinney; Flowers, Plumer D. Norton; Agricultural Implements, C. H. Hayes; Coopers' Work, N. F. Mathes; Carriages, R. H. Beacham; Furniture, E. Washington Brown; Silver Ware, Cutlery and Crockery, Gershom F. Melcher; Leather and Rubber Articles, Thos. S. Nowell; Clothing and Millinery, John E. Ham; Needle Work, Mrs. J. H. Kent; Pictorial and Industrial Art, Lewis G. Davis; Miscellaneous, E. G. Pierce, Jr.; Musical Instruments, Rev. Lot L. Harmon.

How It Looks Abroad.

The Rochester Courier, speaking of the agitation of the liquor question, here, says "the citizens seem to be pretty earnest in the matter, so much so that a petition signed by the Protestant and Catholic clergymen and three hundred prominent citizens has been presented to the Mayor and Aldermen, demanding a suppression of the traffic in that city. What action will be taken we have not learned, but should the authorities attempt the suppression of all that intoxicates, then they will interfere slightly with the business of Frank Jones, the ale brewer of that city. To displease that individual would be bad; for don't he give a big sum of money yearly for benevolent objects, and have not the churches praised him up as 'big hearted?' Should he just shake his head at them, the whole kit—churches and all—would go down on their marrow bones in an instant. Money is trumps, and no matter if it is obtained by distilling ale for thousands of people, he who manufactures it is styled 'Hon.' &c., but he who retails it by the glass is reckoned a miserable devil by 'respectable' people. The one throws out his ill-gotten gains at church fairs and festivals, and for other objects; the other don't. That's what's the matter. Now, it will have a one-sided look to prosecute the Tim Finnegans of the small groggeries while the city contains the most extensive brewery in New England, and lauds its owner to the skies."

English Bathing Drawers.

HAM & CO. have just received a lot of Gentlemen's English Bathing Drawers.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—The Governor of Vermont enjoys the distinction of receiving the smallest official salary of any governor in the Union. The wealthy State of Illinois pays the miserable pittance of $1500; Louisiana, bankrupt in means, pays $8000; California, $7000 in gold; Nevada, $6000. None of the Eastern or Western States besides those noted pay more than $5000, and many of them less. The Southern States generally pay high salaries. Florida pays $6000, and Mississippi $3000.

—A lady in Providence lost her needle, and in the effort to find it unearthed four hundred from the bowels of her pincushion. She now has needles to spare. A friend heard of her discovery and borrowed pincushions of all her neighbors. The result was astounding. She gave up counting when she reached 8000, and began to estimate. She now advertises "Needles for sale—a new invoice."

—A new version of "Old Uncle Ned" has become popular in the suburbs. It runs something as follows: "Then pull up the wicket and the stake, and put by the mallet and ball; for no more croquet 'll played this year, it's getting too late in the fall."

—A Nebraska man, on his dying bed, remembered that his wife was smoking some hams, and he said, "Now, Henrietta, don't go to snuffing around and forget them hams."

—A Detroit bootblack has a bank account of $1100, much to the surprise of all who know how much blacking is required by the Michigan boat.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessary for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE! SIX BOTTLES, $5.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood,

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organs into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

LOOKING THROUGH.

BY MRS. J. L. PATTERSON.

I sat in the twilight dreaming,
The day was a Sunday in June,—
When into my room came streaming,
A light that was not of the moon.

I looked about me in wonder
At a vision so sudden and rare;
Was it lightning without any thunder?
For answer I climbed the stair.

The rooms were ablaze with glory!
The western windows shone
Like faces in ancient story
When a miracle was done.

With a child's joy in the action
I parted the gleaming gold
And looked beyond the reflection
To the splendor it faintly told.

The beautiful blessed heaven,
Of life the hope and crown,
Seemed half unveiled this even
Where the sun was going down.

I could almost see the faces
I had loved in days agone;
I could almost hear the voices
Of angels about the throne.

The prophet's glowing story
We had listened to that day
Came nearer me with its glory
Then I had dared to pray.

Did it come, this marvellous splendor
In the midst of my twilight dream,
To assure me of love more tender
Than earthly love doth seem?

Or was it the help I needed
Alone with my thought and care,—
A sign that no wish unheeded
God's humblest child can bear?

O, never so near in blessing
Is the love where great worlds swim
As when with a child's caressing
We go alone to Him!

And forever and forever,
I will thank him as now I do,
For this light that shall fade out never,
This vision,—this looking through.

A Remarkable Young Bear.

[Grace Greenwood's Letter to the New York Times.]

Little bruin was an unfortunate, motherless foundling—more unfortunate and more motherless than ever foundling was before, for he never saw his mother and his mother never beheld him. He was emphatically "an unlicked cub"—in fact he was never born at all. An Indian hunter, well armed, came across a monstrous cinnamon bearess, and killed her—and—well, in short, our little bear was a sort of Macduff. He was a native, if that term can be used, of the Rattoon Mountains, in New Mexico. The aboriginal hunter who slew his mother was a Ute. Moved by a strange touch of tenderness, he wrapped up the tiny little creature, and took it into Trinidad, where he sold it to a Philadelphia traveller, Dr. I——, who took a fancy to bring it to his friend, Mrs. M——— of Glen Eyrie. It oddly happened that this lady had always had in the "many mansions" of her great, tender heart, a little house set apart for a pet bear, which had never come to her. Now he was on the way—travelling as fast as the stage coach could carry him. He had to be fed on milk, from a bottle, and when hungry, as was frequently the case, would cry so like a child, that passengers, seeing in the doctor's arms a bundle very like a baby, were moved to gentlest sympathy. At Colorado Springs the doctor had a chance to present his offspring in person. Mrs. M——— graciously received it in a box, which was deposited in the bottom of her carriage. Then she set out for home. But the way was long, the bottle was empty, the bear was hungry, and missed his late guardian. He cried, he whined, he roared, he broke from his box, tore around the carriage, and had to be held by two strong hands. Even at that age this mite of an ursa minor displayed extraordinary strength and spirit. Arrived at the house he was gorged and grateful, and dropped off into a slumber, lying on his back, with all four feet in the air. It was soon found impracticable to bring him up on the bottle, as his fierce appetite caused him to devour the indigestible India rubber tops. He was next taught to drink from his mistress' fingers, laid in a saucer of milk. He would always grasp her hand with both his paws, and hold it firmly till he was through. He was allowed to run freely about the house, and while from the first singularly playful and cunning, was gentle and affectionate. Little Daisy, the loveliest child alive, would trot about with him in her arms. If she squeezed him ever so hard, or pulled his morsel of a tail, he would grunt a little, but never use his teeth or his claws. It was a new and charming little version of Beauty and the Beast. He delighted to play with the three little boys, running, jumping, clambering and tumbling about, in a marvelously jolly and childish way. When it came to climbing trees, after one of them, it was a question whether the bear was most of a boy or the boy most of a bear. He learned easily various tricks, such as walking on his hind legs, and standing on his head. For music he showed a strong liking, preferring that of a lively character. Whenever he heard the piano he would prick up his ears, leave play, his bed, anything but his dinner, go and seat himself beside the player, and listen with all the air of a musical critic. In mischief he surpassed small boys, puppies and monkeys. He delighted to get at a nicely-made bed, and turn it into a "mare's nest." He was the torment of the poor Chinaman's life—slyly creeping into the laundry, and in an instant turning his basket of nicely-ironed clothes topsy-turvy. More than once he reduced Ah Sin to despair and tears. At last he began to make foraging raids into the store-room, and one day was found hemmed over head in a cask of sugar, having "a sweet, refreshing season." Soon after this he was banished to the barn, where, as he frightened the horses and cows, he was chained in his little pen. But he worked at the spring of his chain till he opened it and escaped to the house. He stole in, went directly up stairs, turning the knobs of all the doors that hindered his progress, made his way to the chamber of his mistress, tore all the clothes off the bed, danced and tumbled, and had a high old time generally. Once again he broke jail, and wandered off to parts unknown, and all one night his kind mistress was troubled with fears that some one would find him and sell him to a showman, and that he would grow up a demoralized, vagabond, learned bear. But he returned, like a prodigal son, and humbly licked her hand, and then his own paw, in token of hunger. He showed decided favoritism. On one of the servants, who had been kind to him, he lavished caresses, but always turned a cold bear shoulder on the cook, who had teased him, and objected to his lawless fondness for sugar and pickles. When eating he gave his whole attention to the business, and did not like to be talked to, or interfered with in any way. Over his pan of milk he was as cross as an alderman over his plate of turtle soup. If any one touched it, he would take it up and carry it, growling to the other side of the pen.

One day when he was about four months old, the eldest of the little lads, his favorite comrade, annoyed him by idle fooling, at the supreme moment of solemn feasting, and for all his gentle Christian training, and exclusively human associations he showed a spice of original cinnamon—in fact, turned on his play-fellow and bit him. The boy, in turn, whipped him severely. This was the crisis—poor little bruin was declared dangerous. "Beware, Macduff!" was the cry, and in family council it was resolved to send him from home—to banish him to Manitou. He went with evident reluctance—giving the Irishman who led him no end of trouble. He would stand on his hind feet, and fall back with all his might—then suddenly rush forward and seize Pat by the legs.

Little Macduff, now about six months old, is seeing life and having a tolerably good time at the gay watering place. He is petted be-praised and sugared—he stands erect, and balances on his head for very distinguished people who condescend to laugh at his droll and jolly ways. He has been promoted to a meat diet, but he has not forgotten his old home and earliest friends. When his mistress and the children go over to see him, his bear's heart melts within him. He is overjoyed to see them all, except the lad with whom he had that "little unpleasantness." Him he has not forgiven, and never will forgive, unless the millenium should come, and reconstruct both bear and boy.

Coming Jobs.

[The Nation.]

A year ago we were assured by everybody that the great desire of the farmers of the West was for free trade. They were the real anti-monopolists, who were to break down the protectionists' stronghold. Since the beginning of the farmers' movement, however, it has become every day clearer that free trade makes no part of their programme, which is in reality a descent upon the treasury at Washington for a sufficient sum to enable them to carry their crops to the ocean whether they are wanted there or not. The farmers have, in short, well learnt the only lesson which the politics of the last twenty years has taught, that the true remedy for all economical difficulties was not free trade, but protection. It is protection in transportation which the farmers are going to seek next winter at Washington. The Illinois farmer has seen the salt and coal and iron miner, the cotton and woolen mill owner, the wool grower, and every one engaged in manufactures, when trade was dull, seek his remedy at Washington in a change of the tariff. Thus far these others have managed to do it pretty much at his expense. It was the farmer who was taxed on his blankets, his shoes, his stove, his shirt, his coat, his hat, his stockings, his hoes, rakes, spades, shovels, harness; who was taxed, while he remained a healthy and laborious producer, on everything by which he supported life; if he lost his health, on the medicine which was to restore him to his productive condition again; and if he died, on the very gravestone which covered his body. He has endured this long enough; he has naturally enough determined to see whether the agricultural interest is to be the only non-protected interest in the country. He knows a far simpler way of finding out than by studying the works of Adam Smith. He takes the same means he has seen his neighbors take. He goes to Washington, and there to his surprise finds a vast number of people interested in the question of cheap transportation. One man wishes to have cheap transportation by way of Niagara, another by way of Darien, another by way of the Kanawha valley, another through the heart of Georgia. The President himself, even, is interested in the subject, having recommended "land-locked navigation" in his last annual message. The way is obvious. A judicious system of log rolling is organized, and the result is not that any one of the various schemes succeeds, but they all do; and the farmer goes back to his constituents protected against the market for six months.

The Financial Panic.

The suspension of the Union Trust Company, the National Trust Company and the National Bank of the Commonwealth, runs on the Fourth National and Manhattan banks, the closing of the stock exchange and the failure of eleven firms were the events of the financial panic in New York, Saturday. A defalcation was discovered in the Union Trust Company, and that, with the refusal of the Lake Shore Railroad to pay call loans to a large amount, places the trust company in a very bad condition. On Sunday an important conference was held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel between representative capitalists of New York and President Grant and Secretary Richardson.

The discussion revolved immediately around the direct proposition that the government should loan to the banks of the city the whole reserve in the Treasury, if needed. To this there was a strong opposition on the part of Secretary Richardson, who positively declined to do anything of the sort. The President as firmly backed him in this purpose. Finally, at about noon, the President gave notice that he would entertain no proposition which was not stated distinctly in writing and signed by each capitalist in the conference. Some consternation over this notice ensued, and the conference became more intensely earnest than before. The capitalists present have property valued at $150,000,000.

During dinner the subject of issuing the reserve greenbacks and other plans for relief were discussed at length. The President expressed his willingness to do anything for the relief of the financial community, provided the law would bear him out in so doing. Secretary Richardson was opposed to issuing the reserve greenbacks, because he believed there was no legal authority for it. He said he appreciated the situation the financial world had been thrown into but was unwilling to violate the law to afford relief.

Vanderbilt called on the President and expressed a willingness to advance ten million dollars to the banks provided the President would direct the Secretary of the Treasury to issue $25,000,000. In response to a question put to him, the Commodore said briefly that his mission had been unsuccessful, and added, referring to the President's refusal to authorize the loans to the banks: "He could do it if he wanted to."

President Grant consulted with Hon. Reverdy Johnson, and was advised that there was no legal warranty for issuing the reserve greenbacks, but that as this has become a national calamity, the result of which would be a general suspension thoughout the country, and a prostration unequaled even by the catastrophe of 1857, he thought the exigencies of the time demanded such action.

The President finally decided to buy an unlimited amount of 5 20 bonds at a price not exceeeing par in gold. He will not issue the $44,000,000, greenbacks. On this announcement Jay Gould, who had been urging the President to issue a part of the $44,000,000, declared that the result must be a general breaking-up of all the banks in the country, and a crisis the extent of which no one could foresee.

The Boston Advertiser of Monday says: The outlook for business is still good. Legitimate trade is on a good foundation, the money market has not yet been unfavorably affected, and we believe that after the flurry is over, mercantile business will be even more active than it has been.

State Items.

On the 13th, in Farmington, an incendiary fire burned the stable of Dr. D. T. Parker, with three horses and three carriages and a lot of hay. Loss, $5000; insured, $2,500.

The Republican says that there are four persons in Alstead whose united ages amount to three hundred and seventy-eight years; the youngest, now in his ninety-second year, was seen a few days ago mowing clover with a hand-scythe. Every eighth person in that vicinity is over seventy years of age.

There have been but two deaths in Colebrook within the past eleven months, and one of those was of a man who went into town sick with consumption.

Samuel Knowlton of New London has not been heard from for fourteen years and now writes to say he is not dead, as all supposed, but is farming in California.

On the 17th, in Nashua, George H. Vose suffered serious injuries to his skull by reason of a pulley falling on his head.

On July 4, 1872, Mrs. John Ham, of Canterbury, received a shock during a heavy thunder-shower, rendering her speechless above a whisper. A few days since, on occasion of becoming a mother, her voice was fully restored.

A political essayist once published an essay entitled, "Does Protection Protect?" The Cincinnati "Enquirer", treating of the detectives, of Cincinnati, asks, "Does Detection Detect?" And now the Louisville "Courier-Journal" inquires, "Does Election Elect?"

—A New York paper, in an account of the voyage of the Juniata to Greenland, describes "the effects of blubber on the female form." The effects of female blubber on the male form are known to be melting in the extreme.

—It is said that an Irishman, after he had seen the numerous hills and mountain ranges of New Hampshire, exclaimed, "Be-dad, I never was in a country before where they had so much land that they had to stack it."

—"Ho, mug-gin; ho, mug-gin, from a forin' sho-hore," is the way a Topeka belle renders the words of a popular song.

The yellow fever continues to abate at Sheveport but has attacked Mobile, Ala. The situation of Memphis is encouraging.

An American steamer recently arrived at St. Johns, Newfoundland, reports running down and sinking a fishing schooner bound for Boston, and that only three of the crew of fifteen were saved. No names are given.

Judge Bourne of Kennebunk, well known in legal, literary and historical circles in Maine, is dangerously ill at his home. His term as probate judge expired by limitation of age a few months since. It is thought he took a fatal cold on a recent visit to the White Mountains, where it is well known his daughter Lizzie met her sad death some years since, on the spot where her monument now stands, near the summit of Mount Washington.

The Frog Embroglio.

To the Editor of the Portland Press:

Every friend of law and order must have been gratified with your editorial condemnation of so gross an outrage on public decency as the selection of so notorious desperadoes, Nelse Leighton and his associates in crime, for extemporaneous defenders of a railroad in a squabble with a rival. Everybody in Portland or who has read Portland papers, is familiar with the desperate, dangerous and abandoned character of Leighton, who jauntily testified in the Superior Court yesterday that he is "now in the employment of the Boston & Maine Railroad, watching an uneasy frog"; and the men who put such a character in a position to encourage him to deeds of violence, for which he has a sufficient natural tendency, should be held to a strict accountability to the public.

But I maintain that the whole squabble is unseemly and disgusting, tending directly to debauch and demoralize the public conscience and to degrade the tone of public morals by familiarizing the most ignorant, brutal and dangerously excitable class of our population with scenes of violence and disorder, and is thus manifestly calculated to endanger the general peace and safety. Much has been said about the lingering and far reaching evil effects of the civil war, in letting loose upon society men of low instincts, trained to deeds of violence and blood in the army, and thus ready for robbery, crime and murder when tempted. And yet, here among us, an evening school has been opened, where gangs of our most ignorant and excitable population, many of them foreigners, are receiving nightly lessons in the use of weapons, and taught to realize their own strength and the mighty power of an armed mob, concentrated upon one object. Can a more hazardous experiment be ventured upon at a time when the tendency to anarchy and violence is so extreme as to overturn the semblance of law and order in whole nations, to bring a reign of terror close to a large part of the United States, and to multiply crime beyond all former precedent in our own State?

I was a spectator of the doings of Wednesday evening on Commercial street, and in my judgment the events of that night have sown the seeds of many riots, crimes and perhaps murders, by making lawlessness respectable in the eyes of our most dangerous class. Providentially, we have thus far been preserved from any actual collision between the retainers of three different roads, which like the lordly and insolent barons of feudal times seem to defy the law and the sovereign and demand neutrality from the lawful authorities of the land while they prepare to fight out their own quarrels with their own armed servants and rascals. But there is no security that actual conflict and bloodshed may not at any time occur between the ignorant and excited bullies or workmen of the different factions, and when this happens we may be prepared for the speedy advent of an era like that when the champions of the red and the blue deluged the race course at Constantinople, or when the church of St. Sophia flowed with the blood of Homoiousian and Homoiousian priests.

Let but the first drop of blood be spilled by Leighton or any other captain of the host, in this railroad war and, who can estimate the magnitude of the consequences? Who can set bounds to the ferocity of opposing gangs of infuriated foreigners? Who can guaranty the citizens against midnight assaults and arson, or the travelling public against obstructed tracks and misplaced switches?

The writer has long believed that corporate insolence and insubordination will eventually arouse the people to confiscate all the railroads to the State, paying the owners a fair price for their property, and he appeals to the present condition of affairs in this city as one of the times pointing to the rapid approach of that result.

Rival Hotels.

A correspondent of the Chicago Tribune says:—Once Beau Hickman went over to New York and put up at the St. Nicholas. Knowing the rules of the house he went early on Monday morning, and as customary, on Saturday received his bill. Watching until no one was in the office but a rather innocent-looking clerk, Beau went up with the bill in hand, and, in a towering rage, demanded to know if it was the custom of the house to insult its guests by presuming they would not pay when they left, and sending his bill like that,—throwing his on the desk. The clerk explained, and, mistaking Beau for the famous Pennsylvania Congressman John Hickman, apologized, assured him no offence was meant, and that he could pay when he went away. Beau was mollified, and presented the clerk with a fifty cent cigar. Before the next week was out, on Friday, Hickman asked Gen. Wm. Bailey, of Louisiana, whom he knew very well, and who was stopping at the house, to loan him $400 for one hour. The General did so, and Beau, getting a $500 note, walked into the office of the St. Nicholas and offered to pay his bill. Of course the clerk could not readily change so large a note, and Hickman, remarking he was going to stay, and the bill could be paid any time, passed upstairs, and, handing Bailey the note, thanked him cordially for the loan of the money. No bill was sent him the next Saturday, nor the next. He was now in the fourth week of his board at the St. Nicholas, and, as his arrears were becoming large, the clerk felt it his duty to call the attention of the proprietor to the matter. He spoke of Beau as the "Hon. Mr. Hickman;" but the proprietor on examining the register, recognized the name "R. L. Hickman," as that of the famous Washington "dead beat." He cursed the clerk for his stupidity; but cursing would not square the ledger, and, sending for Beau, he made him the following proposition: "Hickman, if you will go over the street, and beat the Metropolitan out of a month's board, you can come back here and we will dead-head you for another month." Beau accepted the offer, and when his month was out he took his baggage, hired a fine carriage at the expense of the St. Nicholas to tell the proprietor he was getting on nicely at the Metropolitan, and would smoke a cigar at the expense of the St. Nicholas.

He worried through a month without pay, and then there was a row at the Metropolitan. Knowing the hostility between the two hotels, Beau mildly suggested to the Metropolitan man that, if it would be any gratification to him, he would go over and beat the St. Nicholas out of a month's board on condition that he would beat the other fellow. Calling a carriage, he drove round the square again, and put up at the St. Nicholas; and, when the month was up once more, passed over the street and stopped at the Metropolitan for thirty days.

The Doomed Oyster.

[Boston Globe.]

The patient oyster can count no longer upon remaining in his bed unmolested of man, for the months containing the rolling R have been inaugurated, and the days of the doomed bivalve are numbered. He will soon be torn ruthlessly from his muddy home to soothe the eager palates of those who have anxiously counted the weary days that elapsed between the 30th of April and the 31st of August. It is now over three hundred years since old Butler said: "It is unseasonable and unwholesome in all months that have not an R in their name to eat an oyster;" and from that time to the present this axiom has carried weight. But such is the insatiable greed of the ostreophagist that he has attempted to anticipate the term of the oyster's inedibility by especially suggesting that August should be spelled Orgust, but the laws of orthography and the cravings of gluttony have never been able to come to a satisfactory agreement on this point. But the wished-for period is now at hand when the victim will be rudely wrenched from its repose and brought forth to the sacrifice. The insidious knife will force an entrance into the stubborn castle wherein the hapless creature dwells, and man will gloat with sensuous eyes and watery mouth upon its form, as it lies there in outraged nakedness. Its opalescent tears will touch no heart with any glow of pity, as it lies panting in its irridescent shell, worn with its struggles. Man allows the oyster no rights which he is bound to respect. Its nacreous home is invaded, and its pearly brow is drowned in ruddy catsup ere life has fled. Forks are cruelly stuck into it, and salt and vinegar sprinkled over it with lavish hand. It is deluged with lemon juice, and sighs away its life in the midst of torturing pepper without remorse. Providence River, Norfolk, Prince's Bay and Saddle Rock meet all with the same untoward fate. Even the delicate Shrewsbury, the brunette of oysters, whose pulpy cheek displays the faintest blush of aureate tint, as it lies a thing of beauty before its enemy, arouses no sympathy by its helplessness, but goes the way of its companions. The wrongs of the oyster call aloud for vengeance. It has borne without remonstrance centuries of woe, and has failed even to move the soul of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The case is a sad one, indeed. In the meanwhile it is gratifying to know that this year oysters promise to be unusually fat and palateable.

—The Philadelphia Herald, whose recent attempt at ballooning was successful, at least so far as making an ascension was concerned, announces its intention to have another ascension in about four weeks, "to test, in as scientific manner as possible, a recent invention in ballooning, which should it prove successful, will not only revolutionize all existing methods of ballooning, but make aerial navigation of practical value as a means of cheap and rapid transit."

—Potato-bugs is the name Minnesotians give to politicians seeking office through the aid of the farmers' movement. Humbugs, others call them.

Cure of Consumption.

[L. Long, M. D.]

I wish to say a few words to "whom it may concern," on the use of the swing—one of the gymnastic exercises—as a preventive and cure of pulmonary disease. I mean the suspending of the body by the hands by means of a rope or chain fastened to a beam at one end, and at the other a stick three feet long, convenient to grasp with the hands. The rope should be fastened to the center of the stick, which should hang six or eight inches above the head. Let a person grasp this stick, with the hands two or three feet apart and swing very moderately at first—perhaps only bear the weight, if very weak—and gradually increase, as the muscles gain strength from the exercise, until it may be freely used from three to five times daily. The connection of the arms with the body (with the exception of the clavicle, with the sternum or breastbone) being a muscular attachment to the ribs, the effect of this exercise is to elevate the ribs and enlarge the chest; and, as nature allows no vacuum, lungs expand to fill the cavity, increasing the volume of air—the natural purifier of the blood—and preventing the congestion or the deposit of tuberculous matter. I have prescribed the above for all cases of hemorrhage of the lungs and threatened consumption for thirty five years, and have been able to increase the measure of the chest from two to four inches within a few months, and always with good results. But especially as a preventive I would reccommend this exercise. Let those who love life cultivate a well formed capacious chest. The student, the merchant, the sedentary, the young of both sexes—aye all, should have a swing upon which to stretch themselves daily; and I am morally certain that if this were to be practised by the rising generation in a dress allowing a free and full development of the body, thousands, would be saved from the ravages of that opprobrium medicorum, consumption.

—The Sharon Herald, noticing the return of the "Black Crook," wisely remarks: "This is a superfluous performance while the crossings are so muddy."

—Scientific journals say that milk decreases according to the amount of rain. Common people find that the reverse is often the case.

Business Notices.

So successful has Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery proven, as a constitutional treatment for Catarrh, when coupled with the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, applied locally by the use of Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche (the only method of reaching the upper and back cavities of the head,) that the proprietor of these medicines has long offered a standing reward of $500 for a case of Catarrh which he cannot cure. Out of Health.

In this common expression is comprehended an immense amount of bodily and mental suffering. It is not necessary to be affected with positive disease in order to experience unutterable wretchedness. A person out of health is weak, languid, low spirited, incapable of much exertion, nervous, irritable, and as sensitive to every change of temperature as the mercury in a thermometer. What such a person requires is invigoration, and Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will supply it. No need of applying to a physician in such a case. The fee would be thrown away. At the nearest drug store may be had the most efficient and healthful vegetable tonic that the world contains. Twenty-five years' experience has established the fact that among all the stomachics and alteratives known to modern pharmacy this powerful restorative stands supreme, unapproached. Every bottle of Hostetter's Bitters contains more blessings than there were curses in Pandora's box.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. Wise use them and know their value.—(Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.)

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic-rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & CO., 53 Broadway, New York.

Castoria is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

The Northern Pacific Railroad.

This road is intended to extend from Lake Superior to Puget Sound, 1800 miles, with a branch to Portland, Oregon, 200 miles. At the end of the present year there were to be in operation from Lake Superior to the Missouri river 453 miles, and from Columbia river to Puget Sound, 106 miles. The road was chartered by Congress on the 2d of July, 1864. Congress made a grant estimated to amount to 47,000,000 acres of alternate sections of land for forty miles on each side of the line of road. The idea of the railroad was its identity with the St. Lawrence, the upper Missouri and the Columbia river, while it crossed the Yellowstone and the Platte. The rolling stock of the road consists of 72 locomotive engines, 16 passenger cars, 6 baggage and mail cars, 4 emigrant cars, 25 dump, 1130 platform freight and 395 box cars; total 1576 cars.

The expenditure has been:

Surveys	$1,091,543
Construction	12,200,600
Rolling stock	1,908,837
Tools, machinery and stock supplies	358,330
Harbor improvements at Duluth	245,063

The authorized share capital of the company is $10,000,000. It was necessary to subscribe $2,000,000 and ten per cent. paid in, before the organization of the company. There is a mortgage upon the company's whole property, including its lands, to secure the payment of bonds, at the rate of $50,000 per mile. These are seven-thirties. The Northern Pacific owns a controlling interest in the stock of the St. Paul and Pacific; it also has taken a lease, or become owners, of the Lake Superior and Mississippi Railroad, extending from St. Paul to Duluth, a distance of 211 miles.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuble is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Local Matters.

To the Citizens of Portsmouth.

The following address is published by order of the Committee appointed at the meeting of the friends of Temperance, Saturday evening, Sept. 20th:

A large number of men and women who reside in this city, seeing and deploring the evil influences that emanate from the illegal and unrestricted sale of liquors in our midst, and lamenting the demand which keeps pace with the increasing supply of these deadly poisons, petitioned the Board of Aldermen to enforce the law that stands upon our satute book against the sale of intoxicating liquors.

An attentive hearing was had upon the petition, and at its close the Aldermen voted "Not to enforce the Liquor Law."

After this vote had been declared it was voted by the Aldermen to call a meeting of the citizens Tuesday, September 23d, to vote upon the following question:

"Shall the law relative to the sale of spirituous liquors be enforced?" This was not the request of the petitioners; we simply asked the Mayor and Aldermen to enforce the law. As temperance men we are not called upon to vote this law up or down.

Therefore we recommend that all Temperance men refuse to vote on this question for the following reasons:

1st. The meeting is illegal.

2d. Voting cannot affect the law or the enforcement of it.

3d. A vote to refuse to enforce the law is rebellion against the State.

4th. For Temperance men to vote is absurd, as they ask nothing more than the enforcement of the law.

5th. The Aldermen of our city have no more right to demand of our citizens a vote upon this question, than upon the law against murder or theft.

We call upon the Pastors and membership of our churches, and all temperance men and women to push on the column until public sentiment shall be aroused and put its hand upon the throat of this dread monster—Intemperance.

REV. J. A. GOSS, REV. A. C. HARDY,
DR. C. A. NORTON, DR. A. P. STEVENS, Committee.

P. & D. R. R.

The first passenger train over this Road left this city for Piscataqua bridge at 4 o'clock, Monday afternoon. By invitation of President Frank Jones, Ex-Governor Goodwin, Mayor Marvin, Ex-Mayor Fernald, members of the Board of Aldermen and other prominent citizens took passage, filling one car. The first stop was made at North Portsmouth, where the new road crosses the highway. The residents of North Portsmouth desire an overhead bridge to be built at this crossing. The officers of the Road oppose this, stating that it will cost $15,000, for which there is no money. They have intended to locate a depot at this crossing, station a flag-man at the gate and dig away the hill so that trains can be seen coming either way—the gravel from the hill to be used in filling for the wharves at Noble's island. The crossing is at the foot of a steep hill and is dangerous in any contingency, but whether it is less dangerous with a bridge than a clear crossing is for the Board of Mayor and Aldermen to decide. The sum of $15,000 seems rather large for a bridge of the required length, but if it costs $10,000 it would seem too expensive for the object desired. By widening the highway on the hill, which is being done, enough space will be afforded to turn a two-horse team and drive away from approaching trains, if the driver be skillful. The gentlemen who visited the crossing were divided in opinion as to the necessity of a bridge.

After discussing the pros and cons, the train took the party to Newington, stopping at Piscataqua bridge. The route abounds in beautiful scenery, the train passing along the river side most of the way. The Road is well graded, being in better condition than the Wolfeboro' branch was when the editorial party first passed over it. The tide was rushing out of Great Bay when the train arrived and the big rocks which were being sunk from schooners for the base of abutments seemed to make no perceptible impression in the deep soundings. The truss between the completed parts of the bridge is to be 190 feet long, and passengers on the P. & D. trains will doubtless feel relieved after going over it. It will save the bridge much wear in the winter from the ice.

The train on the return backed the excursionists into the Eastern depot, after an absence of eighty minutes.

The Marginal Railway.

The charter of the Portsmouth Marginal Railroad has been secured, and now is the time for all interested parties to move in its construction. All owners of wharves certainly are pecuniarily interested enough to afford to give the right of way over their wharves, at least, if not to build the track also, because with this track, their wharves are valuable, and without it, they are of little value, comparatively, for every thing that comes in or goes out on the railroads, by way of the wharves, because of the expense of trucking. They cannot compete with the Concord and Eastern wharves. This much seems so plain that no argument is needed for any business man to see it.

Then as soon as this road is built down as far as South street, all that section of the town is as eligible for manufactories, as the north and west end of the town, because there will be needed so little trucking, as the railroad comes almost to their doors. Then as soon as a few manufactories are built on South street, that beautiful street, (than which none is more so in Portsmouth,) will be lined with new houses. The different business men and real estate owners on the line of the Marginal railroad and on South street and vicinity can afford, as a sensible business transaction, to subscribe for all of the stock, if the stock, as such, never pays a cent of dividend, just as they would build a causeway to a valuable field, because they could not get to the field without it. The rise of the value of houses and lands on Water and South streets and vicinity will increase from twenty-five to fifty per cent., and some, one hundred or more; business men and land and house owners on the line of this road and South street and vicinity, will be made richer by the building of it. As all will be made richer, so all of them should subscribe for stock in the road, if it's not more, in some instances, than half of a share each, so as to contribute their part towards the enterprise, that will benefit all of these parties.

River Thieves.

Saturday night, schooner Lucy Amelia, at Newcastle, was robbed of rigging and other articles of value. Her mainsail was also destroyed, being cut about forty yards in the centre.

A wherry was stolen last week from Mr. Freeman Hurd, at the Adams place, near Portsmouth bridge. The entrance to the boat house was effected by boring holes through the boarding.

As usual, while the fishing fleet was in the lower harbor, gardens near the shore were robbed and great damage done. It is extremely probable that the fishermen are the guilty parties in the above depredations.

Presentation.

At a special meeting of Dearborn steam fire engine company, No. 1, on Monday evening, Mr. Owens, of Boston, and Mr. Garrity, of this city, made an unexpected call upon the boys, and the former, in behalf of Mr. Martin Garrity, presented Capt. Shannon with a splendid front piece and belt, very neatly made and appropriately inscribed. Capt. S., although taken completely by surprise, quickly recovered himself, and responded in a few happy remarks, cordially thanking the gentlemen and assuring them that the tokens of friendly esteem would ever be held in grateful remembrance.

Laconics.

The Shoals steamers have stopped running.

The Newburyport Herald says the Odd Fellows had a grand time here last Friday.

E. M. Leslie, formerly manager of the Boston Comedy Company, died in Rochester, Monday.

The new ship, Frank Jones, will be launched this (Tuesday) afternoon at 3 o'clock, from Neil's ship yard, near the navy yard bridge.

Mr. Wm. Moses, of Sagamore Creek, has sent us two varieties of beautiful pears, the Flemish Beauty and Dearborn Seedling, grown upon a mountain ash tree.

At a special meeting of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Monday evening, Mayor Marvin was chosen to preside at the town meeting to-day. The polls will be open from 3 to 8 P. M.

Those who did not see "Shin Fane," last evening, missed heaps of fun. A farce and "The Fastest Boy in New York" are on the programme for to-night, with the inimitable Riggs as Con. Kennedy. The company is an excellent one, and a full house is deserved.

This is the all important day when the citizens of Portsmouth are invited by the board of Mayor and Aldermen to call around at the State street ward room, at two o'clock and sixty minutes, P. M., to express their opinion whether it is best for the aforesaid Mayor and Aldermen to enforce the law which their oaths of office make a duty, however disagreeable it may be.

Mark H. Wentworth, Esq., in a communication of the 17th inst., to Mr. Prescott, Secretary of State, signifies his intention to present to the State the portraits of Lieut Gov. John Wentworth, Governor Benning Wentworth, and Governor John Wentworth, at the earliest practicable moment he can get them copied. The original portraits are now in the Wentworth mansion The first two are full length and were painted in elegant style by J. Blackborne, while the other is a bust portrait, painted by Copley. This will be a valuable gift to the State, and the generosity of Mr. Wentworth will be fully appreciated.

Dry Up.

[Portland Press.]

The streams in New Hampshire are dry beyond their custom at this season. "Dian's Baths" afford that highly punctilious goddess less facilities for ablution than she would enjoy at a third-class city hotel; while farther up the falls are all reduced to their least common denominator and labelled cask-aids, obviously because anybody with the aid of a cask of water could produce one for himself. Portsmouth Chronicle.

—A correspondent of the Country Gentleman has discovered that, as a law of nature, every spotted dog has the end of his tail white, and every spotted cat the end of his tail black. He says he has examined many dogs and cats in France, England and America, and always noticed the same result. Our former minister to Japan, Mr. Harris, first mentioned the fact concerning the dog in a letter published some years since. He has looked at many paintings of dogs in the galleries of Paris and elsewhere in regard to this, and found even there the dogs spotted, always in order, proving to him that the artist had invariably copied after nature.

—"Rules to govern people who are drowning" are published at length in a Milwaukee paper. This is a good idea and should be followed by several similar codes, such as "Directions for ladies and gentlemen blown up in a steamboat;" "Guide for the victims of a railway collision;" "System to be pursued by aeronauts who fall from their balloons;" "The whole duty of man after a nitro-glycerine explosion;" "Regulations to be followed by all persons struck by lightning;" and "Proper deportment during a rapid descent from a sixth-story window."

—A thirsty traveller called at a Hoosac Tunnel "drug store" for a glass of soda, not long ago, and requested the addition of a little brandy to increase its cooling properties. It was creosote which the clerk put in, either by accident, or because that is the stuff usually sold for brandy to the tunnel laborers. Medical aid saved the man's life, but he is a total abstainer now, not only from brandy, but from pretty much everything else, while nature puts his internal organization in shape for future service.

—Rev. James Welch, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, isn't the least bit of a pedant. He spells Jesus with a little "g."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE. SIX BOTTLES, $5.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaints, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood,

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Many skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

will be interested in the law which we publish for their edification:

AN ACT to provide for the storage, sale, and inspection of petroleum and its products.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened:

SECTION 1. The Mayor and Aldermen of every city, and the Selectmen of every town of more than fifteen hundred inhabitants, and of every town of less than fifteen hundred inhabitants, upon the written application of five or more citizens of such town therefor, shall appoint annually one or more suitable persons, not interested in the sale of crude petroleum, or in the sale or manufacture of petroleum, earth rock oil, or in any of their products, to be inspector or inspectors thereof in said city or town, and fix their compensation, to be paid by persons requiring their services under the provisions of this Statute, and who, before entering upon the duties of their office, shall be duly sworn. Any inspector guilty of fraud, deceit, or culpable negligence in the performance of his duties, shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the County jail or house of correction, not exceeding one month, or by both in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 2. No person shall mix for sale naptha and illuminating oils, or shall sell or offer for sale such mixtures, or shall sell or offer for sale, except for purposes of remanufacture, illuminating oils, or compounds made from coal or petroleum, which will evaporate a gas under one hundred degrees Farenheit, or ignite at a temperature of less than one hundred and ten degrees Farenheit; to be ascertained by the application of Tagliabue's, or some other appoved instrument; and any person so doing shall, for each offense, be punished by fine of not less than one hundred dollars, or imprisonment as in first section hereof; and shall also be liable therefor to any person suffering damage from the explosion or ignition of such oil thus unlawfully sold or kept, or offered for sale; and such oil or compounds thus unlawfully sold or kept, or offered for sale, and the casks or packages containing the same, shall be forfeited and sold,—one half of the proceeds of such sale to go to the State, and the other half to the informer.

SEC. 3. For all the purposes of this act, all illuminating oils or compounds made from coal or petroleum, having an igniting point of less than one hundred and ten degrees Fahrenheit, to be determined in the manner provided in the second section of this act, shall be deemed to be mixed with naptha, and shall be branded unsafe for illuminating purposes.

SEC. 4. Any person who shall sell or keep, or offer for sale, naptha under any false or assumed name, shall for each offence, upon conviction thereof, be liable to the same penalties provided, and shall be subject to the same liabilities set forth, in the second section of this act.

SEC. 5. Crude petroleum or any of its products, may be stored, kept, manufactured, or refined, in detached and properly ventilated buildings, specially adapted to the purpose, and surrounded by an embankment constructed so as to effectually prevent the overflow of said petroleum or any of its products beyond the premises on which the same may be kept, manufactured, or refined; said buildings to be occupied in no part as a dwelling; and if less than fifty feet from any other buildings, must be separated therefrom by a stone or brick wall, at least ten feet high and twelve inches thick; and any person keeping such articles in any other kind of building, except as is hereinafter provided in the sixth section hereof, shall be punished by fine or imprisonment in the manner provided in the second section hereof.

SEC. 6. No person shall manufacture, refine, mix, store, or keep for sale any oil or fluid composed wholly or in part of any of the products of petroleum, in any city or town, except as provided in the fifth section of this act, without a license first having been obtained from the mayor and aldermen of said city, or the selectmen of said town; and in said license there shall be expressed the manner and the portion of any locality or building in which said articles may be mixed, stored, or kept; and whoever mixes, stores, or keeps said articles in any one locality, except as aforesaid, without having first obtained a license as herein required, or having obtained such license, mixes, stores, or keeps such articles in a different manner, or in any other portion of said locality or building than is expressed in said license, shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars, to be recovered in any appropriate form of action, to be instituted in the name of the mayor of said city, or of the selectmen of said town: one half to go to the State, and one half to the informer; and the license granted in accordance with the provisions of this act shall continue to be in force from the time of granting the same until the first day of April next succeeding, unless sooner revoked; and said license shall be revokable at all times by the authorities granting the same.

SEC. 7. Upon complaint made to the justice of any municipial or police court, or to a justice of the peace, by the mayor, or by an alderman of any city, or by a selectman of any town, or by an inspector appointed under the provisions of this act, or an engineer of a fire department, fire ward, chief of police, or city marshal, that he has probable cause to suspect, and does suspect, that any of the articles enumerated in this act are offered for sale, or are deposited and kept within the limits of said city or town, contrary to the provisions of this act, said justice or court may issue a warrant directed to any such inspector, engineer, or fire-ward, or to any sheriff, deputy-sheriff, constable, or police officer, ordering him to enter any shop, warehouse, manufactory, or any other building specified in the warrant, to make diligent search for such article or articles suspected to be so offered for sale, deposited, or kept, and to make return of his doings to said justice or court forthwith.

SEC. 8. None of the articles enumerated in this act shall be allowed to remain in any street, lane, alley, or travelled way, or upon any wharf, or in any yard, or on the grounds of any railroad corporation in any city, for a longer time than twenty-four hours, and in any town for a longer time than forty-eight hours, without a special permit from the mayor and aldermen of said city, or the selectmen of said town, or from some person by them duly authorized; and any and all persons so keeping such articles for a longer time, shall be punished by a fine of not more than fifty dollars for each and every offence.

SEC. 9. No person shall sell, or keep for sale, or in storage, any crude or refined petroleum, naptha, kerosene, earth rock, machinery or illuminating oil, in any city or town, without having the same inspected and approved by authorized inspector. And any person violating the provisions of this section shall be fined and imprisoned in the manner provided in the second section of this act.

Pattee's Confession.

William S. Pattee, who murdered his wife last week at New Hampton, says that during Saturday night Mrs. Pattee got up and prayed and sang in an adjoining room; then she went back to bed. She had a light in her hand.

Placing the light on a table she approached the bed and catching Pattee by the whiskers said: "Now I will beard the lion in his den." Pattee instantly caught her, putting one hand over her mouth and the other over her nose. He also run his finger down her throat, and she bit it, leaving the scar. In that manner he held her until she became still. He supposed she had fainted. He got up and took the light and holding it near her face discovered she was dead. He was horror-struck at the situation, and for some moments at a perfect loss to know what to do. At length he hit upon the suicide idea, and thought he could so dispose of the body as to convince persons that she had taken her own life. He then procured a rope, and placing it around the neck of Mrs. Pattee, carried the body to the closet. After hanging it up he left it in the manner in which it was found by the neighbors on Sunday morning.

He could not tell the exact time of night when he killed her. After disposing of the body he returned to make up the bed. While he was choking his wife the blood came from her nose and besmeared his hands. In the struggle both fell on to the side of the bed, and the pillow case got stained with blood; when he went to make up the bed he noticed the bloody pillow and took off the case and concealed it, and that accounts for the pillow case being missed when the search was made on Sunday morning. After the body had been hung up and the bed arranged, Pattee passed some time in endeavoring to discover and obliterate any trace which might remain of the murder. Then in the awful stillness and solemnity of the night, he sat down in the room adjoining the closet where hung the bruised body of his wife, and remained there an hour or more till the morning came.

At Montgomery, Ala., in order to keep the sidewalks free from loafers they smear the adjacent curb-stones with tar. The effect is said to be excellent.

A few days ago a hackman at Niagara Falls walked half way across the river on Signor Bellini's rope, indulged in some gymnastic feats, and finished his journey by walking backward. He had never shown much aptitude for such exploits, and yet his performance is said to excel anything of the kind ever seen.

The Bangor Whig says that the present prospect is indicative of an almost inactive winter with the Penobscot lumbermen, upon whom the past season, which has been so unfavorable to the business, has had a depressing effect. The small demand for lumber has left them with a considerable stock on hand, and the severe drought has prevented the manufacture of the entire quantity of logs cut last winter, so they intend doing only a limited business.

Option.

(Nashua Telegraph.)

The mayor and aldermen of Portsmouth have decided, after a full hearing, to take the sense of the voters of that city on the question of enforcing the liquor law. We infer from this action that the mayor and aldermen of Portsmouth are laboring under the impression that Gov. Straw's local option recommendation was adopted by the legislature and is now the supreme law of the State. Evidently Portsmouth is a good missionary field for the Secretary of State, and he should send a copy of the Laws of last June, and a copy of the General Statutes as well, down among the Strawberry-bankers as quickly as steam and the express will take them.

Presidential Firmness.

It is so much the fashion in these days of hasty speech and hasty action to see and speak only of the evil side of human character and sometimes to bring our rulers into contempt, it is certainly refreshing and very profitable to call the attention of the public to the noble acts of our President, and the Secretary of the Treasury. In more than twenty forms, the urgent appeal was made to them to issue the reserved fund. "No. But we will buy our own indebtedness at par," was the answer.

Noble men to go in person to the scene of difficulty and danger instead of sending deputies and messengers. That little word "No" at such a moment gives new assurance and comfort to the whole nation.

The Congregational Annual.

LACONIA, Sept. 16.

The annual meeting of the General Association of Congregational and Presbyterian ministers, took place here at 10 o'clock this morning. The sermon was by Rev. W. J. Tucker, of Manchester, upon the text (Phil. 3:10) "That I may know him and the power of his resurrection," &c. Topic: "The kind of knowledge of God, necessary to growth in piety." It was an able discourse, and secured the close attention of a large audience.

In the afternoon, Rev. H. A. Hazen gave a report upon the state of the churches. The agents of various benevolent societies were then called upon and the wants of the seamen were presented by Rev. S. W. Hanks; the claims of the American Tract Society, by Rev. F. B. Perkins; the Bible Society by Messrs. Willey and Gilbert; the American Missionary Association, by Rev. Mr. Woodworth; and foreign missions, by Rev. W. Warren, who stated that the expense of collecting the funds, and expending them in foreign lands had been about seven per cent. of the amount contributed.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 17.

At 8 o'clock the association met for business. They discussed the question, how to aid the feeble churches in the support of their pastors,—revised the constitution, and took measures to appoint delegates to the Evangelical Alliance, which is soon to meet in New York, From 9 to 10 o'clock was occupied in devotional exercises, conducted by Rev. Mr. Blake, of Nashua.

At 10, Rev. Mr. Nack presented claims of the orphan's home, at Franklin, N. H.

Rev. Mr. Chase, of the Methodist Church, reported the members of that body, in the State, to be over 14,000; average salary of ministers $706! The different forms of skepticism and the means by which they were to be met were discussed by Messrs. Alvord, Pierce, Scott, Sawyer and Smith. In the afternoon the N. H. Educational Society held its Annual meeting, Dr. A. Tobey presiding.

The Trustees of the association for the relief of ministers and widows, in want reported and urged the claims of that cause.

Rev. Mr. Gerould opened a discussion upon the question, "How are the hearers of the gospel to be enlisted in the Sabbath Schools?" He was followed by several others giving the results of their experience in this work. Several advocated the plan of having but one sermon, and giving half of the day to the Sabbath School.

THURSDAY, Sept. 18.

The Association met punctually for business.

At 9, the N. H. Missionary So. held its Annual meeting. The Secretary, Dr. W. Clark, and the Treasurer, Hon. L. D. Stevens, presented their reports. But the more important business of the Society was deferred till the next meeting, which is to be at Concord, October 23d.

The closing sermon was by Rev. Mr. Alvord, of Nashua, upon (Jn. 10:25) "I told you and ye believed not." After the communion, the association adjourned to the 3d Tuesday of Sept., 1874, in Exeter.

The Diana's Arctic Voyage.

A few days ago tidings were published of the progress of the English yacht Diana, on her North Polar exploration via Spitzbergen. The Diana is a powerful screw steamer specially fitted to the battle with the Arctic ices, and is under the command of the veteran explorer, Mr. Leigh Smith. At the last accounts, dated July 4, the Diana was in the very bay where Parry left the Hecla, in 1828, to make his celebrated treadmill journey on the ice northward, and where Mr. Smith was then awaiting the close of the ice-drift season to force his way, if possible, to the Pole itself. This daring endeavor is one of the most promising now in progress to enter the mysterious region of the Arctic basin. Spitzbergen may be regarded as a narrow neck of land between two great oceans—the Circumpolar and the Atlantic. On the western side the great Polar, or ice-bearing current, descends to lower latitudes, while off the eastern coast the warm drift of the Gulf Stream water distinctly reveals itself to the thermometer. Ships which have been beset in ice between Spitzbergen and Greenland have been found to drift to the southwest at the rate of 182 miles in thirteen days, 120 miles in fourteen days, and 1,300 miles in 108—i. e., at an average rate of 12 miles a day. Early in July, as during the winter and spring, this water maintains the frigid conditions over northern and western Spitzbergen; but the summer sun soon after becomes too powerful, and the temperature rises very high. On the 16th of July, 1861, Bloomstrand found the mercury over 60 degrees Fahrenheit in that latitude, and by the last of July or the 10th of August the weather is unusually warm, and, what is more for the explorer, the liquefaction of the ice is nearly over and the seas are comparatively open. Parry declared, after having been baffled in July, 1828, (by the ice on which his sledges traveled moving southward as fast as he moved northward) that on the 10th of August the seas were iceless, and if he had only waited till then to make a ship voyage he believed he could have made the highest latitude attainable. There can be little doubt that if the great navigator at the close of the ice-drift (which had previously baffled and worn him out) could—say on the 5th of August, 1828, have stepped on board a powerful screw steamer like the Diana, he would have met little or no ice obstruction, and, so far as ice-drift was concerned, might have steamed in a few days to the Pole itself, in the interim of the complete breaking up of the old ice and the formation of the autumnal ice. What Parry could apparently have done so easily with a steamer, and what he himself declared he could have easily done, in 1828, if he had known that the ice-drift was over in August, it seems highly probable Mr. Leigh Smith will now do, and, after all, it may yet be our privilege to announce that the North Pole has been reached by mariners.

Fido in Paris.

All over Europe the love of dogs among all sexes is remarkable, although they are made to work in Switzerland and some parts of Germany. Here in Paris it is quite common to see a mother dragging her almost infant child by the hand, weary and fretful, and carrying a dog in her arms, which she will occasionally stop to kiss, or dispose of so as to make it more comfortable. This trait is peculiar to no one class, but all seem to have a strong affection for the dog. To see a lady at her door or window without a lap-dog is almost a novelty, while many of them carry in their arms or lead them by a ribbon in the streets. The corners are posted with handbills of hospitals for dogs, where the best medical attendance can be had, and dog medicines and dog soaps are placarded in all directions. On the boulevards at night the dealers in dogs are constantly perambulating with two or three pups in their arms, and ladies will stop and bargain for them on the thoroughfare. They teach them all manner of tricks, and they are valued according to the education they have received and the intelligence they display. When they travel they take a nurse with them to attend to the wants and comforts of the dog, and these nurses can be seen in the public squares airing and exercising the dogs and leading them by ribbons. Some idea of the extent of this dog-mania may be judged by the fact that the dog-tax paid into the Treasury last year was 420,000 francs, or nearly $100,000. The men, also, have their dogs, but not to such a great extent as females. They are mostly beautiful little animals, as white as snow, and are kept scrupulously clean, more care being evidently bestowed on them in this respect than many of the children receive from their mothers.

Lives Rescued by a Dog.

A number of years ago, a vessel was driven on the beach of Lydd, in Kent, England. The sea was rolling furiously. Eight poor fellows were crying for help; but a boat could not be got off, through the storm, to their assistance, and they were in constant peril, for any moment the ship was in danger of sinking. At length a gentleman came along the beach accompanied by his Newfoundland dog. He directed the animal's attention to the vessel, and put a short stick in his mouth. The intelligent and courageous dog at once understood his meaning, sprang into the sea, and fought his way through the angry waves towards the vessel. He could not, however, get close enough to deliver that with which he was charged; but the crew understood what was meant, and they made fast a rope to another piece of wood, and threw it towards him. The noble animal at once dropped his own piece of wood, and immediately seized that which had been thrown to him; and then, with a degree of strength and determination scarcely credible—for he was again and again lost under the waves—he dragged it through the surge and delivered it to his master. A line of communication was thus formed with the vessel, and every man on board was rescued.

The Railroad Quarrel.

Messrs. Editors:—In your edition of Tuesday you quote an editorial from the Portland Press relative to the disgraceful features of the railroad squabble at that place in which the editor says "the other road took a manly and dignified course." Inasmuch as most of your numerous readers are more or less interested in the several railways in this vicinity will you please enlighten us a little further on the subject?

STOCKHOLDER.

We can do no better than to further quote from the Portland Press "the hiring of a crowd of the worst roughs in the city by the Boston & Maine to do their fighting for them, called forth very generally strong expressions of disapprobation. Merchants who have hitherto been warm partisans of that road were very severe in their criticisms of that procedure. It is said on good authority that rocks were carried into the building at the head of Smith's Wharf, ready for use in the expected fight. It is also reported that the roughs were paid fifty cents an hour, or six dollars a night. Last night a crowd similar in character to the night before, though fewer in numbers, watched the frog, and an engine with a platform car in front stood on the Boston & Maine rails ready for action if trouble occurred."

"The other road" referred to is the Eastern railroad.

—In Pottsville, when anything happens, the people consider that a religious duty devolves upon them to hold a meeting and to pass resolutions upon it; and so strong has this habit become that some citizens of the place, whenever the breakfast bell rings, call a meeting of the family, elect officers, and resolve to go down stairs and eat the meal. The other day a woman fell into the canal and sank. A large crowd of men were standing upon the bank at the time, and they instantly proceeded to organize a meeting for the purpose of devising means for rescuing the woman. After a spirited debate, a man named Collins was elected chairman; and, on taking his seat, Mr. Collins not only thanked the meeting very warmly for the compliment offered him, but he made a long speech, in which he discussed the tariff, the coal product for 1871, and the Alabama claims. A series of resolutions were then offered, and after a prolonged discussion and the acceptance of several amendments, they were passed. They embraced a protest against the depth of the canal, regrets that all women are not taught to swim, and resolve to rescue the particular woman who had fallen overboard. A committee of one was appointed to dive for her. He dove, and brought the woman to the surface by the hair. Just then it occurred to him that he had not been ordered to bring her to shore. So he let her sink again, and swam to the bank to report progress and ask for further instructions. Action was taken upon the report, and after an exciting discussion he was directed to land the woman immediately. He dove again and dragged her out. None of the women in Pottsville can hold their breath more than an hour and a half at a time, so when this one was recovered she was dead. The meeting said it was sorry, but it was vastly more important that things should be done decently and in order, and accordingly to rule, than that the life of a woman should be saved. The woman hasn't expressed her views yet.

Business Notices.

So successful has Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery proven, as a scientific medical treatment for Catarrh, when coupled with the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, applied locally by the use of Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche (the only method of reaching the upper and back cavities of the head,) that the proprietor of these medicines has long offered a standing reward of $500 for a case of Catarrh which he cannot cure. Out of Health.

In this common expression is comprehended an immense amount of bodily and mental suffering. It is not necessary to be affected with positive disease in order to experience unutterable wretchedness. A person out of health is weak, languid, low spirited, incapable of much exertion, nervous, irritable, and as sensitive to every change of temperature as the mercury in a thermometer. What such a person requires is invigoration, and Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will supply it. No need of applying to a physician in such a case. The fee would be thrown away. At the nearest drug store may be had the most efficient and healthful vegetable tonic that the world contains. Twenty-five years' experience has established the fact that among all the stomachics and alteratives known to modern pharmacy this powerful restorative stands supreme, unapproached. Every bottle of Hostetter's Bitters contains more blessings than there were curses in Pandora's box.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic-rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & Co., 53 Broadway, New York.

Notice to Church Wardens & Music Committees

MR. E. Q. NORTON, late of Boston, will remain in Portsmouth for the purpose of tuning and repairing Pianos and Organs. Correspondence solicited with churches out of town, having organs needing repairs. Organs rebuilt, raised and tuned in the most thorough manner. Estimates given on jobs, also specifications for new organs. Churches about to buy will save money by consulting me, as I am under the control of no maker and work for the interest of the party buying. Piano and reed organ work a specialty. Instruments selected. Orders may be left at Foster's Book Store, Congress Block.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuble is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find those desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Local Matters.

The Town Meeting.

At three o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, about 100 persons had assembled at the State Street ward room in obedience to the invitation given by the Board of Mayor and Aldermen, to vote on the question: "Shall the law relative to the sale of spirituous liquors be enforced in this city?"

Mayor Marvin called the meeting to order, and Judge Page and Mr. John H. Wells were chosen to assist in counting the votes. It was voted to keep the polls open until seven o'clock. The voting proceeded without the use of check-lists, and shortly after seven o'clock it was announced that 496 votes had been cast—22 yeas and 474 nays. The result was hailed with a cheer. The only excitement toward the close was the decision of a bet between two prominent citizens, one wagering that 500 votes would be cast; the other that it would not reach that number. As Mayor Marvin arose to declare the vote, the loser of the wager entered with five voters, but it was too late.

The Policy of Inaction.

We have not hesitated to ridicule the action of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen in calling the meeting of Tuesday to vote on the expediency of enforcing the prohibitory law. The farce has been played and the result is as anticipated. Now, we propose to refer to the attitude of the men who lead the temperance agitation, make a great stir, and get credit for seeming boldness while they do never an act which will practically accomplish the desired end. Their determination to abstain from voting is looked upon by the liquor dealers as an act of cowardice. Why did they choose to do so? Laying aside the idea of the illegality of the meeting called, was not there a moral effect in action? Is anything more demoralizing than inaction? Did they believe when the petition to close the liquor stores was circulated that the voters of Portsmouth would sustain the enforcement of the law? If they did not, why should they expect the men chosen to Aldermanic positions to heed their petition? Right is right! If temperance men feel it a duty to urge the enforcement of the law, isn't it as much their duty in a moral sense of view to avail themselves of every privilege to show their approval of the law, even if they are a handful only? The world likes pluck. Did the temperance leaders show a great deal of it in their failure to appear at the meeting? We fear their action (or inaction) will lead to the belief that while they are desirous that others should pull their chestnuts from the fire, they are unwilling to scorch their own fingers in the attempt. We should enjoy seeing the men who are most anxious to spur others to duty placed in similar official position. How many of the two or three hundred petitioners would dare attempt the enforcement of the prohibitory law were they Aldermen? Few, we have reason to believe; especially if their trade or personal interests would be injured thereby. We do not apologize for any neglect of duty on the part of the Aldermen, but would call the attention of those who throw stones at them for neglecting it, to the fact that if similarly situated they might show similar neglect. Even now, if the petitioners mean what they appear to, they have a moral duty as urgent as is the official duty of the Aldermen! There is a law which they can enforce by complaining of the owners of buildings where liquor is sold. This is a more stringent act than the prohibitory law, and strikes at the very foundation of the traffic. Another law confiscates all liquor found for sale. Our temperance friends can force the Board of Mayor and Aldermen to prosecute when they bring cases before the Board where sales have been made. The law is construed to make these officials executives, not detectives. By this, it will be seen that there are ample opportunities for the prohibitory advocates to show their faith by their works, as has been instanced by one of them the present week. Should they desire other facilities, the Board of Mayor and Aldermen could appoint all of the petitioners as special police without pay, all prosecutions to be made at the expense of the city—and thus close the mouths of those who blame them for not enforcing the law.

The S. P. C. A. Lectures.

The lyceum course for the season of 1873-74, under the auspices of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals promised to be one of the most brilliant ever offered our people. The selection of speaker and subjects has been very judiciously made from an usually wide list, and will present a variety and tone rarely equaled outside of our large cities. The course will consist of six lectures, one reading and one concert. The whole for $1.50.

Of course our friend Barnabee is down for the concert; Miss Kate Reignolds, ex-actress and successful lecturer, being engaged for the reading. The lecturers are as follows: James T. Fields, "Masters of the Situation," Mrs. Livermore, Rev. Warren Cudworth, "In the Dark," an admirable lecture; Miss Kate Stanton, "Uncrowned Sovereigns," Henry Bergh of New York and Rev. James DeNormandie, with a lecture written for the occasion. Dr. A. P. Stevens was expected to furnish a new lecture, "Books and Self-culture," for the course, but pleads a want of time for thorough preparation, Rev. Mr. DeNormandie taking his place. It will be seen that we are to have two lady lecturers; this is rather a departure from the usual make-up of a lecture course, but a good one. Mrs. Livermore is already an established favorite with us, while it is safe to say that, with the exception of Mrs. L., Miss Kate Stanton has no rival among her own sex upon the lecture platform. We hope our citizens will give the course a liberal patronage, not only for the sake of the intellectual treat offered them but for the benefit of the society which provides it. The tickets will be for sale about Oct. 1st, the lyceum to commence Nov. 18.

Lacontes.

If fair weather, ship Frank Jones will be launched from Neil's ship-yard this afternoon at two o'clock.

A correspondent asks if a map of Portsmouth can be procured? If not, is not here an opening for some to make an honest penny and do a good thing for others?

Schooner J. B. Lanfair, from Portland for Boston, struck on the Western Sister, on Sunday evening, and now lies sunk at the wharf in Newcastle. She is loaded with lumber.

Mr. L. Thomas Sanborn of Rye, one of the mail agents who was injured at the Seabrook accident, has sued the Eastern Railroad for $25,000 damage. He is still suffering from a broken leg.

We are informed by Secretary Aaron Young, of the State Agricultural Society, that nineteen babies have been entered for the baby show, including triplets from Deering and North Conway, three girls and three boys.

The Eastern Railroad Company has settled with David Howard of Bangor, one of the victims of the Seabrook collision, for $7000. Mr. Howard's left arm is crippled and he is badly used up by reason of internal injuries.

By the labor of Elder Edmund Kelly of New Bedford, an additional church has just been organized in this city, to be known as the "Mount Olivet Baptist Church of Portsmouth, N. H." Meetings are held at South Ward Room.

Young America will be delighted at the announcement of Jennie Kimball's reappearance here next Saturday evening, after a prolonged absence. The "Mirror" of Ireland is as attractive as is Jennie, and that's saying a great deal for the "Mirror."

A lad belonging in Greenland was arrested on Tuesday for stealing $70 from the house of Rev. Mr. Montgomery in that town. He admitted his guilt, but on account of his youth, punishment was withheld on condition that the stolen money be restored.

The advertisement of Mr. E. Q. Norton, piano tuner, will be read with interest by those desiring instruments kept in tune. Mr. Norton has an excellent reputation as a tuner and is thoroughly acquainted with the construction of organs. He proposes to remain in Portsmouth.

James Ladd, Esq., for many years deputy collector of this port, died at Salisbury Point last Monday, at the age of 91 years. He was a man of strict integrity and considerable ability, and was one of the oldest Masons in the United States, having joined the organization in 1803.

There is quite a religious interest prevailing just now in the Methodist Church in this city. Several conversions are recorded, and a large number are deeply interested. Meetings are held every evening in the Chapel on Daniel Street. Rev. H. Montgomery preaches this (Wednesday) evening.

We understand that Mr. Amos Pearson will shortly open an afternoon singing school in which children will be taught the rudiments of music. Attention will be particularly given to this and not to mere exhibitions. The school is much needed here and we doubt not will be a success. Mr. Pearson is well-known as a faithful painstaking teacher, as many of his former pupils cheerfully testify.

The oldest conductor on the Eastern railroad is Mr. Harris on the Marblehead branch. He has been on the road more than a quarter of a century. He was a fireman on the train when his predecessor was taken suddenly sick, and he assumed the duties and was confirmed to the place. Conductor Towle is the next in time, and has never had a suspension on his line. Conductor Johnson is the third.

The boat stolen from Mr. Freeman Hurd, last week, was found at Seabrook on Sunday, and with it the articles from schooner Lucy Amelia at Newcastle. The man who landed from the boat is described as about sixty-five years old. He had with him a lot of tools and his clothing was full of pockets of large dimensions. It is evident that he was a burglar. No one who saw him had authority to arrest him and he is still at large.

A Joke of Hook's.

One day Hook and Matthews took a row up the river to Richmond. Passing a well-trimmed lawn at Barnes, they noticed an inscription board strictly forbidding any strangers to land on the lawn. This was enough for Hook. Tying the boat to a tree, he and Matthews landed, taking with them fishing-rods and lines. Hook acted as landsurveyor, Matthews as his clerk. They paced slowly to and fro along the lawn, pretending to measure with the fishing-rods as measuring and levelling-staffs, and the fishing-lines as yard and rood measures. Presently a parlor window opened, and out walked the occupant of the villa, a well-to-do alderman. In great wrath he demanded what the two interlopers were about. Hook coolly but courteously told him that a new canal was to be cut directly across the lawn, and that accurate measurements were necessary to determine the exact direction which it should take. Partly in rage, partly in despair, the alderman invited them in to "talk it over;" a sumptuous dinner and the best of wines were just ready; and the alderman endeavored to persuade the surveyor that another line for the canal might be easily obtained without touching his lawn at all. Hook and Matthews revealed the hoax before taking their departure, and managed to talk him into a hearty laugh about it—rendered all the more easy by the fact that the dreaded canal was only a myth, and that he had entertained two such eminent men as Mr. Hook and Mr. Matthews.

—A blacksmith has succeeded in changing the gait of a pacing horse to that of a trotter, by simply fastening an extra pair of shoes heavier than usual to the fore feet whenever he wants the horse to trot, and taking them off at all other times. The sudden change of weight on his fore feet forces the horse to change his gait.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong,

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood,

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organs into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole system. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

VINITAS! VANITATUM VINITAS!

[Boston Advertiser.]

I have set my heart on nothing at all;
Hurrah!
That's why I'm so happy and jolly withal;
Hurrah!
And whoso wishes my comrade to be;
Let him clink his glass and shout with me,
As we may drink so merry and free.

I set my heart on money and gain;
Hurrah!
And I led but a life of toil and pain;
Ah! ah!
The dollars went trundling all about,
What this hand got—O luckless lout!—
The other forthwith paid out.

And then on maidens I set my thought;
Hurrah!
And that was a folly with misery fraught;
Oh, heh!
My false love sought for another beau,
True Polly was true, but she bored me so!
Pretty Kate to my suit said no.

Towards travel I found my thought inclined;
Hurrah!
And I left my country's ways behind;
Ah! ah!
And I didn't take comfort anywhere quite,
Poor fare by day and worse beds by night,
And none understood me aright.

I set my heart on honor and fame;
Hurrah!
Now see! other wretches could win them a name;
Ah! ah!
But I—if I tried to make way,
All the world looked askance, not a soul would say,
"Give the fellow for once fair play."

Then I set my heart on glory and war;
Hurrah!
And 'tooth we did win a battle or more;
Hurrah!
The enemy's boundary soon we crossed,
But there I found what fighting cost,
When a leg in the fray I lost.

So I've set my heart on nothing at all;
Hurrah!
And all is mine on this earthly ball;
Hurrah!
So now let us end our song and bout,
Every one of you drinking your heel taps out—
Who leaves but a drop is a lout!

A Duel to the Death.

In Truckee City, Nev., last week, Andy Fuget, a carpenter, and Jack White, a miner, fought a duel with six-shooters. A feud had existed between the men for some time, and a few days ago, when they met on the depot grounds, Fuget said: "We might as well settle our trouble here. Draw and defend yourself." White said he was not armed, and Fuget replied that he believed him a liar.

The men then separated, with the understanding that they would fight the first time they met. Soon afterwards the men again met on the corner of Main street and a little alley running up into the Chinese quarter. They had no sooner recognized each other than the battle began. There were several persons in the neighborhood, but no one who saw the shooting could tell who fired the first shot. Fuget is said to have been approaching Main street from the alley, and was met by White, who was passing along the sidewalk. When the firing began Fuget placed himself behind an awning-post at the corner of the street and alley, while White stood on the sidewalk.

The firing was very rapid; so rapid, indeed, that many who heard it thought that more than two men were engaged in the shooting. The majority of those who were in the neighborhood when the shooting began ran away as fast as their legs would carry them; but two or three men, who sought shelter in the iron doorways of Burkhalter's store, stood their ground and witnessed the whole battle. White fell first, and, striking on the edge of the sidewalk, rolled into a gutter about eighteen inches in depth. Fuget fell about the same time seemingly from the effect of White's last shot, rolling into the same gutter in which White was lying, and at no great distance from him.

Between the two men lay a bundle of gunny sacks, owing to which they were unable to see each other. Fuget began to crawl towards White, who lay in the gutter unable to rise. He dragged himself along the gutter until he reached the gunny sacks. He climbed up on these until he could see his mortal enemy, and then fired at him his two remaining shots. White aroused himself, and by great effort raised his pistol and fired his last shot, which rolled Fuget from his position on the sacks, and ended the desperate and bloody fight.

When the firing ceased and only groans were to be heard, the citizens rapidly collected, and soon a great crowd was on the bloody battle-field. The bleeding and groaning men were carried to where they could be cared for. Fuget, however, needed but little care, as he was dying when taken up, and lived less than ten minutes. The shot which proved fatal struck him in the left groin, severing a large artery. He bled frightfully. White's wounds were three in number, and of such a nature that they must neccessarily prove fatal. One shot passed through his body, from side to side, just above the hips; another entered his right breast, and ranging back, lodged against his spine; the third struck him in the lower part of the abdomen, passing through the bladder.

After the shooting, and while his wounds were being examined, White said he was fired at by another man besides Fuget. The man, he said, was a large man, with heavy black whiskers, who stood in the alley leading up into Chinatown, and fired three shots at him, after which he ran away up the alley. Afterward, on being more closely questioned about this man, White refused to say anything more in regard to him, or to give his name, even if he knew it. Many persons who were in the neighborhood at the time of the shooting are quite certain that more than two men were engaged in it.

They say that it seems almost impossible that two men, armed with common six-shooters, could have done such rapid firing, and when the men were taken up and the pistols examined there was a general expression of surprise on seeing they were not self-cockers. Several bullets struck the iron shutters of the store, and the men who screened themselves in the doorways seem to have occupied a tolerably hot position. By some it is supposed that the men were hunting each other at the time, as but a minute before the shooting began White came to the door of a billiard-saloon near by and peeped in, as though looking for some one. Both men were formerly residents of San Francisco.

Unfortunately Mr. King hadn't the utmost confidence in his gas, and when he came down a few days ago he had not a work to say about any current.

State Items.

The Concord Monitor says "it is understood that to soothe his lacerated feelings, Sam Bell is to be offered the democratic nomination for Governor." And yet Bell is a protectionist.

A burglar who stole a watch and other valuables from the house of Mrs. Hannah Sargent at Goffstown, Thursday, happened while riding to Manchester in the cars, Saturday, to sit directly opposite Miss Belle Eaton, a granddaughter of Mrs. Sargent, and as he pulled out the watch, the young lady at once recognized it, and accused him of the theft, whereupon he handed it over, passed into the next car and before measures could be taken for his arrest had escaped.

A dispute concerning the ownership of power on the second dam at Lebanon has just been settled by reference. The losing party has a warrantee deed, but can recover only the sum paid for power, which the giver of the deed had no right to convey.

The Stratham people have raised a purse of $60 for Mrs. Winn, whose husband was killed on the railroad.

Hunter & Co., of Hinsdale, publishers of the Star Spangled Banner, have been arrested by an agent of the Post Office department for sending obscene literature through the mails. The arrest was made by Gen. J. N. Patterson, United States marshal, and the property of Hunter is in charge of Deputy Hill.

A dwelling house, owned and occupied by Mrs. Ira Whicher and Mrs. Weeks, and a barn adjoining, belonging to D. Dockham, were destroyed by fire at Tilton on the 22d. Total loss about $2000; fully covered by insurance.

The house, barn and out-buildings of K. A. Batchelder at Boscawen, were totally destroyed by fire on the 22d, with most of their contents. Loss about $3000; insured for $2000.

George Whittaker, of Mason, farms to some purpose. A dozen years ago he located on a rough, unproductive farm, the old homestead which had been cultivated in the old way by three generations. By his skill and energy he has brought several acres to be worth $1,000 an acre. He has nearly six acres of grapes this year, and he has raised from seven to fifteen tons of grapes in a year, which he sells in Boston. He also raises cranberries to advantage, an acre of swamp land yielding him $650 worth of fruit. He has three acres of peach trees, mostly young, and 125 pear trees which promise a fine yield this season.

To Cure Corn Fodder.

If the corn is not down or "lodged" badly, let it reach maturity or be thoroughly tasseled out and in blossom before cutting with a corn cradle; or if too large or lodged too much for this, cut with a good corn knife, and leave in gavels to cure. Turn once. Select fine weather, if possible, for this, and let it get thoroughly wilted before binding, in medium-sized bundles. Now comes the point wherein so many fail; the standing or shocking up to cure. When first bound the sheaves may appear stiff and able to stand alone, but as they wilt they become as weak and limber as a three-months old baby, and want something to lean against. The object is to dry the juice in the stalk without unnecessary exposure to washing and bleaching. Select four of the shorter bundles and stand up in the round-shock fashion, and put a band around them; now take four other taller bundles and stand up around the first snugly; around the whole eight bundles put two more bands, one near the top. By this means you have a sugar loaf shock, whose apex will divide the rain, so that none will enter to injure the fodder. This size shock will stand firm, and not, (as the stalks get limber), be at every idle caprice of the wind; will cure out thoroughly before snow flies, and will be of an inviting green color inside, though perfectly dry. You can now stow it away in your barn almost any way, but the best way is to stand it on end, tier upon tier; but if you are so favored as not to have room in your barn this season of short crops, leave it out in shock until all is fed; it will not injure beyond a slight bleaching outside the shock.

La Somnambula.

Max. Adeler, in the Saturday Evening Post, says that Mortimer J. Loomis is now one of the most violent of the denunciators of railroad monopolies. Since his last adventure on the cars he hates a railroad worse than an Arrapahoe Indian hates a bald-headed Presbyterian. Loomis has fits of somnambulism occasionally, and at such times he has an uncontrollable tendency to wander into dangerous places. More than once he has been surprised, upon waking, to find himself roosting on the comb of the roof, or hanging head-foremost down the well, with one leg around the bucket handle. He went out to Pittsburg, a few days ago, and when he entered the sleeping car the thought struck him that he might get to prowling about during the night while asleep and walk off the platform into a better world. So he went to the brakeman and gave him a dollar, with strict instructions that if he saw Mortimer J. Loomis walking around that car in his sleep to seize him and force him back at all hazards. Then Loomis turned in, and soon his reverberating snore echoed the screech of the locomotive. About two o'clock Loomis awoke, and as the air of the car seemed stifling, he determined to go out on the platform for a fresh breath or two. Just as he got to the door, that vigilant brakeman saw him, grabbed him, floored him, and held him down. When Loomis recovered his breath, he indignantly exclaimed: "You immortal ass! What do you mean? Let me get up, I tell you, I am as wide awake as you are." But the myrmidon of a grasping corporation put another knee on Loomis' breast, and insisted that Loomis was asleep; and then he called another brakeman, and after a terrific struggle, during which Loomis received bumps and blows enough to wake an Egyptian mummy that had been dead for 6,000 years, the railroad man jammed him into a berth, put a trunk and eight carpet bags on him, and then sat on him to hold him down until morning. The first thing Mr. Loomis asked for when he arrived in Pittsburg was a respectable hospital where they cured the temporarily insane. He thinks his reason was partially dethroned by his effort to comprehend how that brakeman could have the face to ask him for another dollar because of the trouble Loomis gave him during the night.

An Affair of Honor (?)

The Mayfield, Kentucky, Democrat of a recent date contains the following: We learn from a reliable source that one day last week a rather novel affair of honor occurred between two gentlemen living near Water Valley, in this county. Both gentlemen are highly respectable, and are among the bravest men in the State. It appears that some difficulty having arisen between them they met and had a regular drawn hand-to-hand battle, when the youngest of the two came off victorious and they separated in good humor and as friends. The old gentleman, who had never met with defeat before brooded over the affair until he became dissatisfied, or rather satisfied, that if he could make another trial of strength with his opponent he would come off victorious. He went to see him, and frankly told him the state of affairs, and that he was not satisfied with the result of their late combat, and wished so renew it, saying that if he was again defeated he would look upon his opponent as a high-toned, honorable gentleman, and would respect him more than ever. After expressing a wish not to fight again, as he knew the result would be the same as at first, his opponent finally agreed to the arrangement, also saying that if he was whipped he would respect and esteem him as a friend. Taking a friend each, they repaired to a secluded place and fought until satisfied. The result was the same as at first, the younger man coming off victorious. The young man bound up the wounds of the other, while the old gentleman returned the compliment by loaning his friend a shirt. A good dinner was ordered by the winner, and the friends of both parties partook of it with as much zeal and good humor as if nothing had occurred between them. Both gentlemen seemed anxious to conduct the affair honorably, and appeared satisfied.

The Next Royal Tourist.

A Zanzibar correspondent of the London Times writes to that journal of the 11th that the Sultan of Zanzibar will certainly set out for Europe by the mail steamer which leaves Zanzibar on the first week in August. "He requires rest," says a correspondent, "and change of scene after the crisis through which he has lately passed; and it can be believed that he is desirous to escape from the odium which his late acceptance of the treaty is sure to call forth regarding him. He has but very lately imprisoned and severely punished an Arab of high influence whom he found guilty of attempting to break the provisions of the new treaty by smuggling a cargo of slaves; and it is but natural that he may wish to escape from the necessity of acting often in a way which must be repugnant to his feelings, though he may consider if necessary to prove his bona fides to the English government. He must also be anxious about the Muscat subsidy, and generally solicitous to ascertain how far his acceptance of the treaty proposed by the English government will be met with reciprocal generosity and friendship. It is a pity (the writer adds) his Highness has so timed his visit that he will not arrive in London till September, when everybody will be out of town. The principal influences, however, are those which govern his departure from Zanzibar, and not his arrival in England; and it may be presumed that even in September some endeavor will be made to give him a courteous welcome in London. He will, it is rumored, visit Paris, and probably return by Mecca."

Cooking Apples.

The great English physician, Sydenham, says the Rural Home, allowed no other aliments to his patients in the febrile stages of quinsy, erysipelas, and small-pox than could be found in boiled apples. There are a great many ways of using apples for food, and doubtless some novel ways yet to be discovered. The French, who excel in culinary matters, are said to have 365 ways of cooking an egg. Why should not a similar enterprise be shown in regard to the apple? An estimable lady of my acquaintance makes some very palatable dishes and desserts in this way: Apples of uniform size are selected and simply wiped and cored. This last operation is quickly performed by punching them through the middle with an apple corer, thus removing the stem, seeds, and tougher parts, and making an opening for the introduction of sugar in the cooking operation which follows.

After dipping them in water they are placed in any deep pan or baking dish, and sprinkled with sugar, about a teaspoonful to each apple, and a teacupful of water turned on around them. They are then baked with a slow, steady fire till soft, when they should be removed from the baking pans for cooling and the table. When served with cream this is a dish fit for the queen. Every part of the apple can be eaten, the sugar having neutralized the acidities in the fruit and the cooking making tender the skin. It is a capital substitute for strawberries. There is another very good way of treating sweet apples. Stew them in a porcelain kettle, with just enough molasses and water to prevent their burning on, till cooked through, and then transfer them to the oven with all the liquid residuum, to dry and brown. This gives a baked apple, half jellied, delicious to flavor and moisture, that any one can love. Sweet pickles, by some considered superior to the old-fashioned apple sauce, are made by partly baking sweet apples and then saturating them in a pickle of vinegar, sugar and spices. This is easier to make than apple sauce, which must be smothered in boiled cider.

Indian Corn for Horses.

In the course of the evidence given before the select Parliamentary Committee on horses, lately published, we observe that Mr. Church, general manager and secretary of the London General Omnibus Company, spoke very highly of the value of Indian corn for feeding horses. He stated that the company which he superintends have altogether discarded oats as forage for horses. "These animals are fed entirely on maize and chaff, each horse receiving as its daily ration about seventeen pounds of the former and ten pounds of the latter. The maize is just broken sufficiently to enable the horses to eat it without difficulty, and they thrive better on this fodder than they ever did upon oats. On the ground of economy, also, maize is preferable to oats as forage, its price being much lower, and the saving effected being about 3s. or 4s. a quarter. These facts, Mr. Church went on to observe, have long been known to many owners of horses, but gentlemen with private stables find great difficulty in substituting bruised maize and chaff for the old fashioned forage of oats and trusses of hay. Coachmen and grain-dealers resolutely oppose the innovation, for the reason that it enables the owners of horses to exercise a control over supplies for their stables, and prevent waste and fraud."

Personal Journalism in America.

Henry Watterson is recorded as having spoken as follows to Emily Faithfull: "We must needs have an abundance of personal journalism; it is an appendage to our condition as well as a result of a character. Those who read a newspaper are pretty sure to find out who it is that edits it: there is no possible escape; the man's simple comings in and goings out will discover him; and just as he happens to be a person of exceptional character or characteristics, he is likely to be marked and talked of, until, being presently very well known, and having himself charged with all the virtues and all the offences of his journal, he is involuntarily a personal journalist, and I confess that, considering the case from this standpoint, I am unable to see how men like Marble, Dana, Bowles, White and Halstead, filling the places they do, could, no matter how ardently they might wish it, envelop themselves in the mystery which surrounds the work-a-day drudge who forges thunderbolts for the London Times."

Boots.

A writer in the Oneida Circular concludes a discourse on this text with the following "practical remarks," which we heartily endorse:—

1. Never "break in" boots or shoes. If they are not easy when new, don't take them; for the boots will break your feet oftener than your feet will break the boots.

2. If you go on "breaking in" boot leather, you will need a special last, made with all sorts of knobs and protuberances to correspond with your distorted joints. Then you will be sorry.

3. If you have large feet, admit it in all honesty, and have your boots made accordingly. Then you will be happy.

This is the Putnam Patriot's contribution to snakey literature: "As Geo. Atwood, of Abington, was passing through his pasture, he was horrified at the sight of an enormous black snake sucking his cow. His approach frightened the reptile, which escaped. Mr. A. judged it to be over six feet long, and thought it was indulging in its daily habit, judging from the decrease of milk and the anxiety and intense longing the cow manifested at the barn the next day for her snake pet."

—The annual culinary mistakes between mushrooms and toadstools are occurring all over the country, and numerous persons are feeling wretchedly in consequence.

A MANUAL OF MORAL PHILOSOPHY, designed for Colleges and High Schools: by Andrew P. Peabody, D. D., LLD., Plummer Professor of Christian Morals in Harvard University. New York and Chicago: A. S. Barnes & Co.

Dr. Peabody is so well known in this community that it were superfluous to say that a text-book from his hands would be well and ably prepared. We are happy to pronounce this manual unqualifedly a success. The writer has gone over a great deal of ground, and yet has compressed into a brief compass what he has to say. The merits of Dr. Peabody's style have never struck us so forcibly as in reading this volume. It is rich and flowing, without exaggeration; clear and concise, without mannerisms. He discusses moral questions in so catholic a spirit that the mature reader cannot but follow him with delight, while such a glow of genuine kindness and humanity pervades his pages that they are peculiarly fitted to attract and convince the young.

Scattered throughout the volume are suggestions applicable to the present condition of business and politics in this country, all of which are well conceived and forcibly expressed. We have room for one extract only, which may serve as a specimen of the style in which the work is written. In a chapter upon "Honesty," Prof. Peabody says:

"So long as men will persist in electing to municipal trusts men whose sole qualification is blind loyalty and unscrupulous service to a party, they can expect only robbery under the form of taxation; and, in fact, the financial revelations that have been made in the commercial metropolis of our country are typical of what is taking place, so far as opportunity serves, in cities and villages all over the land. As regards embezzlements, forgeries and frauds in the management of pecuniary trusts, there can be no doubt that the number is greatly multiplied by the morbid sympathy of the public with the criminals, by their frequent evasion of punishment or prompt pardon after conviction, and by the ease with which they have often recovered their social position and the means of maintaining it."

Dr. Peabody hopes to prepare a more extended text-book, should this manual be favorably received, a result as to which there can be, we think, but one opinion. The present work is excellently printed, and conveniently divided into chapters and paragraphs, with catch-words in heavy type.

THE NURSERY.—The October number is out, and a host of young readers will soon be made happy by its receipt. We presume its readers are constantly increasing, and we certainly hope so, for where happiness and innocent enjoyment can be so easily obtained, it seems a pity that any child should be deprived of it.

A Good Thing Duly Appreciated.

No beneficial revolution ever goes backward; and this maxim is as invariable in medicine as in politics. The advent of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, twenty years ago, produced a revolution in the treatment of a large class of ailments, and that revolution has ever since been in "the full tide of successful experiment." If that tide has borne the proprietors of the celebrated vegetable specific "on to fortune," it has also borne thousands of human beings, who were languishing under the effects of disease, weak and hopeless, out of despondency into the paradise of health and cheerfulness. It is no exaggeration to say, that to the vigor the regularity of habit of body, the good appetitite and perfect digestion, acquired under the operation of this unequalled tonic and corrective, multitudes of people in every walk of life who had been vainly physicked in the usual way, owe the blessings of renewed health and the prospect of prolonged life.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—(Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.)

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & CO., 53 Broadway, New York.

A Stranger's Opinion of Newcastle.

TILTON, N. H., September.

An expression, from an inland resident, about your coast and its attractions, might be agreeable:

During the summer your correspondent was a few times upon the interesting island of Newcastle. Imagine a soul heretofore confined to the landscape of hill-sides and distant mountain-tops, clear lakes and deep glens, then you have eyes conditioned to appreciate Newcastle. First we were delighted with that trinity of bridges, alternating scenes of land and water; there were gulfs, bays, sounds, straits, rivers and islands illustrating the world in miniature. Our surprised exchecquer yielded a mite when a toll-man confronted us with the notice that this is a toll-bridge. Horses are taxed elsewhere; footmen seldom. This meander discovered the salt fish mart of the world. We were certain, optic and olfactory were two witnesses.

The island is a charming spot. A river is the only creature with a mouth larger than its head. There was the open mouth of the Piscataqua. Every craft of the five hundred daily, was charming and novel to us; from the little cared boat to the war ship. It was like white clouds trailing the water, like walking trees, like cities in motion. The rising tide, the roaring surf, the barnacle and the sculpin were novel. The old fort Constitution, and the new encompassing the old were things of stern wonder—"a terror to evil doers but a praise to them that do well." The light-house gave us a very satisfactory prospect. Its lamp is a thing of wonder. It is like salvation in darkness and danger. Every prospect pleases. The spires of Portsmouth, the shipping of the Navy Yard, the beautiful islands of Kittery Point, the distant Isles of Shoals, the dim Rye Beach, all attracted the gaze Commend me however to the Maine coast on a barberry picnic, or fasten my craft to some safe buoy and let me take in the friendly fish where no sculpin can molest, or let me sail ad libit with the tide, like most journeys of real life, it I can but haul up by the landing at eventide. This perfect abandon under the guns of a friendly nation where its stars are triumphant, is only fully appreciated by a stranger. The Newcastilians are unconscious of their beatitudes, or they would shout more. Might as well be without feet or hands, eyes or ears and have a soul dwelling in a trunk without limbs or senses as to be without one's babes. It is not I who am so lonely as that. Every living jewel was with me until there were seven pairs of eyes to see and of feet to walk. A child can enjoy more—it is more concentrated, more concrete and sentimental. Those children gazed and smiled and laughed and ate and slept with all their might. It was a juvenile exhibition which next summer will encore, to see those young souls dwelling on the surface in the sunshine of the world, like the Minnehaha of modern fiction.

We learned that more strangers than usual were upon the island fishing and bathing this summer. So many that a hotel is begun and will soon invite all voyagers. Our friend, Capt. Davidson, will be pleased to extend the protection of the fort and exhibit his Cannonical ministers in that gospel of peace which even febels may hear. While the brave Captain is there with his implements, I defy the navy of Great Britain. May he live long. No ship can miss the grand old house on the bluff. That house for over a century has looked upon the coming and going of time and tide, and masts and men. Our friend Charles Roberts has beautifully remodeled his mansion. One thing more, our pilgrim friend Thorp and his elegant boat, were to us indispensible blessings. Why cannot the world be more friendly to the world and make the soul dance up to the gates of Paradise? But halt, here we are confined in brick walls, with a distant parapet of mountain ridges, with the din of busy mills below and hooting engines up the valley, with the voice of the student in his class and the cheerful piano on every side. Thus it must be, thus it shall be until yacation bring us again to Newcastle. J. B. R.

As Expected.

The faux pas of the men who circulated the petition for the enforcement of the prohibitory law has resulted in showing the liquor dealers of this city their strength, and already their mouth-piece, the Times, urges the repeal of the law. The Times proposes that if the law is repealed, the plan shall be to require every dealer in liquor to take a license at a moderate cost and only for the purpose of keeping him within legal control. Then enact that every dealer who shall sell to an intoxicated man, or to one whom he knows to be in the habit of excessive drinking, or to minors, shall be fined for the first offense and deprived of his license for the second. Some other restrictions might be added, such as the common sense of the community would approve; and public opinion would step by step be easily educated up to the limit, beyond which legal restraint cannot be effectual.

That Election.

[Concord Monitor, 23d.]

An Englishman has great faith in the efficacy of an act of Parliament. The city government of Portsmouth believe in the voice of the people, and to-day the citizens are to vote on the question: "Shall the liquor law be enforced?" As by the statute it is the duty of all Mayors and Aldermen to carry out the law upon evidence being produced, and as the Police Court of that city could doubtless, any day, furnish evidence enough of sales, it is difficult to see how a vote either for or against the proposition can effect anything. In the meantime, the statement is made that her citizens manufacture ten thousand barrels of ale and two hundred and fifty barrels of rum each month to cheer, if not inebriate, the community.

[Newburyport Herald, 24th.]

One of the most remarkable elections ever held in any age or country was that of yesterday afternoon in Portsmouth, in which the Mayor and Aldermen called upon the people to vote whether the law in relation to the sale of intoxicating liquors should be enforced or not. This is secession doctrine fine-cut.

Laconics.

Hon. Frank Jones will enter twenty cattle for the State Fair.

It is said the new system at the High School is working well.

Ship Frank Jones was launched in fine style from Neal's ship-yard at 2.25 P. M., Wednesday.

The Biddeford Times reaches Portsmouth regularly in the evening mail of the day after its publication.

One of the urgent wants of Portsmouth is a corps of dressmakers, reliable in promise and satisfactory in practice.

The final scene in Wagner's trial took place at Alfred on Wednesday, when he was sentenced to be hanged one year from that day.

During the month of August, the Eastern Railroad earned nearly twenty-five per cent. more from passengers and freight than for the corresponding month last year.

The police of this city arrested Fred. Varney and George Henderson at Farmington, on the 24th, for robbing B. F. Chase, of this city, of $216 in April last. They were arraigned before Judge Page, who ordered bonds in the sum of $1000 each for their appearance at the October term of the S. J. Court.

The solid rock at Star Island is now being drilled, with the faint hope of finding water to supply the want of the new hotel thereon. All the drinking water used at the house has this season been carried from Portsmouth by water boats, which made three trips each week, taking out 7000 gallons at a time.

On Monday a police court was held in Kittery for the trial of two fishermen for throwing one of their number overboard on a dark night and leaving him to save himself as best he could. It seems that the complainant came on board one of the schooners for the purpose of casting off the painter of his dory, fastened at the stern of the schooner aforesaid, and after exchanging some harsh words the captain and one of the crew seized the intruder and threw him into the sea, making no effort whatever to save him. The man succeeded in getting help from another schooner, and entered a complaint as above stated. The Justice ordered the offenders to recognize in the sum of $1500 and $1000 respectively.

The Dover Democrat says master-workman Hellerick has commenced the construction of a Howe truss at Dover Point. It is to be of two hundred fect span, twenty-five feet high, with three top and three bottom chords, and about forty feet in width, which will include the railway and a carroad in parallel lines, the cars and carriages to pass through the interior instead of over all, as is the case with the bridge over the Cocheco. The only difficulty about the matter will be in raising the structure to its proper position. It cannot be done on a false bridge, as is usual, but is proposed to put it together and tow it to the destined location on scows, and then swing it upon the abutments at high water.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuble is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

Editorial Friends.

Says the London Spectator: What is the liability of an editor to his personal friends? Strictly speaking he should have none; should attack his own father, if he disapproves his speeches, or lash his wife's last book if he thinks it rubbish. This is, no doubt, abstractly true,—to steal an epigram from an Australian who once wrote a pamphlet on the subject,—that an editor should live in a cellar; but in practice men will not comply with either condition, and all such demands would drive all the men with hearts and tempers out of the profession. It is, nevertheless, excessively difficult to find a rule that shall be morally sufficient, for silence, though it will not meet that of grave political action. We suspect that in this case the practice of Parliament is still the best guide, and that the journalist is bound, as the statesman would be bound to do his duty and take the consequences. He might be a little more gentle in his language, a little more apologetic in his tone, but the attack must not be deprived of its efficiency for any personal consideration whatsoever.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP!

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and causes "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessary fees for a patent to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects plainly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skilful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take, and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

Daily Chronicle.

Peggy's Pan-dowdy.

"Wa'll, you take your apples," said the culinary oracle, neighbor Kempton, Peggy's uncle having decided that he should relish an old-fashioned pan-dowdy such as his mother used to make forty years ago.

"If you can make such a one," he had said, "I'll give you a good ring, Peggy, as fine a wedding-ring—as good a wedding ring as you are like to get, poor lass," he added, beneath his breath; and so Peggy had applied to neighbor Kempton for the recipe.

"Wa'll, you take your apples," repeated Mrs. Kempton. "Bless me; ain't that there pot a-biling over?"

"No," said Peggy, "it is only Nancy dishing the cabbage."

"Wa'll, as I was a-saying, you take your apples, and you—there's Ben's boat just a-coming up the river, if I live! He went out after mackerel this morning; the tide's dead agin him, and the dinner done to a turn already."

"And the pan-dowdy," meekly suggested Peggy.

"Oh, as I was a-saying—my mind skims about like a flea; it goes by telegram, I have so much to think of. But you take your apples, and—sakes alive! if the clothes-line ain't broke and let the things on the ground, and father's new flannels—the first time they see the wash, too!"

In the tumult that ensued Peggy effected her escape, feeling fully competent to take the apples and go ahead, after so many admonitions to that end. She next resorted to Cook's Counselor, which advised her to line a deep pan with paste, slice the apples, sweeten with New Orleans molasses, spice to the taste—apparently overlooking the fact that tastes differ,—cover with paste, and bake in a moderate oven—brick oven preferred.

On these hints Peggy proceeded. She did not care a fig for the promise of the ring. What was a good ring to her, set with jewels of Golconda, when but for her own folly and the malicious interference of another, she might now be wearing a real wedding-ring, the happiest wife in Christendom? For when she had first come to live with her uncle, John Brierly, Matthew Royston had set his heart upon her, and she had in no wise objected, accepting his devotions as a matter of course. But Aunt Brierly had other views for Matthew Royston. She had made up her mind to marry him to her own neice, Patty Pratt; and when Aunt Brierly had made up her mind it wasn't an easy thing to unravel. If he couldn't be managed by fair means, he should be managed by foul. And wasn't all fair in love? She contrived to arouse Matthew's jealousy concerning another admirer of Peggy's, and with sly and subtle insinuations to harrow his soul with the fear lest he was being chosen by his sweetheart not for himself, but for his prospects. And yet her insinuations were so well timed and so deftly handled, and the poor love-lorn youth conceived that they were deductions drawn from his experience and observation, rather than suggested by Aunt Brierly. So one day, he forbade Peggy, up and down, to accept any attentions but his own, though there was only an understanding between them which, as everybody knows, is apt to lead to a misunderstanding. He had never said in so many words, "Will you marry me, Peggy?" or "name the day, sweetheart," though they both hoped that it would come to that in time.

So Aunt Brierly sneered in her quiet way at Peggy for being under a man's thumb before her time came, hinted that she had found a master, if not a lover, questioning if such things were done in the green leaf, what would be done in the dry, till poor Peggy, giddy with youth and inexperienced in the ways of wily women, began to believe that Matthew was arrogating to himself more authority over her than was becoming in a lover—which was likely the case—and so fell into the snare Aunt Brierly had spread for her.

One day, as they sat together, Sam Perrin was seen to drive up with his new turnout.

"He has come to take you to drive," said Aunt Brierly.

"I shan't go," said Peggy, decidedly.

"Of course not," continued her aunt; "I couldn't advise you to take such a step. It would not be wise. A woman cannot begin too early to learn the lesson of obedience."

"I shan't go!" protested Peggy; "but it is not because I mean to learn obedience.'

"No? if you haven't begun before this, you will get the lesson, child. Sam's got the handsomest team in the place. He's a match to be proud of, too. I wish he'd ask Patty to ride!"

"I hope he may.'

"I trust he won't understand why you decline,' in the most honeyed accents.

"Well, I haven't declined yet.'

"Only because you haven't been asked.'

And the result was that Peggy accepted, and Matthew came and found her gone, and accepted Aunt Brierly's version of the fact, which didn't vouchsafe a drop of oil on the troubled waters, since she did everything in her power to irritate him while preserving the mask of peace maker. As a matter of course an unpleasantness ensued, which owed more than halt its animus to Aunt Brierly's arts. The lovers did not speak or look at cash other except by stealth, for over a week, each one waiting for the other to say the words which both were dying to speak or hear. But just as Peggy had about made up her mind that she couldn't bear such silence much longer, she heard, apparently by chance, that Matthew Royston had been to see Patty Pratt, and had invited her to a merry-making.

"That's shabby enough, if Patty is my niece," said Aunt Brierly. "I wouldn't blame you now if you should give him as hard a nut to crack. There's nothing like obliging a young fellow to come the whole way in making up, without holding a little finger to him, especially when he's in the wrong. I suppose he thinks you'll get frightened at this and speak first, and I've noticed that those who speak first in a quarrel always have to take the blame."

Aunt Brierly was getting ready the brick oven, while she spoke, for the week's baking. She had a flushed face and a nervous manner, not usual with her, as she threw into the oven a handful of paper which she had caught up just as Peggy entered, and she was about to lay on the kindlings and apply the match, when she stumbled and fell against a pine knot that Uncle John had brought in to heat the oven, and there was no more baking or anything else done that day but running for doctors while a soul hovered between life and death.

Well, Aunt Brierly was sick five months, if she was a day; and when she recovered from her shock as much as ever she would, though she could not move a hand or frame an intelligible sentence, she signified her desire to be dressed and allowed to sit, and be propped up in the big arm-chair, to look out at the window and see what the world was about, to see the maples that had just hung out their green banners when she took to her bed, reddening in the October sun, and Rev. Moses Precept and his wife, in light kids, leaving brother Pratt's door in a coach.

How the earth had turned round while she had been lying idly on her back, and the baking not done! The grass, that had only begun to look green and feathery when she was stricken down, had been mown and harvested, leaving brown, barren fields, and the grape vines, that had only put out a few tender feelers, were now purple with fruits; and the trees, that had dropped their blossoms in pink and fragrant showers, were now dropping great, golden pippins and rosy gillyflowers. No, the earth never stood still, whatever other folks might do. But what under the sun were Mr. Precept and his wife doing at brother Pratt's with a coach all to themselves? She tried to put the question to Uncle John, but the words got all shaken up together upon her tongue, so that it was more of a conundrum than ever. It was like one of those games where you are given the letters of a word, and left to spell it out yourself. But as Uncle John could not guess, she did her best to intimate by rude, but energetic signs, that Mr. Precept was the object of her curiosity.

"Oh," said Uncle John reluctantly, "it's a--a—wedding. Its Patty and Matt Royston; they couldn't wait for you to get well, because Matt's going into business out West."

Peggy was beating a pillow as he spoke, and instinctively Aunt Brierly's eyes were turned upon her, and such wild, astonished, frightened eyes that Peggy never forgot them to her dying day; eyes, too, with something like a tear in them, in their startled depth. Then she was on her feet in an instant reaching out vainly toward the door, and uttering such a flood of incoherent words, as if she would assure them that she had important business on hand that must not be neglected; then she sank back exhausted among her pillows, and the yellow sunlight fell across her face, and a dead leaf fluttered past the window, and Aunt Brierly's soul floated out into the unknown.

Peggy was thinking of these things as she went about the humble task of making pan-dowdy—of such a part of these things as had fallen within the scope of her experience. There was good reason why a gold ring had no longer any meaning to her, or any charm to hold her. Why should she care to ornament herself, when nobody heeded whether she looked well or ill?

No; she was making the pan-dowdy to please Uncle John, who had always stood her friend, hoping its flavor might bring back his youth for a little. Let other women who have had husbands or lovers to please, deck themselves in finery, but it was too late for her. Once she might have coveted such things, but that was a by-gone. Nothing could restore to her the supreme confidence of youth; nothing could bring back those warm June nights when she and Royston watched the stars glide across the heavens, and noticed the heavy fragrance of dew-drenched flowers as they walked the fields, or had sat on some rocky ledge by the river, and had seen the belated fishermen come in with masses of quivering silver tangled in their nets, and had listened to the echo of voices on the other side, or taking a boat, had moved as silently as the stars themselves across the half-luminous expanse of water, where the planets appeared to be broken into stardust; and now and then a fish had leaped to the surface, a cock had crowed from some distant farm-house, and an oar had played in its rowlock and made the chord complete. Peggy never stepped out now on sultry summer nights to carry comfort to some ailing neighbor, but the inspiration of that sacred time came upon her like a strain of tender melody waking one at dead of night—like an old hymn that her mother had sung when she was a child is the cradle, a hymn laid upon her heart in lavender and scented with sweet brier, and speaking of infinite love and happiness.

Ten years had passed since Aunt Brierly had been stricken down in the act of lighting the fire in the brick oven, and they had not been years calculated to touch Peggy lightly. She was no longer the rosy, lilting lass that Royston had left behind; she had lost something of her rounded contour, much of her bloom; her mouth had settled into a sad seriousness, her eyes had the appearance of looking on other scenes than those about her—for all they were bright eyes, as if their light were reflected from tears rather than from joys.

Yet in the meantime men had not been lacking who found her comely enough to share their hearts. And yet her disappointment had not soured her; one might say that it ripened her instead. She could laugh as heartily as the rest, when occasion served, only it was apt to end in a sigh; she relished quiltings and parish picnics, and loved to see the younger generations at their pastimes. She kept Uncle John's house like wax-work, could fashion almost any garment you might name, sent butter and honey to the market, sang in the choir, read metaphysics, and had faculty, as neighbor Kempton said, for everything but getting married.

Patty Pratt had died in the second year of her marriage, but in all the eight succeeding years nobody in the place had ever heard or spoken of the young widower Royston. He had passed out of mind as entirely as the leaves of that dead and gone by summer time; out of the mind of all but Peggy, in whose heart remembrance was still green and living.

Peggy rolled out the paste reflectively, and lined a deep pan as daintily as the tailor bee lines her nest with a rose leaf; then she pared the apples, thinking of the cheery winter evenings when Royston had helped her with her stint, and the fire had sputtered over the back-log, and the kettle had sang on the hob, and heaven had not seemed far away, since Aunt Brierly was taking tea at brother Pratt's. Sliced apples and spice and molasses, spice, molasses and sliced apples, and a canopy of paste, and the thing was done. But mind you, Peggy, the baking is half the battle!

When the pan-dowdy came to the table, wearing a healthy brown, 'Ah!' said Uncle John, taking it prospectively, 'that looks something like! Hey-dey! it carries me right back to the time when I was a shaver, picking up the windfalls for mother's pan-dowdy. Ah, Peggy! Professor Blot couldn't hold a candle to you. It smells as if all the spices of Araby the blest had been let loose in it. Ah? Oh! Humph! Pan-dowdy, indeed! Pan-fiddle-sticks!'

'What's the matter?' asked Peggy, taking alarm.

'That's what I'd like to know; perhaps its the modern recipe for pan-dowdy; but it ain't no more like mother's than swans are like geese. Well, well, cooking ain't the art it used to be. I ain't seen a pumpkin pie that deserved the name these dozen years, and buckwheats don't taste as they used to, cold mornings, when I was a boy, and mother fried 'em.'

'I'm so sorry,' said Peggy, 'But the deceitful old thing isn't half done. When the top looked so promising, who would suspect that there was only raw apples and dough floating in molasses underneath? It's downright hypocrisy! I shall never believe in pan-dowdies again!'

'How did you bake it?' asked Uncle John, disconsolately.

'In the stove oven, to be sure. Perhaps you thought I baked it in the sun?'

'Ah, that's it. My mother always used the brick oven, and so did—' And then Uncle John pushed back his chair and left the room.

'I never thought of the brick oven,' said Peggy to herself. 'It hasn't been used since Aunt Brierly had her shock. I wonder if it would be safe? I'll try it to-morrow, if I'm alive.'

The brick oven was in the kitchen at Brierly Farm, and, as Peggy said, had never been used or disturbed since the day of Aunt Brierly's shock. The kitchen itself had fallen into disuse, as a kitchen, since her time, having been turned to account as a store-room. So when to-morrow came, Peggy made her pan-dowdy, and went into the old kitchen to light her fire in the brick oven, matches and kindling in hand. The rusty door of the oven grated on its hinges, as if loth to be called into service again after so many years of idleness, and disclosed a newspaper twisted together carelessly, and a handful of kindlings thrown upon it, just as Aunt Brierly had left them when paralysis seized her. Wondering what scrap of forgotten news she might find in an old daily of ten years back, Peggy took the paper up with a sort of shudder, shook and smoothed it out and let fall from among its folds a letter, yellow, torn and crumpled. She picked it up without much concern, saw that it was addressed to "Miss Margaret Brierly," opened it, and read a few impassioned lines imploring her to forgive his miserable exactions, and to send him some sign of her favor. He feared that he might have forfeited her regard; but if she still loved him, would she write a line in answer, or send a message by the bearer, or meet him at the stile in Lover's Lane at twilight, or, if this was inconvenient—send the humble lover—would she set a light in the window of the best room, which, being seldom used, would signify to him that he would be welcome at Brierly Farm? And all this dated ten years ago! And she had not written the line he asked for, nor sent the message, nor set the light in the window, nor met him in the soft spring twilight at the stile in Lover's Lane.

No wonder he married Patty Pratt! Peggy came near having a shock herself at this revelation of the old brick oven, and it was after twelve by the kitchen clock before she came to her senses, and vaguely remembered that she had been meaning to heat the brick oven and bake the pan-dowdy. Was it yesterday or the day before?

Just then Uncle John came in for his dinner, and found the table not set, not a vegetable on the fire, the tea-kettle dry, the mutton as black as a coal, and the pan-dowdy waiting for a baking? Had Peggy run away? And then he stepped into the old kitchen, and found her with the yellow letter spread out upon her lap, her hands folded over it, and her eyes staring hard at the opposite wall.

'Peggy, Peggy! what's the matter, child?' He called twice before she heeded. Then she was on her feet in a trice, rubbing her eyes as if she had been dreaming.

'I'm heating the brick oven for the pan-dowdy,' she answered, gathering up her kindlings.

'Didn't you know it's after twelve, Peggy?' he mildly suggested, picking up a letter that had slipped to the floor. 'What's this, eh?'

'It's mine; give it to me;' she cried. 'It's nothing—only a scrap of old paper, you see. It's my own. I found it in the oven. Do give it to me. I have a right to it? But Uncle John was already adjusting his spectacles, conscious, in a sort of hazy way, that something had troubled Peggy, and that this yellow rag was the something which it was his duty to look into.

'Nobody's going to eat it, child,' he answered. 'And you found it in the oven, eh? Pretty place for a love-letter. I wonder it didn't heat the oven without any kindlings or fuel. You didn't answer it, I reckon?'

'Answer it! I never laid eyes on it before to-day,' said Peggy with eyes that struck fire.

'It's been a good while on the road, eh? April 29, 1852. Why that's the same day Sophy had her shock! Oh! And he married Patty Pratt! Ahem! ain't it most dinner time, Peggy?'

'Dinner? Bless me! yes. And there's the pan-dowdy done to a crisp. No! what am I talking about? It hasn't seen the oven!' And Peggy was alert and busy in half a minute.

Uncle John made no further reference to the letter; but about a month later, when Peggy was knitting in the twilight, and wondering what her twilights would have been like if Aunt Brierly had not been unkind, somebody opened the door, came to her side, and stooped and kissed her on he brow.

'Is it time to light the lamps, Uncle John?' she asked.

'Uncle John has brought about a great illumination already,' said a voice that seemed an echo from the past, but which in reality belonged to Matthew Royston himself. 'Uncle John wrote me all about that precious pan-dowdy, and the brick oven, and a love-letter that had been years on the way to you. Peggy dear, we have been a long while making up our quarrel. Shall we end it with a wedding ring?'

And they did. But I think they owed it all to the pan-dowdy!

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1873.

Wagner Sentenced.

A Boston Herald special gives the following particulars: This being the time assigned by Judge Peters, presiding at the present term of the Supreme Court, for passing sentence on Louis H. F. Wagner, convicted at the last term of the court, of the murder of Anethe M. Christensen, the prisoner, at 2 o'clock, was brought into the court room in charge of sheriffs Durgin, Maddox and Skillings. His counsel R. P. Tapley and Max Fischacher, were present. When asked by the court if they had anything further to say in behalf of the prisoner they replied that they had not at present. The court room was crowded. Among those present were a large number of ladies. After proclamation had been made, County Attorney Yeaton arose and addressed the court as follows:

May it please the court: In the presence of the Attorney General, and at his request, communicated to me, I now perform the last remaining duty of the prosecuting officers in the case of the State against Louis H. F. Wagner, who was convicted at the May term of this court of the murder of Anethe M. Christensen, at Smutty Nose Island, and move that the sentence of the law be passed upon him.

The court—Call upon the prisoner and see if he has anything to say why the sentence of death should not be passed against him.

The clerk—Have you any reasons to offer why the sentence of death should not be passed upon you?

The prisoner—Yes.

The clerk—You may make them known.

The prisoner—I came here to this country seven years ago, known by a great many people as a true and innocent creature; I have not harmed a child in this country, here or any other place; I have lived with Mr. Hontvet two years; I have not done him any harm. I have been known in Portsmouth, and nobody can prove that I did any harm. I have been charged now with the crime of murder and have sworn before God Almighty that I am innocent, and I say here this minute that God Almighty is my witness that I am innocent. Still I will not mourn against the sentence that will be put upon me, but a great many will feel after a while that this poor man who stands here at this bar today is an innocent soul, and that is true, Mr. County Attorney Yeaton. My liberty and my life hang on his right hand. It has been proved at South Berwick that Louis H. F. Wagner was no murderer; that these two women were not killed in the night; that these two women were not dead in the morning between 8 and 9 o'clock when Hontvet arrived there; and these two women were not killed with an axe, but were choked to death with a handkerchief. It is charged that that was my handkerchief, but it is not mine; it is the same as the shi which they swore was mine, when it did not fit me. If that shirt should be fitted on to Mr. Hontvet it would fit him, and it is Mr. Hontvet's shirt. I can swear before the living God that it is his shirt. I know it. I have seen it. I have seen it on his wrists before. I did not intend to harm any soul if I could help it. I did not believe that people would take a poor innocent soul, who has never harmed a child, and condemn him; still I will not mourn. The Lord Jesus did not mourn against those who crucified him. He looked up to heaven and asked his Father to forgive them, for they did not know what they were doing, and I will do the same. But the time will come when they will come to die, and they will feel for the wrong they have done to the poor innocent Prussian, Louis Wagner, who now stands here at this bar. This is all I have got to say.

The court—Have you anything further to say?

The prisoner—No, sir.

Judge Peters then arose, and in a clear and impressive manner addressed the prisoner at the bar as follows:

Louis H. F. Wagner: The full court having considered the legal questions raised in your case and over-ruled all the exceptions taken in your behalf, it becomes my duty at this time to perform an act which will terminate your case so far as this judicial tribunal is concerned. You have had a full, fair and impartial trial. You have been defended at all stages by able and faithful counsel. You have had the fullest use of the processes of the State for all witnesses desired in your behalf. You have had in your trial the benefit of all the beneficent rules of law applicable in cases of a criminal nature; still you have been found guilty of murder in the first degree by a jury composed of men against whom you could urge no challenge or personal objection. The court have no doubt that the finding against you is a correct one. The evidence discloses the deed of murder done by you in a most atrocious manner. There can be no doubt that you consigned to sudden and terrible death two defenceless women and aimed the assassin's strength at still another, because their lives stood in the way of your getting felonious possession of a little coveted treasure. The swift and inevitable retribution which follows your awful offence will be a warning, resulting in some degree to the protection of society against the commission of crime. The penalty of your offence is the extremest known to the law. It cannot, however, be executed upon you till after confinement at least a year. You should prepare yourself for that awful event whenever it may come. No chance for liberation from punishment through the law is now possible to you. It remains for the court only to pronounce against you the sentence of the law. The court having considered the offence of which you stand convicted, it is ordered by the court as punishment thereof that you be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and in this behalf you are further sentenced to confinement in the State Prison, situate in Thomaston, in the county of Knox, until the punishment just ordered be inflicted upon you, and that you stand committed until removed to said State Prison in execution of this sentence.

Readables.

In the Supreme Court at Boston on the 23d, in the case of Little vs. Little, Jr., of Amesbury, Mass., an action to recover a house and land in Amesbury, which the plaintiff says he sold to his son when he was intoxicated and did not know what he was about, the jury gave a verdict for the return of the property to the father, and damages, which carry the costs, of one dollar, on the son.

Hon. E. E. Bourne, a well-known citizen of Maine, died at Kennebunk on Wednesday, aged 76 years. In his earlier years, Judge Bourne was a prominent member of the bar, filled various public offices, and was judge of probate for York county sixteen years, resigning this office last July. At the time of his death he was president of the Maine Historical Society, and one of the trustees of Bowdoin College.

The Pittsburg Commercial says: "While Missouri remained a republican State she was well governed, and her State debt was reduced from thirty to thirteen millions; but the moment she passed into democratic hands the policy of paying off the State debt was abandoned, her treasury is now empty, and her people are the prey of mobs, robbers and bandits of every description. There is no worse governed State in the nation, unless it be democratic Kentucky."

A Springfield bridegroom who was about to start on his wedding tour, left his bride in the car while he went after some forgotten article, getting back just in time to see the train disappearing from the depot. In his frantic endeavors to arrest the cruel locomotive he raged and tore round in such a manner that the crowd about the depot supposed he was an escaped lunatic and half a dozen of the boldest and strongest men seized him and held him, while others rushed for the police. It at last came out who he was and what the matter was. The young man started by the next train in search of the vanished bride, and the hangers on about the depot are sensitive on the subject of lunatics.

State Items.

The Nashua Telegraph says: "The mayor of Portsmouth ought to be impeached." Du tell!

A correspondent of the Boston News writes that the friends of temperance in Raymond in this State, have succeeded in causing the traffic in spirituous liquors to be given up. Not a word of truth in it. They have never sold more freely.

—A rather amusing indication of the season was given last Sunday, when one of the congregation, on being nudged with the contribution box, abruptly cried out, "Drop them melons, blast ye!" Then he awoke, looked around, blushed, and scooted.

An Emigrant Romance.

The Paterson Press says: John Irwin came from Ireland, Loash, County Leitrum, about two years ago, hoping to better his fortunes in America. He left behind him his wife Jane and two children—one a few months old, and the other a girl of nine years. He found work here, in a soap factory at Providence, R. I., saved money, and at last felt safe in sending for his wife and two children. But by some strange mischance a report had reached his wife that he was dead. Somehow, it entered her head that she must come to America herself, to discover the fate of her husband. So she managed to scrape together enough money to pay her passage over, and sailed from Ireland for the New World, leaving her two children in the care of trusty friends behind, until she could have made a home for them here. Three days after she sailed, there came a letter from her husband, inclosing the money to pay for the passage of herself and little ones, to join him on this side of the ocean. Long and anxiously he waited their coming, while the poor wife set her face resolutely but sadly to confront her future lonely and sorrowful fate, in the land that had furnished her husband only with an inhospitable grave, as she supposed. She landed at Castle Garden on March 21st last. The husband learned, about three months ago, of the strange tidings that had come to her ears, and of her sudden departure for America, never expecting to see him more. The poor fellow hardly knew what to do, but he concluded to set out at once in search of her. You may smile at the idea of looking up a relative in this broad land. But John was clear-headed, and went straight to Castle Garden, where they keep track of immigrants for a couple of years. There he found his wife had gone out to service at Coney Island. He went thither, and learned that she had gone to a family at Harlem. Thither he hopefully wended his way, only to find that she had gone, they knew not whither. A few days ago he learned, in some way, that she had returned to Castle Garden, and under the name of Jane Blake had been engaged to come to Sisters' Hospital in this city. Hither he came on Wednesday, but found that his wife, after working in the hospital about three months, left there only two weeks ago (leaving a month's wages behind), and had found employment in a family through the agency of an "intelligence office." The Sisters had forgotten the name of the family, so he hied away to the office, but found that no record was kept there of the family's name either. And so the fellow is well-nigh despairing. His only hope is that his wife will return to the hospital for her month's wages, and will there learn that he is still alive, a faithful husband, and anxiously searching for her. He will repair to the hospital each evening to seek tidings of her, and doubtless in a few days, now that their story is published in the Press, the husband and wife will be restored to each other. The wife in taking her last place, reassumed her own name—Jane Irwin—which will be an additional clue to her identity.

The husband has been eleven weeks on his weary search, and says that while he had considerable money when he started, he has been utterly destitute since he came to Paterson, and has been obliged to lodge in the police station by night, and beg his bread by day, though he is confident he will get work and be able to settle down as soon as he finds his wife, and that they will soon get money enough to send for their children. The story we have told perhaps is not as charming reading as the tender tale of "Evangeline," or the pathetic narrative of "Enoch Arden," and yet does it not contain much of the romantic interest of both?

Joking on a Solemn Subject.

What can we say of a humor that stalks amid pestilence—of a levity that feeds upon calamity. The Shreveport (La.) Times relates, with every appearance of enjoyment, a series of anecdotes founded on the yellow fever at that place, at the same time stating in mitigation, that the ravages of the disease have been exaggerated. It says a citizen visited Dallas, Texas, and reistered at the hotel as from Shreveport. No sooner had he done so than a man looked at the book, then at him, stealthily made as wide a circuit around him as the wall would permit, and, reaching the door, sprang with the agility of a cat into the street. This person told somebody there was a man at the hotel from Shreveport, and the somebody's hair rose straight up on his head, and he went running down the street; at the next corner he told another somebody there was a sick mam from Shreveport at the hotel; at the next corner it was reported there was a man from Shreveport at the hotel with the black vomit; then news spread that there was one Shreveport man at the hotel dead, and two with yellow fever; and, finally, the city was thrown into consternation by the intelligence that there were three men from Shreveport at the hotel, dead as herrings, and ten others dead of the yellow fever. The hotel was virtually abandoned and the Shreveport man had all the room and as many beds as he wanted. The next day the excitement reached a climax. A body of policemen and citizens built a huge fire on the railway track and awaited ferociously the approach of the train from the plague smitten city. As the train stopped the citizens nourished their six-shooters and mildly but determinedly informed the engineer and conductor that it should approach no nearer Dallas, and remonstrance was in vain until the mail agent, minion of a despotic government, said something about $500 fines, when the death spreading messenger was permitted to continue its journey. It is evident from this that Dallas is possessed of resolute citizens,—men who mean business every time—men who will not be trifled with even by Yellow Jack.

—War against gilt and imitation jewelry continues furiously. As a result very little of it is worn by would-be-fashionable ladies.

So successful has Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery proven, as a constitutional treatment for Catarrh, when coupled with the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, applied locally by the use of Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche (the only method of reaching the upper and back cavities of the head,) that the proprietor of these medicines has long offered a standing reward of $500 for a case of Catarrh which he cannot cure. The two medicines, with instrument, for $2, by all Druggists. 607

A Good Thing Duly Appreciated.

No beneficial revolution ever goes backward; and this maxim is as invariable in medicine as in politics. The advent of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, twenty years ago, produced a revolution in the treatment of a large class of ailments, and that revolution has ever since been in "the full tide of successful experiment." If that tide has borne the proprietors of the celebrated vegetable specific "on to fortune," it has also borne thousands of human beings, who were languishing under the effects of disease, weak and hopeless, out of despondency into the paradise of health and cheerfulness. It is no exaggeration to say, that to the vigor the regularity of habit of body, the good appetite and perfect digestion, acquired under the operation of this unequalled tonic and corrective, multitudes of people in every walk of life who had been vainly physicked in the usual way, owe the blessings of renewed health and the prospect of prolonged life.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic-rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweeniled horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & CO., 53 Broadway, New York.

Castoria is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

It is rumored the Eastern railroad will build a spur to Old Orchard beach next season.

We are happy to learn that the Savings Banks in this city do not lose one cent by the failure in New York; they having avoided investments in rail road bonds, which are the cause of the present financial panic.

The clothing of Henry Hendrickson, a workman on the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad, caught in the handle of a hand-car. Thursday afternoon, and he was thrown under the car and had a leg broken.

Work is brisk at the yard, a goodly number of men being employed. The old ship Nantasket on the ways is nearly torn to pieces; the keel for the new sloop, to be built by the government, is being made preparatory to being laid in the ship house where the Marion is building. This vessel is being rapidly caulked and will probably launch early next month.

John F. Parks, living in Hunking street, was brought before Judge Page, on Thursday, on a charge of indecent assault on his step-daughter. The assault occurred three week ago, the frightened girl, who is but fourteen years old, running out of the house with her clothes during the night and dressing in the yard. Parks threatened to kill her if she told of it, but she finally related the circumstances to a playmate and Parks heard of it. He then beat her severely and the neighbors sent for the police. The case was continued until to-day for further evidence, Parks being required to furnish bail in the sum of $500.

The U. S. steam sloop Monongahela, just gone into commission at this naval station, is the vessel which was washed ashore at St. Croix during a tidal wave there a few years ago. She was got off greatly damaged, having knocked off the top of several houses, and finally lodged in an elevated position—stern up. Sent to this yard, hauled up on the ways and completely overhauled, planking stripped off, new timbers put in, etc., under the supervision of Constructor T. E. Webb, who had no instructions to go by, but made his plans as he went along—and now behold one of the handsomest ships in the Navy. She carries about 200 men and eight-nine-inch and two eleven-inch guns, with several howitzers. She sails for New York in a few days.

College Sports.

On the 20th, the sophomores and freshmen at Yale had their annual "rush." A correspondent thus describes the scene:—

At about two o'clock the freshmen drew up their forces, according to custom, near the Hopkins Grammar School, on High Street, and marched in rank and file to the park, under the convoy of a party of juniors. They were also escorted by a crowd of sophomores who were, if not agreeable, at least exceedingly persevering in their attentions, which consisted in a continual endeavor to "drag out" the freshmen, and break up their ranks in order to get possession of the sidewalk. The freshmen for the most part did not wear hats, or if they did they were speedily relieved of them by the polite and attentive sophs.

Arrived at last at the park, the freshmen stationed themselves on the west side of the ball ground, and, under the direction of the juniors formed in twenty ranks, five deep. Opposite them and distant about thirty-five yards, were the dreaded sophomores, who were also drawing up their forces according to a preconcerted plan, placing the largest and strongest in front. When every thing was ready these two solid platoons began a slow, swaying, mark-time march directly towards each other. The freshmen, repeating the cry "Oh, Soph! Oh, Soph!" keep time to the cry in their march, and the sophomores march to the cry, "Oh, Fresh! Oh, Fresh." As these two solid, swaying masses of humanity draw nearer together they slacken their speed, those in the front ranks leaning back with all their strength, while those behind press on until but a single foot remains, when, like two opposing waves, they leap together, and those in front surge up by reason of the terrible pressure behind and before. For a moment they remain suspended; gasping and with protruding eyes they look down on the densely-packed swarm around there. Then the whole crowd wheels around, and the flanks come together in a confused mass of howling, struggling, panting, tugging combatants.

Suddenly there is heard a cry of "A man down;" a score of hands upraised motion the yelling mob back, and two sophomores are carried away in a fainting condition. They soon recover, and with returning breath declare the sensation rather delightful than otherwise when accustomed to it. After this the front ranks become unpopular, but at length, the same solid phalanxes having been formed, the second rush takes place. It is but a repetition of the first, though in this the sophomores are rather discomfited, they having won (or claimed) the first rush. One freshman retires with a broken arm, and still the "sport" goes on. There is too much confusion to allow a third rush to be entered into, so all start for the gate, the freshmen hurrying to escape being jammed through it, and the sophomores eager to rush them. The gate having been quietly passed, the walk into the city is one continual struggle, the freshmen to keep the pavement and the sophomores to "drag them out" and roll them in the gutter.

A number of wrestling matches occurred on the way in, the crowd each time making a ring around the wrestlers and elevating the victor upon their shoulders. Small skirmishes occurred all the way into the city, nor did the ragged, muddy crowd disperse until at the very fence of the college each class had cheered itself and howled at the other. Then in the gathering dusk each weary but happy sophomore and freshman wended his own separate way to a quiet supper and a night of rest, and thus ended another annual rush.

—At Boston, in 1850, Rufus Choate was speaking to a large audience in a building which had for some time been considered as somewhat unsafe. Butler was on the stand. Mr. Choate was in the midst of one of his most glittering sentences. Butler with his cock-eye, had discovered that one of the walls was beginning to give way. He coolly arose, and in a whisper said to the speaker: "Mr. Choate, if this crowd ain't adjourned, we'll be in——in twenty minutes." The speaker paused, and Butler proclaimed to the audience that it was so warm that an immediate adjournment to the Common near by was advisable. The building was speedily emptied, and sure enough in less than a half hour it fell with a crash.

—A first class tenor in New York receives three thousand dollars. That is given by Christ Church and other churches. A basso gets nearly the same sum. A soprano commands even a higher salary, and an alto can manage to obtain quite a comfortable little addition to the week's income. It is a good thing, therefore, in many ways to know how to sing and have a voice.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuble is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

PORTSMOUTH SAVINGS BANK,

DEPOSITS, $2,081,363.47.

William Simes, President. J. F. Shores, Treas.

THE Treasurer hereby gives notice to the Depositors:—

1st. That in conformity with the law of the State passed June, 1872, this Bank will declare an EXTRA DIVIDEND on the 1st of July, 1873, and every TWO years thereafter, on all sums that shall have been in the bank six months or longer.

2d. That these Extra dividends will be based on the interest which may have accrued on the DEPOSITS of each depositor during the two preceding years; thus giving to each the FULL SHARE of all the net earnings of the bank.

3d. That the method heretofore followed of extra dividends every five years will of course be discontinued.

An Ice House for Five Dollars.

A neighbor of mine has an inclosure about six feet square in the clear, and six feet high. The walls are formed of old refuse timbers thrown carelessly together, withf no regard to form or comeliness. The roo is made of hemlock boards. The entire cost of this building did not exceed $5, and practically considered, it is a success; not ambitious of containing thirty-five loads of ice, but simply five loads. Ten years this little, unpretentious house has been used for ice, and never yet dishonored a draft upon its crystal deposit. About six inches of sawdust was spread upon the ground floor, and in packing a space of about nine inches was left between the ice and the walls of the building, for sawdust, and about nine inches of sawdust was spread upon the top of the ice, and the thing was fixed. The three main principles observed here will always insure a supply of ice, viz., good ventilation, good drainage, and plenty of sawdust. With these rules adhered to, a corner of any old open shed will prove quite efficient in preserving ice.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon and invigorating the Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

OFFICE NO. 5 CONGRESS ST., PORTSMOUTH.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs of all allaying irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood,

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills, for they are soft and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of good benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

How Paris is Painted.

[Letter to the Baltimore American.]

It would astonish some of our old house-painters of Baltimore if they could witness the manner in which the painters of Paris climb over the fronts of these six and seven-story houses, and paint them from the roof to door-sill without the use of ladder, scaffold or any other wooden contrivance either for themselves or their paint-pots. One man, without any assistance, can paint the entire front of one of these tall houses in two or three days. Directly opposite our quarters a six-story building, fronting about eighty feet, is undergoing a complete renovation, and the painting of the entire walls has been accomplished by two youths, apparently not over nineteen years of age. They are each provided with a rope about an inch in diameter, extending from the apex of the roof to the pavement, on which knots, one foot apart, are made through its entire length. By means of an apparatus with straps, clamps and hooks, to which is appended a board on which they sit, and stirrups to rest the feet in, which are strapped to their legs, they move up and down the rope with great rapidity and apparent ease. They move the clamps from knot to knot, and, without changing the position of the rope, are enabled to paint about six feet on either side of them. Their smaller brushes are stuck in little loops appended to the seat, and the paint-pot is suspended by a smaller rope, on which it is fastened by a spring of some kind, and is raised or lowered with ease as they may desire it. Long practice has given them great agility, and they seem to move up and down and pirouette and oscillate along the front with a great deal more ease than if they were on ladders. They use brushes for most of their painting nearly double the size of those used in America, and make rapid progress with the work. House-painting in Paris is a very extensive business, as a periodical renovation of the houses is rendered imperative by law, no one being allowed to disfigure a neighborhood by presenting stained and disfigured walls. The houses being all of a soft cream-colored sandstone, many of the finer structures, instead of being painted, are redressed by the stone cutter, and come out, after undergoing the process of scraping and scrubbing, as if fresh from the quarry. In alluding to the amount of work these lads perform in a day, it should be understood that they commence at 6 o'clock in the morning and stop at 7 o'clock in the evening, twelve hours being a day's work among the mechanics in Paris.

He Lives With His Maiden Aunt.

We know a boy who lives with his maiden aunt, and we pity that unfortunate. We have always had a horror of living with a maiden aunt—the bare mention of such a thing has often frightened us into good behaviour for a month. A cat-o'-nine tails never had such a wholesome effect upon us as always accompanied this threatened change of boarding-houses.

But we digress. The boy we know belongs to the clan known as "small boys"—boys whom nobody has any place for, and nobody knows what to do with. The urchin is given to playful pranks at times, but these "boys will be boys," and people shouldn't find fault with minor matters. This particular youngster has a humorous way of twisting the tail of his aunt's pet cat, and reconciling the difficulty with tabby by feeding her on half a dozen canaries. He occasionally pulls the keys out of the piano, sells them for old ivory, and buys pistols to shoot flies. He isn't allowed to go out with with his keeper except on Christmas day, and he is obliged to play base ball in the house. He uses the butter-paddle for a bat, eggs for balls, and imagines the green velvet carpet on the parlor floor a suitable field for in-door sports. The other day he played an exciting and hotly-contested match, self vs. self, with the implements and on the ground aforesaid, and trouble ensued. He became excited, batted wildly, drove "hot uns" right and left, a hung the walls with liquid chickens. i turned suddenly around, looked in the five hundred dollar mirror, saw the other fellow squared for a home run, picked up the piano stool in a fit of desperation, pitched it at the striker; and the second-hand man, who came the next day, said the gilt frame was worth half-price, but he would not cart the broken pieces away for less than one dollar a load.

His aunt was unreasonable. She actually found fault with the boy for having a little harmless diversion. She had never felt a mother's love for her erring offspring, or she would never have locked him up in the garret for six weeks without anything to eat, and expected him to cut up fifty pounds of carpet rags a day until released.

Six weeks had passed. Quietly and unobtrusively the maiden aunt stole to the door of the room in which she had confined the youthful prisoner. Expecting to find him reduced to skin and bone, and submission and obedience, she was about to turn the key, when she suddenly concluded to see if the boy still lived. Oh, horror! there upon the bare floor, in all the solitude of his lonely isolation, was the form of her nephew, prone upon his vest pattern, with four other urchins stretched alongside of him, playing draw-poker. And her pious heart was grieved to find that these young rascals had been climbing the rain-spout for six weeks, bringing aid and comfort to the enemy.

The aunt offers a fine, healthy male child for adoption to any wealthy family that can come well recommended.

No failures in New York were reported, Thursday. About $25,000,000 had been paid out from the Treasury and it was announced that further purchases of bonds would cease. Every movement thus far has had the effect of decreasing business. When it was announced that government would not anticipate the payment of the interest on the '74 bonds, the bank presidents declared that they must combine still further to protect themselves, which may necessitate the suspension of private bankers. The lock-up of currency has acted upon trade in three ways: First, it has put a stop to the moving of the crops in the West, and has delayed the consignments on the way. Second, it has caused a fall in the prices of breadstuffs in New York, although not to any very great extent. Third, it has seriously embarassed the exporters to Europe, who cannot sell their exchange on Europe, and whose shipping operations are thus summarily suspended.

A writer in one of the papers lately gave a glowing description of the place of the Epping Camp Meeting, and said, Lamprey river runs through the grounds. Lamprey river is not in sight nor hearing. There is a good spring on the ground and a sluggish brook runs from it. The writer evidently mistook that for Lamprey river.

What has become of the Rockingham County Fair? The last we heard from it was at least two or three years ago, when its President knew how to keep a hotel, and all he knew about farming he could tell at one sitting. Some of the Marshals at the Fair that year when mounted rode as if there were heavy bricks in their hats. Will some one report what has become of the organization?

The Great Falls Journal circulated at the rate of 1000 copies a day during the Fair.

A freight car broke loose from its fastenings at the summit station on Mt. That modest young man, Ed. Fernald, publishes the following from "an old citizen:" For some years there was no paper printed at Great Falls, until a boy by the name of Fernald came down from Rochester and started a little paper and called it the Great Falls Journal. And the boy grew and the paper grew, until it has got to be a great paper. He threw out the old hand presses and put in new steam-power cylinder presses, and his business increased as the people found out that it was the best place to get printing done there was in the State, and there was such a constant rumbling of machinery that families who had long lived there had to vacate the building, and room after room was added to the Journal office, until nearly the whole building is occupied as the Great Falls Journal Steam Printing House, from which is now issued the Great Falls Daily Journal, and where they do in the very best style printing of every description—book binding and engraving, with neatness and dispatch. As we see the wonderful use and progress of the Great Printing House, how forcible are the words of the poet:

"Large streams from little fountains flow,
Tall oaks from little acorns grow."

Prohibition in Great Falls.

In view of the present crisis in the antirum war, the Great Falls Temperance Reform Club has adopted the following resolves:

Whereas the traffic in rum and rum drinking have prevailed in this village to an alarming extent. And

Whereas, we have watched its awful effects upon the young and old as they have been drawn within its fearful vortex of sure destruction. And

Whereas, of late, it has assumed the cowardly and diabolical form of destroying vainable trees, burning buildings and assassinating our peaceful citizens, who are trying to drive this awful scourge of intemperance from our village. And

Whereas, no person's life or property is safe who is a friend to temperance, sobriety and good morals, or is trying to save our youth from a life of drunken debauchery and shame;

Resolved, therefore, that we as a body or an organization known as the "Reform Club" of this village. do most heartily sympathize with those who have suffered in the loss of property on account of their Temperance principles, and especially with James A. Edgerly, Esq., in his suffering from the brutal attack of some malicious and cowardly person, because Mr. Edgerly had engaged so heartily in the glorious Temperance reform.

Resolved, that we, as an organization, do hereby declare ourselves (325 members) to be fully committed to the cause of Temperance in this village, and will do all we can to aid Mr. Edgerly or any other person or persons in any lawful way to suppress the awful evil of intemperance, and bring to justice any person or persons who are found guilty of transgressing or violating the laws of our State as touching the cause oft emperance, life or property.

A News Item Newly Treated.

[Cynthiana (Ky.) Democrat.]

A man named Roberts and a man named Carlisle had a disagreement, and Roberts swore that he would shoot Carlisle, and started for the house to get his shot-gun. Carlisle followed, being desirous that, if he was to be shot, to be on hand to witness the fun. When Roberts reached his house and brought forth his trusty fowling-piece, he found it empty, but he proceeded to remedy that, and was vigorously pouring down it No. 1 buckshot when Carlisle arrived at the scene. Feeling a deep personal interest in the proceedings, Mr. Carlisle asked Mr. Roberts if he was loading that gun to shoot him. Roberts, as became a gentleman of frankness, replied that such was his object, but calling Carlisle's attention to the incompleteness of his preparations requested him to be seated and make himself at home while he finished ramming home his wads and put caps on his gun. Carlisle being provided with a six-shooter, which he was fore-handed enough to keep loaded, declined to wait, and in a moment, Roberts, with half-loaded gun, was a dead man. This circumstance occurred in Arkansas.

Torture on an Arctic Whaling Voyage.

Two of the crew of the barque "Ansel Gibbs" of New Bedford, wrecked on the 19th of October last on Marble Island, Hudson's Bay, give full particulars in regard to the voyage, the wreck, the stay in the Arctic regions and the return home. The account given by them is very interesting, though horrible in many of its details; but it contains serious charges against the commander of the "Abbie Bradford," and Thomas McPherson, captain, and Jonathan Bourne, Jr., owner of the "Ansel Gibbs."

The "Ansel Gibbs" left New Bedford Dec 10, 1871, bound on a Hudson's Bay voyage, having on board twenty-eight men, all told. The captain first sailed south, and cruised around near the equator for about six months, when he steered straight for the coast of Greenland. About this time the crew began to be alarmed by the appearance of scurvy, which was brought on by salt meat. When they left port they had about sixty barrels of potatoes, but these were nearly gone, and nothing remained but salt beef, salt pork and beans, excepting, of course, flour and crackers, although there had been numerous opportunities for getting provisions.

But their sufferings were destined to be still more terrible. If their story is to be believed they had shipped with a cruel captain, who in his first officer, at least, found a willing executor of his unmanly commands. That they suffered is shown by the marks on their bodies, which they will carry through life. A quiet, inoffensive German, named Kugler, shipped as a blacksmith, going to sea on his first voyage, and with the understanding that he should not be called upon to perform anything of a seaman's duty. When only a few days out they say he was ordered aloft, and when he attempted to explain, the first mate seized a knotted rope and, striking him repeatedly with it, drove him to the masthead. John Marshal, another man, was triced up in the rigging. His thumbs were placed together and he was drawn up by a rope tied to them till his toes touched the deck, and there he was left to hang for twenty minutes. There had been no disturbance, and none of the crew, except Marshal himself, knew the reason for the punishment, and his explanation was that it was for an exceedingly trivial offence. Francisco Antonine, while standing at the wheel, they further say, was struck by the captain thirteen times with his fist or hand, and once with a belaying pin exactly across the mouth, making the blood flow freely. These are only a few of the many stories which these men tell. About the last of May a protest was drawn up and signed by all the forward hands in the ship. It was as follows:

We, the undersigned seamen, of the crew of the American whaling barque Ansel Gibbs, of the port of New Bedford, United States, do hereby solemnly protest against the owner of said barque proceeding on the voyage agreed on between himself and crew. First, because of the inability of said master to whale according to agreement, there being only 15 men in the forecastle instead of 20; second, because the aforesaid master refuses to comply with the requirements of the amended act of Congress for the better protection of American seamen; third, the continued and willful cruelty to men while sick and unfit for duty. The said crew solemnly and sincerely declare that they have no intention of hindering or marring the voyage of said barque, and only assert the rights and privileges given to them by the amended act of Congress. Also the said crew will continue diligent and faithful to their duties as heretofore, but will refuse to work any more after the time prescribed by the above-mentioned act of Congress has expired, unless the said master proceed to port and recruit the health of his crew ere he proceeds on the voyage agreed on between the master and crew. Trusting that the aforesaid master will see the justice of our protest, we subscribe ourselves. [Here follows a list of all the sailors before the mast.]

For three or four days they say no attention was paid to this. Then the captain called them aft and told them that their course was mutiny. They consequently kept quiet and kept on with the usual work. The course was now towards Marble island, a small island on the northwestern part of Hudson's Bay, small, rocky, uninhabited and uninhabitable, its nearness to the spring fishing grounds being its only recommendation. They reached the harbor safely in September, all able to perform their regular duties, but the disease was firmly fastened upon them. Their gums had begun to swell, their flesh to dent, their teeth to drop out, their joints to stiffen, and still they were obliged daily to eat that which they knew was poison to them. A poor condition, at best, they were in to endure the cold of an Arctic winter; but on the 19th of October, in a heavy gale, the anchor chain parted and the vessel drifting upon the rocks became a total wreck. The men were all saved, however, and plenty of beef and pork were washed ashore; but they had no clothes except those which they wore upon their backs. Three-fourths of the crew found quarters in the hull of the Orray Taft, a barque that had been washed ashore a short time previously and which was also unoccupied by her own crew who had escaped safely; the other fourth built a double canvas house. There were in all about forty men upon the island, and had it not been for the sickness among them they could have passed a very pleasant winter. In fact they did organize a minstrel troupe, and with negro concerts and theatrical performances they whiled away many an hour. But slowly and surely the fatal disease spread among them, and one by one they began to drop away. The first death occurred on the 28th of January. There were three in February, nine in March, one in April and one in July, in all 15. All but five were from the crew of the Ansel Gibbs. The crews of the Orray Taft and the Abbie Bradford, wintering in the same place, had proceeded almost direct from port and they were therefore in poor health, but the men on board the Gibbs were all sick before the cold weather set in, and were least of all prepared for the hardships which they had to endure. The diet of the invalids was of course the same as that of those who were well. They had bean soup twice a week, flour "duff," salt pork and salt beef. Once in a while they would catch a seal, and at great intervals the natives coming on the ice from the main land would bring a bear. The fresh meat was all eaten raw, and the blood was drunk.

The winter was over at last, and as soon as the ice broke up the Abbie Bradford, shipping three of the crew of the Ansel Gibbs, started out for the spring and summer fishing. She returned to the island on the 1st of July, and on the second of August, taking on board Captain McPherson and a portion of the crew, sailed for home, leaving eight men upon the island. Although they desired a passage they were refused, our informant says, and makes a long statement in regard to the action of Captains Gifford and Bradford. Three of the men were of the Ansel Gibbs' crew. They were John Williams, second mate, H. H. Smith, carpenter, and R. A. Nicholson, seaman. Nicholson was the one who drew up the protest handed to the captain during the first part of the voyage, and it was the opinion of the sailors that he was left to gratify the spite of the captain. They say that as the vessel was sailing away the three men came alongside in a little canoe, and Mr. Williams said: "Captain Gifford, are you going to take me home?" He replied, "No sir." Then Mr. Nicholson repeated the question, and to him the captain answered, "No sir." They then turned back to shore.

This is the story of the sailors substantially as given by them. They, with some others of the crew who have reached home, meditate instituting legal proceedings against the captain and owners of the Ansel Gibbs and have already retained counsel. The charge against the captain will be cruelty and improper treatment of his men; against the owners, criminal neglect in not supplying the vessel with proper provisions.

—Dr. Henry MacCormac, of London, in a new book, puts forth the theory that tubercular disease of the lungs is caused solely by breathing air which has already passed through the lungs of either brutes or human beings, or air that is deficient in oxygen. Assuming the quanity of air in the chest at about 250 cubic inches, and that from 20 to 30 cubic inches are changed and removed during each respiration, about 10 breathings will suffice to remove or exchange the gaseous contents of the chest cavity. At each inspiration, 4 or 5 per. cent of the oxygen inhaled is or should be replaced by about the same quanity of carbonic acid, an amount which in a few hours would be represented by an appreciable weight of solid carbon. If any portion of the inhaled air be pre-breathed air, says Dr. MacCormac, the dead metamorphic carbon will be retained pro rata, unoxydized, within the organism. This effete, unoxydized carbon, being retained, speedily becomes "tubercle."

—Scene in a western court: Judge—"Have you anything to offer to the court before sentence is passed on you?" Prisoner—"No, judge: I had $10, but my lawyers took that."

—There is not a railroad at the West that can carry all the freight offered to it.

—Hope is a good breakfast, but a bad supper.

TEMPERANCE MEDICINES.

If you would patronize true Temperance Medicines, scientifically prepared by a skilled physician, and by a process the discovery of his own, wherein not a drop of rum, whiskey, beer or any other alcoholic or fermented liquor enters—use Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines. They do not manufacture drunkards, as do the various "Cordials," "Tonics," "Elixirs" and "Bitters" of the day. Golden Medical Discovery is nutritious, tonic, alterative, or blood cleansing, and an unequalled cough remedy. Pleasant Purgative Pellets, scarcely larger than mustard seeds, constitute an agreeable and reliable physic: Favorite Prescription—a remedy for debilitated females; while his Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is known the world over as the greatest specific for Catarrh and "Cold in the Head" ever given to the public. 608

A Good Thing Duly Appreciated.

No beneficial revolution ever goes backward; and this maxim is as invariable in medicine as in politics. The advent of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, twenty years ago, produced a revolution in the treatment of a large class of ailments, and that revolution has ever since been in "the full tide of successful experiment." If that tide has borne the proprietors of the celebrated vegetable specific "on to fortune," it has also borne thousands of human beings, who were languishing under the effects of disease, weak and hopeless, out of impendency into the paradise of health and cheerfulness. It is no exaggeration to say, that to the vigor the regularity of habit of body, the good appetitte and perfect digestion, acquired under the operation of this unequalled tonic and corrective, multitudes of people in every walk of life who had been vainly physicked in the usual way, owe the blessings of renewed health and the prospect of prolonged life.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic-rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweeneled horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & CO., 53 Broadway, New York.

Castoria is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

Local Matters.

Accidents.

On Thursday, Mr. Nicholas Campbell fell from a new house he was building at Christian Shore and broke his collar bone.

A brother to Mr. Newton Johnston had the thumb of his right hand crushed off by a hay presser on the 24th.

Mr. Sewell W. Webber fell from a chair while hanging a bird-cage at his residence on Vaughan street, Thursday, and hurt his arm severely.

Laconics.

Wagner is now in the Maine State prison at Thomaston.

Dr. Richter is to occupy the new house on State street built by Mr. B. F. Webster.

John Griffiths, Esq., of Philadelphia, has been awarded the contract to build the new sloop-of-war at this station, for $45,000.

The Christian Baptist church of Kittery have raised the salary of their pastor, Rev. H. A. Hutchinson, to $1200.

Mr. John E. Colcord musters between 800 and 900 men at the navy yard, twice a day, and in quick time, too. Sound lungs!

Next Monday evening the Portsmouth Sons of Temperance are to celebrate the 31st anniversary of the establishment of the Order.

The Board of Mayor and Aldermen have passed the bill entitled "Revised Ordinances. "This was the only important business transacted, Thursday evening.

After a further examination, Friday, Judge Page held John F. Parks in the sum of $500 for appearance before the S. J. Court, for an indecent assault on his step-daughter.

In the North Church, on Sunday evening, at 7:30 o'clock, Rev. Carlos Martyn will address the business men of Portsmouth on "The Lessons of the Wall Street Panic."

Mr. Charles E. Batchelder of Hampton Falls, who has been in the employ of the Eastern Railroad for some years, and more recently as baggage-master, died in Rockport on Wednesday of typhoid fever, after an illness of four weeks. He was about thirty years of age.

Rev. L. P. Cushman of Garden street Church, Lawrence, Mass., who has acquired quite a reputation as a preacher in Methodist circles, is to preach in the Methodist chapel this (Saturday) evening, and will supply the pulpit of the M. E. Church on the Sabbath. The religious interest in the Methodist church seems unabated.

The Journal editor, referring to the vote of the Aldermen by which the motion to enforce the prohibitory law was defeated, three voting to enforce and four opposing, asks "where was the Mayor with his famous veto power, on this occasion?" Does the erudite editor of the Journal imagine that the Mayor can veto a negative vote of the Board and decide it in the affirmative? Who said the Journal didn't need an editor?

One representation of the new "Mirror of Ireland" will be given at the Temple this evening, the scenes being interspersed with a new comedy in which will appear Miss Jennie Kimball, an old-time favorite, Mr. John T. Kelley, comedian, Miss D'Erina, Atkinson, the balladist, and Barney Nolan. The panorama is a good one and the comedy company likewise, but Jennie Kimball will doubtless draw better than all the rest combined.

Messrs. Frank Jones of this city and Daniel Conner of Manchester are building a large block at the corner of Elm and Park streets, Manchester, to be one hundred feet on Elm and Park streets, and there will be an extension on the alleyway on the south, forming three sides of a hollow square in which the outbuildings will be located. It is to be built of brick, three stories in height, with French roof and slated. There are to be six stores on Elm street, and three on Park, with about forty tenements.

A War Incident.

[Lexington (Va.) Gazette.]

An order was sent from Gettysburg to a "post" commissary about Woodstock or Mount Jackson, in the Valley, to collect rations for four or five thousand prisoners. A bright idea struck the "A. C. S." He had been refusing to buy the bulls offered by the farmers, though below the price of beef. He immediately sent runners to bring in the bulls—"good enough for Yankees to eat." In a few days his sergeants had bought one hundred and fifty bulls, "assorted sizes."

He had never thought how such a collection of cattle could be driven to Winchester, the point of delivery. Now, one big bull with a halter on, and a deep bass voice, walking with slow and solemn dignity in front by the side of his keeper, never fails to bring up the droves of steers, cows, and heifers in regular order; in fact, is a necessity to every "cattle man" in the country. But one hundred and fifty bulls and no plain stock behind them was entirely "unprofessional"—a disgrace to the cattle trade.

Now the bulls had been gathered and penned in twos and threes. These scuffled a little during the night in their "primary meetings," but got used to "each other" by daylight. Early in the morning they were all driven into the turnpike at once, and an effort made to "start" them. Instead of moving on, not a bull budged. Every one squared himself in the road, with his horns lowered and his hoofs busily "defining his position." Each covered himself with a cloud of dust, and no one "knew where he stood" until some "member" accidentally "tramped on his toes," which was followed by a "lunge," the signal for a general fight. The hundred and fifty announced with a loud snort they had "accepted the issue." One hundred and fifty tails flashed in the air. Three hundred horns—long and short—met in fierce collision. The dust rose in vast fogs, as from an army in motion with cannon and cavalry. The mountains on either hand bellowed back the deep and deafening roar of the combat. Fences were splintered, trees torn up, crops perished, the earth shook.

The sun rose as they joined in battle, and reached its zenith when the fight was fiercest. Night settled down upon a few battered bulls staggering along—the last of the living "rations." Hoofs, tails, hair, horns, and hide marked the distance of that day's "drive"—just a half mile!

As the sun set and the "detailed men" returned with only the stumps of their whips left, the commissary opened his mouth in a wise saying: "There were too many bulls for a safe trip, boys."

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to exhibit recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuble is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Don't Do It.

Don't invest all of your money in lottery tickets. Give some other man a chance for a prize.

Don't loaf about the streets and depend on the Lord for your "daily bread." He isn't running a bakery.

Don't tell an editor how to run a newspaper. Let the poor fellow find it out himself.

Don't discuss scientific questions with a lightening rod man. His arguments are generally solid and always pointed.

—While witnessing a game of base ball out West a boy was struck on the back of his head, the bawl coming out of his mouth.

If government authorities had not interfeared probably the next starling calamity which would have shocked the public, would have been an explosion of nitro glycerine on a line of passenger steamers plying between Buffalo and Duluth. Recently a large seizure of this explosive compound was made on one the steamers, and instead of being plainly marked, as directed by law, it was designated as putty, and placed among the common freight. In addition to that, while the steamers were allowed by law to carry but ninety passengers, they frequently take from 175 to 200, and the baggage so obstructed the passage ways, that in case of accident it would be impossible for many to escape.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP!

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, scarching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS.

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with much preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE. SIX BOTTLES, $5.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions, Pain, Sick Headache and Dizziness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood,

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects immediately show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

The Pike's Penance.

Where they came from no one knew. Among the farmers near the Bend there was ample ability to conduct researches be-set by far more difficulties than that of the origin of the Pikes; but a charge of buck-shot which a good-natured Yankee received one evening, soon after putting questions to a venerable Pike, exerted a depressing influence upon the spirit of investigation. But while there was doubt as to the father-land of the little colony of Pikes, their every neigh-or would willingly make affidavit as to the cause of their locating and their remaining at the Bend. When humanitarians argued that it was because the water was good and convenient, that the Bend itself caught enough drift wood, and that the dirt would yield a little gold, all farmers and stock owners would freely admit the validity of these reasons; but the admission was made with a countenance whose sorrow indicated that the greater causes were yet unnamed. But to people owning no property in the neighborhood—to tourists and artists—the Pike settlement at the Bend was interesting. The architecture of the village was of original style and no duplicate existed. Of the half dozen residences, one was composed exclusively of sod, another of bark, yet another of poles, roofed with a wagon-cover, and plastered on the outside with mud; the fourth was of slabs, nicely split from logs that had drifted into the Bend; the fifth was of hide, stretched over a frame, strictly Gothic from foundation to ridgepole; while the sixth, burrowed into the hillside, displayed only the barrel which formed its chimney. A more aristocratic community did not exist on the Pacific coast. Visit the Pikes when you would, you could never see any one working. Of churches, school-houses, stores and other plebeian institutions, there were none, and no Pike bemeaned himself by entering a trade or soiling his hands by agriculture. Yet unto this peaceful, contented neighborhood there found his way a visitor who had been everywhere in the world without once being made welcome. He came to the house built of slabs, and threatened the wife of Sam Trotwine, owner of the house; and Sam, after sunning himself uneasily for a day or two, mounted a pony and rode off for a doctor to drive the intruder away. When he returned he found all the men in the camp seated on a log in front of his own door, and then he knew he must prepare for the worst—only one of the great influences of the world could force every Pike from his own door at exactly the same time. There they sat, yellow-faced, bearded, long-backed and bent, each looking at the other, and all like Sam.

"How is she?" said Sam.

"Well," said the oldest man, with deliberation, "the wimmin's all thar, if that's any sign."

Suddenly the raw hide which formed the door of Sam's house was pushed aside, and a woman came out and called Sam. As he entered his hut all the women lifted sorrowful faces and retired. Sam dropped by the bedside and was human; his heart was in the right place, and, though heavily intrenched by years of laziness, it could be brought to the front, and it came now. The dying woman cast her eyes appealingly at the surgeon, and that worthy stepped outside the door. Then the woman said:

"Sam, doctor says I ain't got much time left."

"Mary," said Sam, "I wish ter God I could die for yer. The children ——"

"It's them I want to talk about, Sam," replied his wife. "An' I wish they could die with me, rather'n hev 'em live ez I've hed to. Not that you ain't been a kind husband to me, for you hev. Whenever I wanted meat yer got it somehow; an' when yer been ugly drunk yer kept away from the house. But I'm dyin', Sam, and it's cos you've killed me."

"Good God, Mary!" said Sam; "I swow to God I dunno what yer drivin' at."

"It's jest this, Sam," replied the woman. "Yer tuk me, tellin' me ye'd love me an' honor me, an' pertect me. You mean to say yes done it? I'm a-dyin', Sam—I hain't got no favors to ask of nobody, an' I'm telling the truth, not knowin' what word'll be my last."

"Then tell a feller where the killin' came in, Mary, for Heaven's sake."

"It's come in all along, Sam. There is women in the States, so I've heerd, that marries fur a home an' bread an' butter, but you promised more'n that, Sam. An' I've waited, an' it ain't come. An' there's something' in me that's all starved and cut to pieces. An' it's your fault, Sam. I tuk yer fur better or fur wuss, an' I've never grumbled."

"I know yer haint, Mary," whispered the conscience-stricken Pike. 'An' I know what yer mean. If God'll only let yer be fur a few years, I'll see of the thing can't be helped. Don't cuss me, Mary—I've never knowed how I've been a-goin.' I wish there was something I could do fore you go, to pay yer all I owe yer."

"Pay it to the children, Sam," said the sick woman, raising herself in her miserable bed. "I'll forgive yer everything if you'll do the right thing for them. Do—do—everything!" said the woman, throwing up her arms and falling backward.

The next day a wagon brought a coffin and a minister, and the whole camp silently and respectfully followed Mrs. Trotwine to a home with which she could find no fault. For three days all the male Pikes in the camp sat on the log in front of Sam's door and expressed their sympathy, as did three friends of Job's—that is, they held their peace. But on the fourth their tongues were unloosed. Sam's actions were so unusual and utterly unheard-of that it seemed as it even the stones must have wondered.

"I never heard of such a thing," said Brown Buck; "he's gone and bought new clothes for each of the four young 'uns."

"Yes," said the patriarch of the camp, "an' this mornin' when I went down to the bank to soak my head, 'cos last night's liquor didn't agree with it, I seed Sam with all his young 'uns as they wus awashin' their faces an' hands with soap. They'll ketch their death and be on the hill with their mother 'fore long, if he don't look out. Somebody ort to reason with him."

"'Twon't do no good," sighed Limping Jim. "He's lost his head, an' reason just goes into one ear an' out at t'other ear. When he was scrapin' around his front door t'other day, and I asked him what he wus a-layin' the ground all bare and desolate fur, he said he was done keeping pig-pen. Now, everybody but him knows he never had a pig. His head's gone, just mark my words."

On the morning of the fourth day, Sam's friends had just secured a full attendance on the log, and were at work upon their first pipes, when they were startled by seeing Sam harness his horse in the wagon and put all his children into it.

"Whar ye bound fur, Sam?" asked the patriarch.

"Goin' to take 'em to school to Maxfield—goin' to do it ev'ry day."

The incumbents of the log were too nearly paralyzed to remonstrate, but after a few moments of silence the patriarch remarked, in tones of feeling, yet decision:

"He's had a tough time of it, but he's no business to ruin the settlement. I'm an' old man myself and I need peace of mind, so I'm going to pack up my traps. When the folks at Maxfield knows what he's doin', they'll make him a constable or a justice, an' I'm too much of a man to live nigh any sich." And next day the patriarch wheeled his family and property to parts unknown.

A few days later Jim Merrick, a brisk farmer a few miles from the Bend, stood in front of his own house, and shaded his eyes in solemn wonder. It couldn't be—he'd never heard of such a thing before—yet it was—there was no doubt of it—there was a Pike, riding right toward him, in open daylight. And when Sam—for it was he—approached Merrick and made his business known, the farmer was more astonished and confused than he had ever been in his life before. Sam wanted to know for how much money Merrick would plough and plant a hundred and sixty acres of wheat for him, and whether he would take Sam's horse—a fine animal brought from the States, and for which Sam could show a bill of sale—as security for the amount until he could harvest and sell his crop. Merrick so well understood the Pike nature that he made a very liberal offer, and afterward said he would have paid handsomely for the chance.

A few days later and the remaining Pikes at the Bend experienced the greatest scare that ever visited their souls. A brisk man came into the Bend with a tripod on his shoulder and a wire chain and some wire pins, and a queer machine under his arm, and before dark the Pikes understood that Sam had deliberately constituted himself a renegade by entering a quarter section of land. Next morning two more residences were empty, and the remaining fathers of the hamlet adorned not Sam's log but wandered about with faces vacant of all expression, save the agony of the patriot who sees his home invaded by corrupting influences too powerful for him to resist.

Then Merrick sent up a plough-gang and eight horses, and the tender green of Sam's quarter-section was rapidly changed to a dull brown color. Day by day the brown spot grew larger, and one morning Sam arose to find all his neighbors departed, having wreaked their vengeance upon him by taking away his dogs. And in his delight at their disappearance Sam freely forgave them all.

Regularly the children were carried to and from school, and even to Sunday-school. Regularly every evening Sam visited the grove on the hillside, and came back to lie by the hour watching the sleeping darlings. Little by little the farmers began to realize that their property was undisturbed. Little by little Sam's wheat grew and waxed golden, and then there came a day when a man from 'Frisco came and changed it into a heavier gold—more gold than Sam had ever seen before. And the farmers began to step in to see Sam, and their children came to see his, and kind women were unusually kind to the orphans; and, as day by day Sam took his solitary walk on the hillside, the load on his heart grew lighter, until he ceased to fear the day when he, too, should lie there.

—A Panama paper gives a striking illustration of the vigor and rapidity of vegetation in the tropics by referring to the bushes and trees growing in the ruins of the burnt Aspinwall hotel at Panama. It is scarcely more than two years since this conflagration occurred, and yet there are now growing within the walls trees at least thirty feet in height. They belong to what are called trumpet trees (Cecropia,) and the branches are said to be crowding out of the highest doors and windows, so as to render it probable that in their further growth they will throw down the wall with which they are interlaced.

On Friday, gold went to 114 1-2 in Wall street. Henry Clews & Co. give notice of their resumption with new accounts. Some relief is expected from shipments of gold from the Bank of England. The house of Jay Cooke & Co. has been forced into bankruptcy at Philadelphia on the petition of a depositor with the firm. Cooke & Co. are out with a statement of their condition giving their liabilities as $7,929,406 26, and their assets $15,966,212 17. Over $12,000,000 worth of bonds having been purchased by the Treasury Department since the commencement of the panic, the annual saving of interest to the government will be about $750,000 in gold. Some of the Chicago banks have suspended.

A horse in Middlesex, Vermont, a few since, by some unaccountable movement got one of his hind feet so firmly imbedded in his jaws that neither beast nor man could extricate it until the shoe was taken off and the foot pulled through the horse's jaws, which were then extended to their utmost tension. The animal had a stiff-necked time of it for a spell, and is not likely to essay again to tickle his palate with his hind foot.

Barque Glacier, Capt. Potter, at New Bedford, Sept. 26, from Parson's Bay, brought home parts of the crews of the wrecked whalers Orray Taft and Ansel Gibbs. Capt. Potter of the Glacier has several heavy silver spoons and forks, having upon them Franklin's and other coats of arms which he purchased from the Esquimaux at Repulse Bay, who had come from King William's Land, near the supposed spot where Franklin's vessels were left, and the natives state that both vessels had gone to pieces.

Professor Bailey advertised that he would make an ascension in a balloon at Wapello, Iowa, last week and drew a large crowd to the fair grounds. The balloon was inflated with hot air, and left the ground with Bailey hanging by his hands to a horizontal bar beneath. Just as it started it took fire near its mouth. Bailey did not apparently notice the fire until too high to let go with safety, but hung on until he had reached an altitude of 1200 or 1500 feet, when the canvas that held the hoop from which he was suspended, burned away, and he fell, reaching the earth a quarter of a mile from the point of starting. The body was frightfully mangled, the legs being driven into the hard ground up to his knees.

Shocking Accident on Chelsea Bridge.

[Boston Journal, 27th.]

A terrible accident happened at Chelsea bridge about nine o'clock this forenoon, at the crossing of the Mystic Railroad. A Chelsea car, with some twelve or fifteen persons, was proceeding on the bridge toward Chelsea, and as it approached the crossing of the Mystic Railroad, the driver saw a train of cars approaching. A flagman also warned the driver of the approach of the train, but he attempted to whip up and get across ahead of the train. He barely cleared the track, the railroad cars just grazing the rear dasher of the horse car. The passengers inside were very much alarmed, and some left the car as quickly as possible. Mrs. Wm. Butters of Medford attempted to do so and went upon the rear platform for the purpose. As the end of the train approached and seemed likely to dash against the horse car she jumped out and fell upon the track of the railroad, and before she could get clear of it the cars ran over her, severing both her legs from her body above the knees.

Drs. Shackelford and Wheeler of Chelsea were summoned immediately but the unfortunate woman died before reaching the house. The driver of the car was William H. Bolton, and the conductor George Roberts. It seems to be the impression that the driver was to blame for disobeying the signal of the flag-man, although he stated that his horses were spirited and he could not rein them in to stop the car in season.

A Dog in the Spirit Land.

Mr. George W. Johnson, better known as "Wayne Hovey," editor of Mr. Bergh's society paper, is responsible for the following remarkable story:

Not far from where Stewart's mansion now stands there lived some years ago, in a pretty little cottage, a very cheerful old woman. She labored under what some people called an extraordinary delusion; but to her everything was real and pleasing, and nobody had the heart to disturb her in her belief. Her name was Jane Sands, and from what could be learned of her early history she had been happily married. On her wedding day, in fact while the ceremony was being performed, a half-grown Newfoundland dog came into the church and laid down near the altar. An effort was made to drive him from his position, but without success. This circumstance, while it was considered singular, excited but little comment at the time. However, when the bride was taken to her new home, the dog followed, and finally became a member of the family. It is said that the rare intelligence of the animal, and his attachment to his master and mistress, was remarkable. Mrs. Sands lived with her husband ten years, when he died. The dog expired near him at the same time. The grief of the wife was intense, and for several days it was thought that she would lose her reason. One morning about two weeks after her husband's death, she called to see some of her neighbors, looking as cheerful and happy as on the day of her marriage. She told them a story, which they considered only an evidence of mental aberration. She said the spirit of the dog had appeared to her, and had brought with him a written message from her husband, who was in the "summer land." She also said the communication was filled with the sweetest words of affection, and that the dog had returned, taking with him her reply. In this delusion—it may be called such—the widow lived happily for many years. Every two weeks the faithful dog made his appearance at her bedside, just before dawn, with a loving letter from her husband, and patiently waited for her answer. Thus dreaming, one quiet summer night she died, happy in her belief concerning the spirit land, her husband and his faithful messenger.

An Impromptu Wedding.

A Missouri paper gives a detailed account of how a betrothed couple were persuaded to anticipate the day set for their wedding, and to have the ceremony abruptly performed at a birthday party, at which they chanced to be guests. It says:—"Recorder Theis was also present, and as soon as he saw the young couple come in, with an eye to business he suggested that if anybody was present who wished to be married he was at their service. The young couple took the hint. The young man was willing, but the maiden was backward and would not consent. Adam concluded to use a little diplomacy, so he says: 'I will make a present of a $35 cooking-stove to any couple that I shall marry to-night.' This proposition so delighted the company that others commenced offering presents. F. G. Mueller said, 'I will give a nice bureau;' F. G. Ahlers, 'And I a spring mattress;' Fischer, the hatter, 'Call on me for a rocking-chair.' Miller, the gunsmith, 'I'll give a set of cushion-bottom chairs;' Mr. Volk, 'And here's an extension table;' Mrs. Anna Neitebock, 'I'll give a $50 bedstead;' Mr. Gatz, 'Put me down for a fine looking glass;' Mrs. Mitchell, 'Here's a breakfast set;' Miss Fritz Nieteboek, 'I'll give a clock,' and so they went on until the presents in the aggregate amounted to about $400, the young couple meanwhile blushing and hardly knowing what to say or do. Several friends of the young lady got around her, and told her she would not again have such a favorable opportunity to 'make a start in the world;' and just as the party was breaking up; about 11 o'clock, Mr. Hunstock, who seemed to be working in Adam's interest and urging on the match, came round to the Recorder, and whispered in his ear: 'Stop a leedle, dot's all right—by chinks, we got a vedding anyhow poody soon!' Adam called a halt, the company stood still in hats and bonnets, while the Recorder proceeded, and said: 'I pronounce you man and wife, and may God bless you,' and Miss Stierin was Mrs. Groen, to the intense delight of all present."

The "Twelve O'clock Man."

A character well known by sight by many persons who daily passed the Brooklyn city hall at noon, died last week. He was known as "The Twelve O'clock Man." For seven years he had stood near the city hall, within sight of the clock, from eleven o'clock until the first stroke of the noon-day bell, when he had slouched away to his home. For more than five years his daily position was at a particular part of the railing, against the pickets of which he leaned, and looked mournfully at the clock. If spoken to he would mumble out an answer to the effect that he was waiting for somebody: "He'll come by twelve o'clock; he said he would." Says the New York Evening Post: The old man never failed to stand at his chosen post at that hour of the day; he was never properly clad, but in the hardest storm of rain and wind or snow, on the coldest winter day or the hottest summer day, he could always be seen at the city hall at noon. No one knew his story, but many guessed a piteous history of his life. It is now told that he was a monomaniac—(which everybody knew)—that he had saved a sum of money by hard work; that the money was borrowed of him with a promise to pay it, with interest, on a certain day, at noon, in front of the city hall. But the old man never saw the borrower again. He did odd chores in the morning and earned pennies enough to buy food; he lived in an old hut; he was dirty; his craziness did not come from a great and noble grief—from the loss of a loved relative or friend, but from the loss of a sum of money; he was every day gazed at with open-eyed astonishment by the idlers in the streets; he died. Some one has drawn his picture for a Brooklyn club, and a warm-hearted resident of the neighborhood has tled a piece of crape upon the railings by which he used to stand.

A Midnight Rehearsal.

[Belfast Journal.]

There is a young man in town who is soaked clear through with mad. He came home one night, recently, quite late, and hastily undressing slipped into bed, hoping to catch a nap before breakfast. Just as he put out the gas and sandwiched himself between the sheets his neighbor's rooster thought of something he wanted to say and crowed. Before he had fairly finished his speech another bird in the next barn spoke, and then one across the road gave his idea on the subject, and then two others in the distance advanced a similar idea at once, and then one other, so far off that it took both ears to hear it, yelled out something; and by that time the first one thought it time for him to finish his remarks, and for an hour and eleven minutes and a half they kept up their infernal jawing. He was so mad that he laid awake the rest of the night trying to invent some method of exterminating those birds. He got up mad, went down town and bought two roosters and had them for dinner, and he says he never enjoyed anything so much in his life as he did carving and grinding those birds up between his teeth.

—A few years ago, at the Eglinton tournament in England, it appeared that the famous knights of three and four centuries ago must have been smaller even than the Englishmen of to-day, for it was impossible to put on their armour. And now come vital statistics to prove that we are more hardy and longer-lived than our fathers. The statistics kept at Geneva since 1560 show that the average term of life has been steadily lengthening. At that time the average was only 22 years; it is now 40. In the fourteenth century the average mortality in Paris was 1 in 16; the rate has been reduced in our day to 1 in 32. In England, less than two centuries ago, the mortality was 1 in 33; now 1 in 42. The laws of life are better understood; the comforts of life more widely distributed, and habits of living improved; even consumption, the favorite malady of our New England climate, is yielding slowly to a wiser method of treatment, and the annual percentage of deaths is smaller than fifty years ago. If, by sound system of diet or exercise the constitutions of New England girls could take on a higher vitality and vigor, the outlook for the future would be hopeful.

—The Rochester (N. Y.) Union relates the following strange incident: "About six weeks ago Miss Crowell, a ward of Mrs. Pruyn of Albany, mysteriously disappeared from the residence of that lady and for a long time all efforts to discover her whereabouts were unavailing. An uncle of the young lady assisted Mrs. Pruyn in the search. He came westward, and, on reaching this city, fell in with a Cleveland man, who told him a remarkable story of a young lady who had been found on the stoop of his residence in a sort of trance, who had been sheltered, and who displayed a number of accomplishments, though still out of her mind. The description was sufficient clew, and the girl's uncle proceeded directly to Cleveland, where he found his long lost neice in the condition stated. She was suffering from aberration of mind. On being removed to her residence in Albany a terrible fever set in and she has not yet recovered.

TEMPERANCE MEDICINES.

If you would patronize true Temperance Medicines, scientifically prepared by a skilled physician, and by a process the discovery of his own, wherein not a drop of rum, whiskey, beer or any other alcoholic or fermented liquor enters—use Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines. They do not manufacture drunkards, as do the various "Cordials," "Tonics," "Elixirs" and "Bitters" of the day. Golden Medical Discovery is nutritious, tonic, alterative, or blood cleansing, and an unequalled cough remedy. Pleasant Purgative Pellets, scarcely larger than mustard seeds, constitute an agreeable and reliable physic: Favorite Prescription—a remedy for debilitated females; while his Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is known the world over as the greatest specific for Catarrh and "Cold in the Head" ever given to the public. 608

A Good Thing Duly Appreciated.

No beneficial revolution ever goes backward; and this maxim is as invariable in medicine as in politics. The advent of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, twenty years ago, produced a revolution in the treatment of a large class of ailments, and that revolution has ever since been in "the full tide of successful experiment." If that tide has borne the proprietors of the celebrated vegetable specific "on to fortune," it has also borne thousands of human beings, who were languishing under the effects of disease, weak and hopeless, out of despondency into the paradise of health and cheerfulness. It is no exaggeration to say, that to the vigor the regularity of habit of body, the good appetite and perfect digestion, acquired under the operation of this unequalled tonic and corrective, multitudes of people in every walk of life who had been vainly physicked in the usual way, give the blessings of renewed health and the prospect of prolonged life.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The receipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic-rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is prized for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Local Matters.

Labors Among the Colored People.

Messrs. Editors:—As many of the readers of your excellent paper will be pleased to learn some interesting facts relative to the present situation of the colored people of Portsmouth, and of the country in general, and as one who has been laboring for and with them in the south and in the north since 1842, I thought a few brief statements might be acceptable. For fifty years or more, many of the colored people during the long and dark night of slavery, have been fleeing from different parts of the south and settling in the west and New England, and more especially in the cities and towns, and have been mostly isolated from the other portions of these communities, which will account for their failure to keep pace with the white residents during this period. Their fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters and friends left behind were being sold to different masters, of different names, they taking the names of each. Some have been sold a dozen times, more or less. Hence the matter of tracing each other became impossible. For instance, I am fifty-five years old. Yet my mother was sold from me forty-nine years ago; brother and sister were also sold from me forty-seven years ago. Neither of them have I heard from since, until in 1866,—while at Knoxville, East Tenn., my sister received one of my missionary circulars in Texas, and wrote to me, referring to our original owners. Such is the condition of hundreds of thousands to-day. But what I was about to say is that since the declaration of Freedom, they are providentially hearing from each other and many in different parts of the south are finding out their long-lost relatives in the west, north and east and are coming and settling down with them; many are the children of God, and representatives of the different churches; others are persons of religious proclivities, and some are not, while the great bulk of them in point of intelligence and wealth, are a hundred years behind the average mass of white people of New England. Observation has shown that not one of five of these people ever attend our usual places of worship, notwithstanding the friendly attention of many of the white pastors. This arises from several causes: 1. They are, as a general thing, used to their own churches. 2. While the before named pastors and members may and do make allowances for their want of intelligence, and many of their peculiar forms of expression and warmth, yet there are others in the same churches who are prejudiced against them, and others who severely criticise their actions. 3. As a general thing, the more advanced (I mean in wealth and secular education) churches have lost their hold upon the poor of this world,—the class for whom Jesus came into this world—in the midst of whom Jesus lived and for whom he died and rose again. Now as these classes cannot, as we have said, be gathered into the various churches before named, it becomes our duty to teach them and evangelize them by missions, churches, sabbath and singing schools. This has been done in part all through the west and in different parts of New England by organizing the colored people so that others coming to their midst may be reached and cared for, as has been done in Boston, Providence, New Bedford and in hundreds of other places. It should be borne in mind that the large body of colored christians are Baptists and Methodists, while many have become Congregationalists south, because of their glorious record with others, during the late civil war in favor of the Union cause and of education. As I have been requested by our national convention to continue my labors in this cause I came to Portsmouth over three weeks ago, and since then have organized a Baptist church here, denominated the Mount Olivet Baptist church of Portsmouth, N. H. We have also organized a sabbath school and a singing school, in each of which members are pledged in favor of temperance. We are holding our sabbath meetings in the South Chapel. We have resolved to endeavor to get a lot, and to have a small, neat church edifice built upon the same, to hold our meetings in. We earnestly invite the citizens to aid us in our work, and by the blessing of Almighty God we expect many souls to be saved through the instrumentality of the church, sabbath and singing schools. Will the citizens who are interested in these matters take hold with us? I thank those who have aided me since I have been here, and continue to solicit their kind aid, as I am not a paid agent, but feel called upon to labor to the best of my ability in the elevation of our people. I have labored six years at the south, until stricken down because of an attack upon the use of intoxicating drinks in the church, losing much time and means, and suffering on that account. If any of the friends desire to aid us in our work they can reach us through the Post Office or we would be pleased to call upon them if it would be agreeable. We are also willing to preach or to speak in any of the meetings. EDMUND KELLEY.

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 24, 1873.

Death of James K. Medbery.

The Anglo-American (London) Times announces the death of a former resident of Portsmouth, as follows:

We regret to announce this week, the death of a very promising young American journalist, Mr. Jas. K. Medbery, of New York city, who died in London on the 30th of August last. Mr. Medbery was at different times on the editorial staff of the N. Y. Evening Post, the Round Table, the Evening Mail, the Commonwealth, and latterly Henry Ward Beecher's weekly, the Christian Union. He was also a large contributor to the foremost monthly magazines, many of whose ablest articles are from his pen. Mr. Medbery was the author of a work, published about three years ago, by Fields, Osgood, and Co., of Boston, entitled "Men and Mysteries of Wall street." At the time of its appearance this book attracted much attention, not alone because of the entertaining nature of the work, but also for the original and masterly way in which the subject was treated. Mr. Medbery was the founder of the American Literary Bureau, an institution peculiar to America, and which owes its existence and success almost entirely to his single effort and untiring energy. In private life, Mr. Medbery endeared himself to all who knew him, by his sincere and genial nature and the charm of his keen and active intelligence. By his death, American literature loses one of its most scholarly contributors, who always brought to his work the ready tact of a quick sympathy, and the richness of a most profound culture.

Singing.

Messrs. W. R. Preston, W. N. Ilsley, J. C. Butler, H. L. Harlow, T. S. Nowell, L. S. Butler, J. C. Tilton and L. V. Newell have issued a circular of invitation as follows:

It is the desire of a large number of the choir and other singers to form an advanced class to come under the direction of Prof. E. S. Metcalf for a term of fifteen lessons, to be given every Tuesday evening. You are cordially invited to attend a preliminary meeting at Mendum's Hall, Tuesday evening, Sept. 30th, when Prof. Metcalf will give those present some idea of his method of vocal teaching. We regard this as a rare opportunity for advanced singers to have the benefit of a first-class Teacher and Director, and trust we may receive your hearty cooperation, which will materially aid in giving music a new impetus in our city. Please bring "Mozart's Twelfth Mass."

We are requested to notify advanced singers who may not have received a circular, that they are expected to be present the same as if notified.

The Temperance Tilt.

The New York Times says "Mayor Marvin seems to have a very peculiar idea of his duties as an executive officer;" and says further: "It will be surprising if the temperance people of New Hampshire do not make effective use of this extraordinary action on the part of the 'executive' officers of Portsmouth in demanding the establishment of a State constabulary."

Frank--or Edwin?

[Peterboro' Transcript.]

The names most prominently named for the democratic nomination for governor next winter are Mr. Frank Jones of Portsmouth and Mr. E. C. Bailey of the Concord Patriot.

Laconics.

Portsmouth wants an artesian well.

A project is on foot to establish a gymnasium.

What will our city fathers do to relieve the water famine?

Messrs. Plumer D. Norton and others propose to establish a boat-club next Spring.

Water carriers in the streets of Portsmouth curse the inefficiency of the aqueduct company.

As Governor-elect Dingley of Maine does not favor capital punishment, Wagner's chance of hanging is a slim one.

We hope the lyceum course of entertainments will include that amateur burlesque on Romeo and Juliet.

An issue for the next municipal election—the water question. Perish every thought but that!

Does a perpendicular moon indicate more water? If yes—blessings on that distant body.

It is stated that the new Marblehead branch of the Eastern Railroad will be open for business by the middle of October.

Henry M. Clark, Esq., has up-in his store a Baxter steam engine, 2-horse power, for the manufacture of sausages and for heating purposes.

Twenty-eight locomotives are cleaned in the round-house of the Eastern railroad here every day, besides nineteen freight engines that come in every night.

Rev. B. T. Sanborn of the Congregational church at Eliot has sued Kennard for writing an article charging the clergyman with immoral practices.

T. S. Nowell's employes were obliged to carry water from Warren street to the manufactory on State street in order that the engine might be run. Nice fun!

Is a great fire necessary to teach property-owners a lesson in wisdom? Would a million dollar fire induce them to combine for prevention of such disasters by providing water?

Wanted—a man of level head and vim to lead the embittered host of citizens in the pursuit of the best means of supplying the city of Portsmouth with water. Who is the coming man?

Mrs. Flora E. Barry, the well-known contralto, was divorced from her husband by the Massachusetts Supreme Court on Saturday for extreme cruelty. Mr. Barry made no opposition.

The North Conway express trains have been discontinued, as has the 6 P. M. express from Boston. A train leaves Boston for this city now at 10 A. M. See advertisement for other changes.

A democratic editor in this region commences an article with "How much do we owe?" As a conundrum we give it up. He might call a meeting of his creditors and then figure up their bills, and the result would be the answer.

A postal card, with a dollar bill sewed on the back side, was received at the Portland post office recently. It was evidently mailed at Kittery, as directly above the bill, on the card, was: "If this is stolen it will be after it leaves the Kittery post office."

Hon. Frank Jones has commenced building his branch track from the Eastern Railroad—just beyond Wardwell's store at the creek, running across Islington street, through Brewery lane up to his brewery, for the conveyance of his ale, thus saving horse flesh and the cutting up of the streets by his heavy teams.

A horse belonging to Mr. John A. Lamprey dropped dead on Elm street, Sunday evening. The driver, whose name we did not learn, stated that he had just been taken out of pasture. Other parties state that he had been over-driven. Sundays seem to be hard days for horses, in Portsmouth.

One of the benefits to Portsmouth arising from the construction of the P. & D. Railroad, will be the opening, by Hon. Frank Jones, of a large wholesale grocery store in Neil's block on Market street, where our merchants can buy at less than Boston prices, as Mr. Jones intends importing his own West India goods.

The Sunday ordinance is to be enforced, and it is about time. Mayor Marvin and Alderman Spinney were wending their way down State street, Sunday afternoon, when they observed several men entering "Kelley's," corner of Chapel and Sheafe streets. Thinking that the Sunday ordinance was being violated, the gentlemen called the city marshal, and went in also. Half-a-dozen men, who were found imbibing the foaming XXX, were considerably taken aback. Judge Page will interview the fair bar-maid of the institution this morning.

Smyth's Hall at Manchester is to be rededicated this evening, the occasion being the second annual concert and ball by the Fireman's Relief Association. The Manchester Cornet Band will give a concert from eight to nine o'clock, after which Dignam's Quadrille Band of twelve pieces will furnish the music for dancing. Tickets admitting a gentleman and two ladies, one dollar each. Persons desiring to attend from this city will be in season by leaving here in the afternoon train, the grand march commencing at 9.30.

A young man named Pruet, residing on Spruce Creek, in Kittery, captured a live loon on Friday morning. The man was on his way to the navy yard when he discovered the bird, which was entangled in the eel-grass, but unhurt. The loon showed fight, and drew blood freely from the captor's hand,—but was ignominiously captured, more ignominiously sold for half a dollar, and will be tamed and kept for a decoy. The loon is noted as being about as hard a bird to kill as can be found, as it will dive at the flash of a gun, and so quickly as to escape the shot.

Parties interested in the Concord Railroad have been in Portsmouth the past week to examine the means of enlarging the terminal facilities of that road. The proposal to import coal at New London, New Bedford, or some other place, carry it by rail to Nashua, where coal pockets could be located, and thence ship it by boats to Manchester has enough significance to arouse the Concord managers from their present state of repose in regard to the business at Manchester and the north. The receipts of coal at Portsmouth this season going over this road have been far more evenly distributed than in former years, and consequently consignees have been compelled to pay but little demurrage. The business over this line, both freight and passenger, can be increased by a slight effort, and as the Concord recovers to its own use all that is paid in business between Concord, Manchester and Portsmouth, it would seem that the way out of the purchase of the Concord stock at the high rates by some of the present holders would be in the development of this business.

No More Half-Baked Ministers.

[N. Y. Observer.]

The time has gone by for dull preachers. The activities of the age, the diffusion of knowledge by schools, books and periodicals, the spread of infidelity, the prevalence of doubt, the subtlety of false science, demand live, strong, earnest, capable men to preach the gospel. It will not answer to educate dullness or mediocrity. It was forbidden that a son of Aaron should be a priest, if he had any blemish. Even a flat nose excluded him. And the age wants no half-baked ministers. The West will not hear them. The East cannot bear them. The heathen know too much to take them. They are not wanted on this earth. To get money to educate dull boys, because they are pious, is robbing God and a fraud upon the Church. It is a crime and a blunder, and sometimes both.

—The young ladies of some of the Western cities have a touching way of exhibiting their tender devotion to the object of their affection. They trundle them about the streets in elegant go-carts. It may be well to mention that the objects of their affection are pet poodle dogs.

—One hundred and forty girls, all under thirteen years of age, picking over rags in a New York warehouse, struck for higher wages the other day, made speeches, passed resolutions and went back to work at the same old figure.

—"Gath" epitomizes Long Branch as "a stretch of frame-houses on a green bluff, with good air, fair roads, a bad, dirty and dangerous surf, and great monotony, relieved only by dissipation."

—A lady of the shoddy aristocracy at St. Jo found, on returning from a walk, some call cards on her table. She called a servant in great haste, saying, "John, John, take these and run quick! them ladies is forgot their tickets."

—Widows who have lost two husbands are the only ladies who have, as yet, evinced much interest in the "third term" question.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS.

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

Daily Chronicle.

Your Mother-in-Law.

A good many things, some of them good, many sharp, and occasionally cruel, having been said, of late, of mothers-in-law, and now comes one of this much-talked-of class and tells her side of the story. That she tells it well will be admitted by all who read it.

Left a widow, after a few years of most unhappy married life, I retired, with my two children, to a small town, where I intended to subsist upon my very moderate means, and to devote myself to the care of their education.

I think the enjoyment we have in our children before they reach the age of ten is very great. All faults and evil tendencies seem so sure to be eradicated with time, we can scarcely believe the pains we are taking will ever have any but the desired result. These early promises are so beautiful! Every childish liking seems a talent, lacking only opportunity to develop into excellence.

My girl and boy went to school in the morning. In the afternoon we walked together, and we all three enjoyed those long rambling walks. Then our tea table, and our evenings, when I read to them—how delightful was our companionship! How I tried in every way to sow the good seed. I have said that my means were small, but wants were few, and I considered it my duty to make them fewer, for my children's sake. I took care that they were always well dressed, often working until late at night at their clothes—my own were plain enough. They never knew, of course, the sacrifices I made that they might have pleasure.

That my children loved me, respected me, I need not repeat. Their first thoughts always seemed to be of me. At Christmas they presented me with horrid little daubs, which I still treasure, tied up in little packages, and dated. Ah! happy, happy days:—days when a paper of sweet cake is sufficient for happiness.

The days came when they grew tall and less dependent on me. James left school, and, as my means did not admit of his going to college, I obtained admittance for him into the place of business of a friend. One day I heard an acquaintance say that my son admired a Miss Benson. Then first shot into my heart that acute pang of jealousy which I had heard a woman feels when another woman dares to lay claim to her son—a bitter unreasonable feeling, but strong and fierce, trample on it as you may. I asked James about it; he laughed at the idea.

A year later he announced that he was engaged to this very girl, and asked me to go and see her. I went. She was tall and very thin, and stylish-looking, with reddish hair. She wore a great many flounces, and a great deal of jewelry, of the pale gold kind. Her manners were very gracious to me, but somehow or rather there was something about her that seemed to say she was the one who had always had a right to James, while I stood out in the queer and awkward light of one whose claims upon him were very trifling, and quite recent.

When I went home I sat in my rocking chair for about an hour, thinking. I had understood the formation of every kite he had ever flown, fathomed the capacities for every toy cannon with which he had ever just missed committing suicide, overcome the mysteries of marbles of every degree, loved every puppy and kitten he had ever adopted and taken to his heart—why could I not at least try to love this reddish-haired girl? People congratulated. "O! yes, I was much pleased, not losing a son at all—O! no—only gaining another daughter!" "Delightful, certainly, and early marriages are, as you say, so very desirable."

A year afterward they were married, and remained some months with her family, during which time I saw her often, and cannot say that I ever had any fault to find with her. Then James sought and obtained a very good position in a town distant about one hundred miles. At first the news was very satisfactory. "Charming little house, the perfection of servants;" and then, later, "the loveliest little baby," my grandson. Then, some months later, things were not quite so bright. The baby had had the croup, my son himself a touch of the intermittent fever, servants were great plagues, housekeeping a dreadful trouble. Disturbed beyond measure at the reiteration of these lamentations, I decided to go and see for myself how they were circumstanced, and be of what assistance I might for a short time. So one winter morning, leaving Fanny with an intimate friend, and entrusting my house and all it contained to the care of one servant, I left home alone. Arriving after dark at my destination, found the two young servants enjoying a very comfortable meal in the kitchen, and the baby asleep alone in a chilly nursery. My son and his wife were out spending the evening with some friends. Their surprise and pleasure at seeing me upon their return home appeared great. Upon conversing with Maria the next day, I found her to be very ignorant as regarded baby's requirements. "He does cry so dreadfully," she said. I stayed there a whole month; perhaps it was too long, but there always seemed to be something for me to do. I took charge of the little creature whenever his mother wanted to spend an evening in company, which was not seldom. Many and many a lonely hour did I spend in that dimly-lighted room, listening to that low breathing, rather than trust him to the awkwardness of the young girl who professed to fulfill the duties of a child's nurse. I did a great deal of sewing for Maria, of whom I became fonder than I had ever expected to be.

James had a relapse of his intermittent fever. His wife knew nothing about sickness; I nursed him—I who had never known fatigue when he needed anything in former years, would surely not fail him now. I sat up with him night after night, and showed the cook how to prepare nice little dishes for him, such as I knew he liked—that is to say I prepared them while the cook looked on. Whatever was wanted now, up stairs or down, I was the one to plan and to do. At last I began to think I ought to return to Fanny; and seeing James fairly convalescent, I sought the train for my journey homewards. Sitting in the railroad car, a party of young people took places in front of me, laughing and talking with eager animation, principally about persons I knew nothing of, except by name. Presently one of them began to talk of my son's wife.

"I used to see a great deal of them at one time," she said; "but—"

"But what?" asked another.

"O, well, they had a mother-in-law raging around lately, so I have kept away."

"So have I."

Here followed a laugh of derision.

"A mother-in-law," exclaimed another, "that is hard; I do pity them, indeed."

"But I hear she is off now."

"Glad to hear it. Have you heard the new opera?"

I was the mother-in-law on whose account friends kept away. I remembered the weary nights in that sick room; the weary days, when, suffering from the loss of sleep, I struggled to keep my eyes open, that I might attend to various little household duties. Which of all this was the "raging round," which excited the risible muscles of those lively young people. I thought of Fanny, her good looks, her intelligence, her affectionate nature, and found myself wondering what her future was to be. But here we are. There she was waiting to meet me, dear child; but there was some one with her, a most insignificant looking individual, with very prominent eyes and large whiskers. Why did my heart sink with a melancholy foreboding.

How glad she was to see me again. She introduced her companion to me as Mr. Jenkins; and whereas I was anxiety to be alone with her, Mr. Jenkins, with a great flourish of politeness, walked all the way home with us. Before I could untie the strings of my bonnet he told me that Fanny had promised to marry him! I was thunder-struck, having in the annoyance of his presence forgotten my forebodings of half an hour before. I had read with much attention, in various highly lauded books, of the great and imperative duty of bringing up a girl to be a helpmeet for a noble man—this dapper little manikin! He seemed amiable, but so utterly insignificant! He had uninteresting parents, and weak plain sisters, all of whom made a perpetual amusement of the engagement. My parlor was given up to them entirely—that is, to him and his sisters. I seemed always "de trop" when I entered, judging by the sudden silence which followed the animated talk. My coming was an interruption. I began to sit up stairs; I always walked alone.

Having avoided all society and all acquaintaneship when my children were young, that I might devote my whole time to them, I found myself now friendless and desolate. Friends, like plants, must be cultivated. I found no congeniality in either of the two families with which my children were connecting themselves.

After two years they were married; and after a year of boarding aspired to the dignity of keeping house. After looking at many dwellings, one was selected, one which required a great many repairs, and now my services were in very great request; I attended to all the directions Mr. Jenkins wished given to the workmen; I stayed in the cold, empty rooms all day, when there was nothing to sit on but an empty candle-box. I did the necessary quarreling with the plumbers, and bore the snubbing of the upholsters; and I put the furniture in the places I thought best, by degrees changing it all to suit his tastes. I washed all the china and glass; and sometimes fancied, when I got dirty doing all this, that I was happy. I had so long been accustomed to work for those I loved that it was hard to learn that there might be any reproach connected with it. I must do Fanny the justice to say that she was very kind and grateful to me.

On the last day, after having some cold tea out of a pitcher on the corner of a mantle-piece, I overheard Mr. Jenkins, who had brought a friend in to admire his new dwelling, say:

"Well, the carpets are down, the furniture is all here, and I think now when we get our servants, and engage a baker and milkman, and are entirely rid of the mother-in-law, we shall be ready to move in."

Both my children married, I had my solitary little house to myself, and very solitary it was. I tried to get up some spasmodic friendships with my neighbors, but being hollow, these forced intimacies soon fell through. But I ought not to complain; it is the way of the world.

I only wonder if, considering the love we have for our children, young or old, the world is not apt to be a little hard upon the mother-in-law.

In the opinion of the Treasury department the provisions for the free entry of ship timber in the twenty-second section of the act of July 24, 1870, and for lumber and timber in the tenth section of the act of June 6, 1872, are not inconsistent, nor does the latter repeal or modify. Under the act of 1870, ship timber, as defined by the department under date of December 23, 1872, includes only such timber as is evidently to be used for the frame or keel of a vessel, or its masts and spars, and is absolutely free on importation, while under the act of June 6, 1872, the articles specified therein, which include not only ship timber, but all lumber and timber, are free only when used in the construction of vessels for foreign trade. Both provisions of the law are in force.

Hath. Mitchell and Jack Burns, in Cherokee county,, North Carolina, fought with butcher knives, and did not cease gashing each other until Mitchell, exhausted from excessive loss of blood, sank at the feet of Burns. The latter, though a miserable rough, was too honorable to strike his antagonist when down, but called assistance and had the wounded man taken to a neighboring house, and rode twelve miles, himself severely wounded, to procure medical assistance for his late antagonist. Mitchell is recovering, the parties are now friends and no arrests have been made.

Rotting Boxes.

[New York Sun.]

"They pop in and buy a box for twenty-five cents, never ask credit, and away they go. Sometimes one returns in a few minutes to buy another, his clothing torn and his face scratched, having met an envious fellow boot-black and butted boxes. A queer lot," added Miller, shaking his head. "That's one of their failings," said he, after a few moments of silence. "They must butt boxes. You see, one of these shavers meets another with whom he has a bone to pick, and grasping the box by the step, slashes away. Something must give away, and when one of the boxes caves in, the boy with the sound box is satisfied."

A story is told of a boot-black who bought five boxes in one day. He had been doing a flourishing business, and was said by his rivals to be "a little too high toned" for them. One night he took his sweetheart to the Bowery Theatre and procured reserved seats. This action made the blood boil in some of the other "shiners," who peered at him from the gallery, and all agreed that he had gone too far. Early the next morning the aristocratic boot-black was up and at work.

It was not long before five or six brother artists were around him, ready to run his box. They accused him of "putting on airs," and the fight began. The box was ruined, the victim's cap thrown into a butcher's cart dashing by, and the boy went to Miller's for another box. This box met the fate of the other, and four times that day the boy bought boxes. He promised never to be caught in a reserved seat again, and his friends say he kept his promise.

Sad Fate of a Dog.

[Reading (Pa.) Times.]

Mr. John Krebs, formerly of this city, who is engaged in the brewing business with his father-in-law, George Wurst, at Tremont, Schuylkill County, had a large dog, of the bull-terrier species, which he obtained of John G. Herman, of this city, having paid $25 for the dog. Several days ago the dog pursued a large rat in the brewery, and the rat, seeing no means of escape, jumped into the throat of the dog just as the latter had extended his jaws for the purpose of seizing the rat. The rat became wedged in the dog's throat so that it was impossible to remove it, and the dog died of strangulation.

The Exodus of the Prussians.

[Verdun cor. Pall Mall Gazette, Sept. 13.]

The day so anxiously expected by every patriotic Frenchman has at length arrived. This morning at eight o'clock the Prussian garrison, 5000 strong, marched out of Verdun, and three hours later the first detachment of national troops made their entry amid uproarious demonstrations of welcome, tears, shaking of hands, scattering of flowers and waving of tricolored flags such as did one's heart good to see. Probably few Verdunites slept last night, for the excitement of Frenchmen is electric and wakeful. Long after the hour for closing the cafes, groups lingered about the streets, chattering and smoking in the moonlight. The mounted patrols of uhlans rode by unheeded, the long files of foot pickets tramped on their final rounds through the crooked old streets, giving occasionally a friendly good night to the talkers, who stood aside to let them pass; and had it not been for the rain which began to fall about two o'clock, I dare say I might have heard the towns folk debate under my windows till morning whether Thiers was the Liberator in chief or McMahon. Of course the majority hold for Thiers, and had the ex-president made his appearance on the terrace of the citadel this morning he would have been treated to more tears and kisses than wooers or women have; besides being respectfully saluted by the Germans themselves, who speak of him with a deference very creditable to him and them.

But the sight was impressive enough withiout Thiers, for at the first notes of the reveille all Verdun seemed to be afoot. The shop shutters were taken down, the wine stores woke to life, the rag-pickers, who are used to have the streets all to themselves at such early hours, slank home abashed; and the market gardeners, jolting in with their carts, drew up alongside the pavements to deck the heads of their horses, mules, or donkeys with red, white and blue streamers, this formality having been prudently postponed until the carts had passed the sentries at the city gates. Meantime all was astir within the castle and barracks, and at seven o'clock began the review of the troops in heavy marching order by General Manteuffel—"l'Homme-Diable," as the Verdunites affect to translate his name with more humor than justice. At half past seven the inspection was over; at twenty minutes to eight the guns and baggage-wagons lumbered up to their respective posts at van, centre and rear of the infantry columns; at a quarter to eight the advanced guard of Uhlans received orders to start, and ten minutes later the first battallion of infantry, following close upon a field battery of artillerymen, formed fours, turned to the right, and broke into quick march, the band playing "Vaterland" with somewhat mournful energy. Not a cap was lifted, not a voice was raised to avow that the Prussians had discharged the unpleasant task of occupation with humanity and even kindness. The troops marched through the city between rows of faces expressing the reverse of God-speed. In some places the thoroughfares were deserted, the inhabitants affecting to rush under cover and bang their doors violently behind them as the columns advanced. Probably by order, the officers and men kept their eyes obstinately to the front, so that evidences of ill-will might escape them. In one instance only did I notice an officer deliberately raise his eyes, and that was opposite a house where, no doubt, he had lodged. A respectable looking woman and two young girls, seemingly her daughters, were standing at the window, and the officer in a quiet,gentleman like manner, lifted the point of his sword to his helmet. The women reddened and instantly retreated, without acknowledging his salute; and a morose patriot who had walked near me and had witnessed the episode grumbled something uncomplimentary, not so much against the Prussian as against the French women who had incurred his civility.

By nine o'clock the Prussians were all gone, and Verdun, become French again, broke into a sudden riot of bell-ringing, laughter, and joyous babble of voices such as has had not been heard for three years. Every man in the town seemed to have turned out of doors, either to gesticulate on the pavements or to plunge into the wine-shops and cafes, where hobnobbing to the revanche was conducted on a scale as enthusiastic as need be. Men all wore tricolored rosettes; the woman, too, had decked their caps or bonnets with the national ribbons, and were besides, busy hanging flags out of every window and over every door one passed. Soon this tricolor mania became rather a nuisance, for persons whose garments were unribboned risked being sharply apostrophized as to the reason; which reminds one of that anecdote concerning Alfred de Vigny, who, being gruffly asked by a mob of insurgents during the revolution of 1830 why he was not sporting the popular emblem, removed his hat, stared at it in blank surprise, and exclaimed, "Dear me, I must have left it on my nightcap." Not knowing whether such a reply would pass muster a second time, I bought a rosette like the rest, and gave myself up to the pleasure of hearing so many astounding tales about acts of valor and defiance perpetrated by the Verdunites on their conquerors that one would have thought the Prussians had spent their time here in being regularly cuffed and mystified. On all sides one could catch such fragments as "You remember that lout of a Uhlan who tried to frighten me?" "Don't you recollect the way I served that gawk with the silver epaulettes?" and so forth. In the restaurant where I went to breakfast a merry-faced young gentleman at a table near mine amused two friends with stories, which, if true, prove him to have been a thorn in the side of the whole garrison; and even the landlord of my hotel, who does not look a warlike man (indeed I saw him bow some Prussian officers into his dining-room last night with something very like humility,) has spoken to me so feelingly since this morning about the self-restraint he was obliged to exercise to avoid pitching his odious customer out of the window, that I sincerely pity him for having made his fortune out of the Prussian occupation, as he is currently reported to have done. But one must make allowances for the first vents of Chauvinism succeeding to six-and-thirty months of enforced silence. In less than a month, when every one has spun and respun his or her yarn of insults borne, smart repartees given, and challenges to fight hotly tendered and pusillanimously declined by a chicken-hearted foe, then these bubbles will burst; and it will be remembered here, as elsewhere, that the Prussian soldiers were gentle and well-behaved, and that the officers, save in very exceptional instances which only prove the rule, conducted themselves with temper and courtesy.

The Germans maintained to the end of their occupation of France their reputation for thrift and for turning an honest penny. The Verdun correspondent of the London Times, in a despatch dated September 5, gives the details of a little matter to which reference had been made in a despatch: At 11 A. M. the day before yesterday, M. de St. Vallier was at the bishop's residence, where he had taken up his quarter, expecting information from Manteuffel that the indemnity due from France to Germany had been entirely liquidated. A financial agent of the German army arrived, who informed him that Germany did not consider itself entirely settled with, and that a million francs were due for postal expenses. The French charge d'affaires having requested explanations on this point, the German officer told him that during the occupation of the French departments after the close of the war the French postal service was disorganized, and that the German field post was forced to supply its place. It was as remuneration for this service that the million francs were claimed. M. de St. Vallier thereupon asked for particulars of the claim, promising that the matter should be immediately taken up by the two governments; but he was informed that the German post office had made a precise calculation, and that there could be no discussion or ulterior settlement. The million francs, like the rest of the war indemnity, must be immediately paid in specie, failing which the German occupation would be prolonged. The perplexity which this occasioned may easily be imagined. The French charge d'affaires at once telegraphed to his government, pointing out the serious dangers involved in a prolongation of the occupation of Verdun and Etain, even for a single day. He cited the effect produced here a few days ago by the rumor that the occurrences of Lunneville would be prolonged. Angry groups collected under cover of night, while the German troops, marching in bodies, manifested a distrust which they had long ago abandoned. M. de St. Vallier was, therefore, justified in fearing the deplorable effect of any prolongation, and he took great care in negotiating a settlement of the question to keep the inhabitants in ignorance of the dispute. The answer of the French government speedily arrived. They desired at any price to avoid a postponement of the evacuation, and an order was given to the receiver of taxes to provide for this unexpected claim. Unluckily, he had not sufficient money to meet it, but measures were taken to obtain the money. Another difficulty however, was then raised by the Germans. They insisted on being paid in gold or silver, a condition which it was impossible to comply with. It would, at all events, have been necessary to appeal to the public. Every purse would certainly have been emptied immediately, but the whole affair must have been divulged, which it was necessary at any price to avoid. It is impossible to give an idea of the anxiety felt by those whose position rendered them cognizant of the affair. If the Germans had continued their preparations for departure, it was hoped that by the day fixed for it the million francs would be in readiness; but there was ostensibly a suspension of their preparations, and if the million was not immediately procured in gold or silver, the date of the evacuation would necessarily be deferred. During Wednesday evening, therefore, inquiries were made in every direction. The public treasuries of neighboring towns were made available, orders being dispatched from Paris for this purpose. Considering the well known extent of centralization in France, an idea can be formed of the activity which had to be displayed in order to procure the million in specie by yesterday morning. In spite of the care taken to keep the matter secret, it has got wind since this morning, and in going round the town I have witnessed the irritation manifested by the inhabitants. Their attitude is such as I had not previously observed since my arrival."

—The dedication of an Indiana church was postponed on account of the advent of a circus.

TEMPERANCE MEDICINES.

If you would patronize true Temperance Medicines, scientifically prepared by a skilled physician, and by a process the discovery of his own, wherein not a drop of rum, whiskey, beer or any other alcoholic or fermented liquor enters—use Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines. They do not manufacture drunkards, as do the various "Cordials," "Tonics," "Elixirs" and "Bitters" of the day. Golden Medical Discovery is nutritious, tonic, alterative, or blood cleansing, and an unequalled cough remedy. Pleasant Purgative Pellets, scarcely larger than mustard seeds, constitute an agreeable and reliable physic: Favorite Prescription—a remedy for debilitated females; while his Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is known the world over as the greatest specific for Catarrh and "Cold in the Head" ever given to the public. 698

A Good Thing Duly Appreciated.

No beneficial revolution ever goes backward; and this maxim is as invariable in medicine as in politics. The advent of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, twenty years ago, produced a revolution in the treatment of a large class of ailments, and that revolution has ever since been in "the full tide of successful experiment." If that tide has borne the proprietors of the celebrated vegetable specific "on to fortune," it has also borne thousands of human beings, who were languishing under the effects of disease, weak and hopeless, out of despondency into the paradise of health and cheerfulness. It is no exaggeration to say, that to the vigor the regularity of habit of body, the good appetite and perfect digestion, acquired under the operation of this unequalled tonic and corrective, multitudes of people in every walk of life who had been vainly physicked in the usual way, owe the blessings of renewed health and the prospect of prolonged life.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promises longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them, and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic-rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweeney horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSS & Co., 53 Broadway, New York.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Local Matters.

Fire at Rye Beach.

The large new boarding house, with stable and outbuildings, belonging to Mr. Abram Drake, at Rye Beach, was totally consumed by fire on Sunday evening. There was no one in the house at the time of the fire, as Mr. Drake and wife left home about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon and did not return until the house was in ashes. The stable was first discovered to be on fire by some of the neighbors about 8 o'clock, but as it was well under way when discovered and there was no means of checking it, the fire was soon communicated to the house. The neighbors saved the furniture and carpets. The house was situated on the new road from the Sea View House to the beach. Insurance $4500, which will not cover the loss.

Jennie Kimball's Company

Gave a laughable entertainment in conjunction with the exhibition of the "Mirror of Ireland," Saturday evening at the Temple. We have no especial regard for panoramic views, but the new "Mirror" has much merit as a work of art and was exhibited and explained pleasantly. Jennie Kimball is the great attraction in the comedy and we should prefer the introduction of some of her old-time entertainments rather than the performance as it is. Kelly is a most wonderful dancer and his "waltz" kept the audience in a roar. Miss D'Erina sang well and Atkinson gave the best exhibition on the bones we have seen for many a day. We hope Miss Kimball, and Messrs. Kelly and Atkinson will return with a more varied programme, which would insure a good house.

Rev. Carlos Martyn addressed his congregation at the North Church Sunday evening, on the lessons of the Wall street panic, drawing conclusions therefrom that he is happiest who is neither poor nor rich, and that the wealthy stock broker is not to be envied, as he has no time to devote to the home circle, where the greatest enjoyment should be found.

The Boston Advertiser says that a hopeful proprietor of the invention of a new rail in two parts, with packing between, living in Portsmouth, intimates that he declines $100,000 for his patent right, and will not look at anything less than half a million. The Mayor and Aldermen have before them a petition for a new highway to Rye which is attracting considerably attention. The road asked for will begin about one hundred rods beyond the four corners on Lafayette Road and will run in a straight line to Rand's store at Rye Centre. It will shorten the distance more than three quarters of a mile, besides avoiding the two hills on Lang's Road. The road will be about two and a quarter miles long, of which the portion in Portsmouth, being about one and a quarter miles, is favorable for construction, there being no cuts, but little filling through the swamp, and only one or two culverts and one small bridge. The new road if constructed will take all the travel to the southerly beaches and to Little Boar's Head, and no doubt will be strongly urged by all persons living at those points as well as at Rye Centre. The cost cannot much exceed five or six thousand dollars.

Remarkable Chemical Discovery.

The following was contained in a letter written by an American gentleman in Paris to a chemist in this country, and was published in the Turf, Field and Farm. If the discovery is as represented, it is a most important one.

A most remarkable discovery by which the very foundation of our present theory of chemical combinations is destroyed, has been made by M. Labarre, the well known chemist attached to the silk works of Foedre et Fils, Lyons. The facts of this discovery were embodied in a paper presented to the Academy of Science of Paris, at their weekly seance, on Friday, June 13, of the present year, and so important was it deemed that it was read in secret session, and publication for the present was postponed. The great point of this discovery is that hydrogen gas, so long regarded as a simple element, is, in fact, a compound of two gases, one of which far exceeds in levity any known element. The generally combined equivalent of hydrogen, the one for which the name is to be retained, is found to be nine-tenths, while the other, for which M. Labarre proposes the name abaron (from a, privative, and baros, weight), weightless, is, of course, one-tenth, or nine times less than the old supposed element.

Like many other important discoveries this was due to no accident, but to a long protracted series of accurate experiments. In fact, M. Labarre for a long time doubted the evidence of his senses. He, as did other scientific men, believed in the indivisibility of hydrogen, and it was not until after repeated and careful experiments, occupying over two years, that he dared to make his discovery known to the scientific world.

The experiments of Professor Graham, Master of the British Mint, have long since shown that hydrogen was the vapor of a highly volatile metal, though by no degree of cold pressure have we as yet been able to reduce it to a liquid form. Yet as the well known fluid metal, quicksilver, was known for many years ere it was solidified by cold, the time may come when hydrogen may be reduced to a liquid or even a solid state.

Professor Graham found that certain metals—more especially palladium and platinum—would absorb enormously large volumes of hydrogen gas, and retain it in the form of a true alloy. These experiments are well known to the American public by a lecture delivered by Dr. J. Emerson Reynolds before the Royal Doublin Society and republished in the "Smithsonian Report" for 1870, page 295, and the experiment has been frequently performed by our American chemists. It consists in allowing nascent hydrogen to come in contract with a ribbon of palladium wound in the form of a spiral; as the hydrogen is absorbed by the palladium, its volume is sensibly increased, and an index attached to the interior of the coil is seen to describe a series of arcs.

This experiment had always been performed in the open air, but in the course of his observations M. Labarre desired to see the effect produced when the alloyment took place in vacuo. The palladium coal was placed in the receiver of the air-pump and the air as nearly as possible exhausted. The hydrogen, in measured quantity, was then admitted in the air-pump receiver, and the expansion of the metal took place as in previous experiments, but the gas had undergone a change; the whole amount had notably been absorbed, and the residue was of a totally different character from the original gas. It would no longer burn, but, like nitrogen, extinguish flame, and had no color, taste or odor. Wishing to preserve a quantity of it for future experiment, M. Labarre drew about two litres into a bladder and was surprised at its extreme levity. The bladder, from an ox, was at once carried to the ceiling, though there was attached to it a perforated wooden plug, weighing with stopper, over twenty grammes. At the seance of the academy M. Labarre exhibited a hollow copper globe, half a meter in diameter and two millimetres in thickness, weighing in the aggregate about 500 grammes, which, on being filled by displacement with abaron at once arose to the dome of the institute building.

The importance of this discovery cannot be overestimated, especially at the present time when so much attention is being paid to the subject of ærial navigation. We have here a new element of nine times the elevating power of pure hydrogen, and about twenty-five times that of our ordinary illuminating gas. When prepared on a large scale the price will be but double that of pure hydrogen. The balloon, strange to say, may be made of thin sheet-iron, and thus the endosmosis, that cause of great loss in ærial navigation, is entirely done away with.

Of the effect of this discovery upon the science of chemistry it is useless to speak; all our preconceived theories are overthrown; the system of chemical equivalents universally acknowledged, is destroyed after having stood the test of ages of experiment. May not the oxygen be a compound of which ozone is one element? Or are there any elements? May it not be that all are from original atoms, and that the transmutation of metals is not a myth?

—On one occasion Beau Hickman, being on a train, without a ticket, took a seat in the cars, and after the train had been in motion some time, stepped into the next car and called out loudly: "Tickets!" when every one, thinking him the conductor, held out their tickets. Beau only took up one, however, selecting that of a poor, honest, old German farmer, and passing into the next car took a seat, sticking his ticket in the band of his hat.

—A Sunday-school teacher was explaining the omnipresence of the Deity to his scholars, and ended by telling them that He was everywhere. Whereupon a red-headed boy asked: "Is He in my pocket?" The teacher replied that the question was rather profane but he would answer: "Yes, he is everywhere." "I've got you there," said the boy; "I've got no pocket."

—An ignorant old lady was asked by a minister visiting her if she had religion. She replied: "I have slight touches of it occasionally."

—The Albany Journal facetiously talks as follows about high-priced cows:—"Our exchanges which just now are indulging in many exclamation points just because a cow near Utica was sold a few days ago for $40,600, seem to have forgotten the O'Leary cow of Chicago. It is estimated that that bovine kicker of the lighted kerosene cost not far from $300,000,000. The following carefully prepared table will enable the dullest head at figures to understand the senselessness of getting worked up over a forty thousand, six hundred dollar cow:—

O'Leary cow cost	$300,000,000
Cow near Utica cost	40,600
	$299,959,400

It appears from the figures that Illinois leads New York in the price paid for fancy stock, no less a sum than two hundred and ninety-nine million, nine hundred and fifty-nine thousand, four hundred dollars per head. Chicago papers please copy."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, imparting strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; Also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington, to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, Boston." All others are base imitions. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

An Infamous Ring.

[St. Paul Gazette.]

We publish in an adjoining column one of the most remarkable, and perhaps the most astonishing of contracts ever made between an agent of the Government and a private citizen. The high contracting parties were Edward P. Smith, then agent for the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota and now Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and A. H. Wilder of St. Paul.

The contract in brief gives Mr. Wilder the stumpage on the Leech Lake reservation within four miles of deriveable streams at $1 15 per thousand feet. It does more. The trees must be fourteen inches in diameter twenty-five feet from the ground or they are not included and Mr. Wilder secures them for nothing. It does more. It gives him twenty years to take this timber, during which time he can secure a second growth. It does more. If the Indians do any damage to the contractors who are stripping their land the amount is to be deducted from the payments.

All of this, let it be borne in mind, was done in secret, and without consulting or asking the consent of the Indians. The Indians are given their lands through treaty stipulations. They are often and continually robbed of their lands, but in this robbery the form of a treaty is gone through with, and by presents or concessions to the chiefs an apparent right to the lands is obtained by the whites. The timber on the land is as much a portion of the reality as the land itself, but Agent Smith (now Commissioner) assumes to dispose of this portion of the reality, not only without a treaty, but without even notifying his wards that a sale is to be or has been made. When it is further borne in mind that this sale was made at one-third of its value, the transaction becomes enormous in its iniquity.

Is it any wonder that these Indians became excited over such a contract as we print today, made without legal authority, in violation of their rights, and for the benefit of an unscrupulous ring? It is well known to all citizens of the Northwest that the pine sold by Agent Smith (now promoted to Commissioner) to Wilder for $1 15 per thousand is worth from $2 50 to $4 per thousand. This too, at present rates, whereas the contract runs for twenty years, and is loose in all its details so far as the interests of the Indians are concerned. No security is given for its fulfillment by Mr. Wilder, while the extraordinary condition is attached that if the Indians disturb the contractor—the damage shall be deducted from his payments.

This same agent, Smith, received offers and actually sold a year previous to making the Wilder contract, the privilege of cutting for one season only, pine upon the Red Lake reservation (farther north than the Leech Lake reservation) not half as valuable as that covered by this remarkable contract, at $2 50 per thousand. In that instance he made the party give security before driving the logs, and as their contract ran but one year, the roads cut and camps erected were all a loss to the contractors. Why the contract at $1 15 per thousand, published herewith, was made with Mr. Wilder without security, and for a period of twenty years, is a subject which justly calls for inquiry.

Mr. Wilder is not obliged to cut or pay for timber less than fourteen inches, twenty-five feet above the ground. He is not forbidden to cut the timber, but it is expressly stipulated that he is not to pay for it. Now as Minnesota lumbermen buy stumpage, twelve inches in diameter, twenty-four feet above the ground, and pay from $2 50 to $4 per thousand feet for it, it can be seen that Mr. Wilder will actually get the greater portion of his timber without even paying the pittance of $1 15 per thousand, or any other sum.

* * * * * * * * *

It is scarcely possible to properly work this mine of iniquity in a single newspaper article, but there is still another especial feature. The contractor is to have the privilege of cutting hay on the reservation at one dollar per ton. As a matter of fact, there is not a sufficient amount of hay there to supply the teams which the government is to furnish for the agricultural purposes for the Indians, if treaty stipulations are executed, but a contractor is nevertheless allowed to take all he desires at the nominal sum of one dollar per ton, while the Indians starve for lack of means to raise their food.

Last year no seed and no assistance was given these Indians in the way of agriculture, and last Spring only a few potatoes were furnished, with the understanding that the amount should be returned out of the fall crop. They were not even supplied with a sufficient number of hoes to plant the few potatoes given them. These Indians are now, with winter approaching, almost as naked as when they were born, and literally in a starving condition, while Indian Commissioners and Agents are living in abundance.

* * * * * * * * *

It is difficult to determine even the approximate value of this Wilder contract to the pine land ring. The contract admits that there is two hundred million feet of pine. It is fair to assume that this could be sold to-day at an advantage of two dollars per thousand over the Wilder contract. This of itself makes a profit to the ring of four hundred thousand dollars. When it is taken into consideration that the contract runs twenty years, enabling the contractor to secure a second growth, and that he obtains all less than fourteen inches twenty five feet from the ground for nothing, the profit becomes so enormous that four hundred thousand dollars forms but a small portion of the sum.

* * * * * * * * *

This timber, properly husbanded and disposed of, would not only give the Indians employment, without which civilization is impossible, but it would give each family a house and broken farm, with agricultural implements and stock. President Grant's policy is, perhaps, the correct one, if honestly enforced, but in the hands of dishonest and incapable men it opens the door to fraud wider than ever. Back pay, Credit Mobilier, Fort Snelling reservation, etc., are bad enough, but when such robbery as this is conducted in the name of religion, honest people may well stand aghast.

The Board of Indian Commissioners will herein find food for thought and investigation—an investigation they can not shirk. They have accepted one of the most sacred trusts ever held by man. Will they discharge the duties it imposes, or will they by their neglect induce the people to believe their wards are well cared for, when the truth shows that they are the victims of unscrupulous rings?

It is well known that the inoffensive Chippewas of the North are in a starving condition, and have been for three years. It is not unusual for some every winter to die of hunger and cold. Near the 49th degree, without any other shelter than a bark lodge affords, not a store house or a root house or even a dwelling, is it any wonder? But their timber is given away or taken at $1.15 per thousand.

Three Bucks Ahead.

[Lyndon (Vt.) Union.]

H. H. Wilson, lawyer at Troy Vermont, is one of the men of that class, who comprehends the full value of the "Almighty Dollar," and seldom lets one slip from his grasp. Now there is a law in this State which allows a man into whose field a buck escapes during certain days in a year, to add said buck to his own flock as his individual property. Among Wilson's neighbors is a boy named Aldrich. Now it happened that a year ago this boy owned a buck which on one occasion bunted through Wilson's fence and entered upon his freehold to inspect his flock. As this fact came to the knowledge of Wilson his familiarity with the statute enabled him to see money in the escape, and he forthwith added to his inventory a gain of "one buck." The boy appeared and appealed with the full force of sorrow's eloquence for his property. But Wilson, taking down his statute, explained the law and told the boy that if he wanted to grow up and be a rich man, he must be "trooly loil," submitting willingly to the laws and constitution of his country. The boy retired to wait for better days, which did not appear till last week, when four of Wilson's bucks escaped into the boy's field. They were cared for as a matter of course. As Wilson heard of the escape he went over to relieve the boy of further trouble. The boy was at home. Wilson presented his case, pointed to his mark on the back of the bucks, "cussed" the division fence, which he would have repaired at once at his own expense, and offered the boy a dime to help drive the bucks home. "Mr. Wilson," said the boy, "I have been reflecting upon the excellent advice you were so kind as to give me, last year, and have concluded to submit to the laws, obey the Constitution and try to get rich. I have adopted your game and beat you just three bucks!" After wheeling round three or four times in confusion Mr. Wilson's eyes rested upon the gate through which he passed, and the last the boy saw of him he was scratching his head and solemnly stepping towards home. Mr. Wilson's address is North Troy, Vt., where he can be applied to for further particulars.

A Woman Farmer.

[Concord People.]

In a neighboring town in Merrimack county there resides a thrifty widow who owns a nice little farm upon which there is a good set of buildings. Such of the work upon the farm is done with her own hands. She drives the horse, holds the plough, uses the hoe and often swings the scythe. She is forty-five, and fair, so at least thought a love-sick swain of Goffstown aged only eighty-three, who has been seeking her hand in marriage. Failing to win her in the usual way, he opened negotiations with money as the consideration. He made her the generous offer of five thousand dollars to become his wife. Her reply was it would take twice that sum to soften her feelings toward him. He then proposed to double it and pay her ten thousand, which proposition she accepted and the money in due time was paid over. The deferring of the nuptial ceremony for a short time, cooled off the ardor of the infatuated youth, and now he wants his money back. Notwithstanding the pressing demand upon the widow's time in harvesting her crops, she stands ready to fulfill her part of the contract and also to take a wedding tour if her liege lord desires it, but she has no idea of giving up the money. In the mean time while she is digging her potatoes and cutting up her corn, she is in the enjoyment of a nice little income from the ten thousand dollars so easily obtained. She makes farming pay.

Capt. Hall, of the Polaris, left a sealed package, with directions that it is not to be opened during the lifetime of Lady Franklin. It is supposed to contain some terrible revelations of suffering and dire exigency experienced by the members of the Franklin expedition.

In Boston, on Saturday, the throng of ladies doing their shopping was full as great as usual, and all had an abundance of funds, notwithstanding the precautionary measures of the banks. Boston merchants, according to a paper of that city, think business is jdst a trifle better than before the financial panic.

Rear-Admiral John A. Winslow died at Boston on Monday, aged 63 years.

The New York Stock Exchange reopened for business Tuesday. There was no great excitement and it is hoped better days are at hand.

The yellow fever rages at Shreveport with undiminished violence and the condition of the people daily becomes more pitiable.

On Saturday last a distillery in successful operation by a convict named John Short was discovered in the quarry-grounds of Sing Sing. The mash was a compound of bread, corn, tomatoes, apples, potatoes and carrots. The keeper has realized $600 by his enterprise, and said some of his most liberal patrons were keepers, who had also aided in constructing his distillery, which was composed of an iron kettle, with a worm made of a half-inch gas pipe, and old barrels for mash-tubs.

John O. Lovett, cashier of the Hingham National Bank, is a defaulter to the amount of $41,000. The discovery of the crime was made by Colonel Daniel Needham, national bank examiner, and the bank is closed. Depositors will lose nothing.

It is rumored that Wise has received a proposal from Bennett, of the Herald, to furnish him with all the money ($50,000 has been named as the sum) he wants for a silk balloon, and for whatever else he deems essential to the trip; that Wise has accepted, and named next May or June as the best time for starting. Furthermore, that the Professor has no faith in Donaldson's ability to prosper in his attempt—indeed, that he is confident that all his fellow-æronaut's efforts will be doomed to failure, if not positive disaster, and that he will cross the ocean long before his rival. The Herald undertaking, as the story goes, is to be kept as secret as possible until everything is ready. Then the the announcement is to be made, and Wise is to set sail on his over-thirty-years-meditated aerial journey.

The Biddeford Times says a rather singular accident happened last Saturday afternoon to a horse belonging to John Jameson, on the Old Orchard road, Saco. In a field near the road is a well. By some means the horse fell into the well, head foremost. Some ladies first discovered the unpleasant position of the animal and gave the alarm. The well was some ten or twelve feet deep and there was about four foot of water in it. Shears were immediately erected, ropes fastened to the hind legs of the horse and he was drawn out. He lay on the grass a few minutes and then got up and walked away. While in the well the animal's shoulders were in the water, but his head had been drawn to one side by means of ropes. He was in the well near half an hour.

Two school children were gored to death by wild steers at Jersey City, Monday.

A party of young men were serenading a newly married couple in Brownville, Me., on Saturday night, when the bridegroom fired at them with a shot-gun, the charge from which lodged in the abdomen of a young man named Kendall, whose wound will probably prove fatal.

If a postmaster knows that a letter addressed to his office is intended for a person living within the delivery of another office, it is his duty to forward such a letter, (if it has been properly prepaid) without waiting for a request to do so, and without additional charge for postage.

The handsomest railway damages for many a year have just been awarded a lady against the Boston and Albany road. A careless brakeman allowed a detached car to run into the rest of the train, throwing her from the seat and seriously injuring her. The jury returned a verdict of $19,500, which is likely to raise the standard of brakeman on that road.

—A youth emulous of the fame of Dickens recently attempted to explore some of the dens of poverty and wretchedness in London. He visited some of the riverside haunts of the Rogue Riderhood class and, having managed to scrape acquaintance with two of the natives, was persuaded to accompany them home, that they might show him what he wanted to see. They led him through a labyrinth of dingy courts into a house, and here, while one of them held the luckless youth on the ground, the other anointed his head with a mixture of coal oil and molasses, and afterward covered him with flour. The whole neighborhood collected to see the fun, and all joined in pelting their victim from their domain with every kind of filthy missile. The young man has concluded his investigation.

State News.

The Belknap Mills at Laconia, are bankrupt.

Patrick Blanchard of Durham shot a bird in the air, on Monday last, and lost an eye. The gun burst.

Clara E. Hale, of Unionville, has put $491.14 in her portmonnaie by picking blueberries this season.

James A. Edgerly, of Great Falls, is after the liquor dealers again, having made two fresh complaints.

The Great Falls Journal ran its temporary daily up to fifteen hundred copies on one day of the recent fair.

Albert Burtt, of Greenfield, had his thumb and one finger of the right hand cut off by being caught in a buzz saw on Tuesday.

Mrs. Thomas Stevens of Goffstown having tried to go down cellar in the dark, called in medical aid for a broken collar bone.

The sponge factory at Lebanon is to start again, on sponge and wood paper. The sponge is now being used very successfully for packing car boxes.

Eighteen pounds of eels stopped one of the water wheels in Noone's grist mill at Peterborough on Tuesday. There were five of them, the largest of which weighed six pounds.

The parties who were arrested in Nashua, lately, for unlawfully making sewing-machines, have got mad, and now tell some trade secrets, affirming for one thing that the best $65 machine costs the maker $13.

Newport has paid Miss C. A. Kelley $950 for permanent injuries received by her falling on a sidewalk.

The dwelling-house and barn of W. H. Shannon, at Lancaster, occupied by Wm. Donovan, was partly destroyed by fire on Friday. Loss, $1000; insurance, $800.

Joseph Ayers of Canterbury entertained a strange man last week, and the next day he found a harness missing, one of his neighbors a horse, and another a buggy.

The house and barn of Edward Stevens, of Newport, were burned on the 25th. Loss, $2000; fully insured.

On the morning of the 24th there was ice an inch and a half thick on Mt. Washington's summit.

Ex-Gov. Fred Smythe spoke eloquently before the veterans of the Soldiers' Home at Dayton, Ohio, last week.

The body of Herbert C. Daws of Laconia was found on the top of one of the passenger cars at Concord on Saturday evening last. He had apparently attempted to get a free ride from some point to Concord on the top of the car, and in passing under the bridge at the south end of Main street, was struck and killed. His hat was found under the bridge. Passengers heard the fall, and thought stones had been thrown upon the car. He was about twenty-five years old, and leaves a wife in Manchester.

On the 27th, at Milford, two barns owned by the Hillsborough Mills were burned, with their contents, including a lot of machinery taken from the carpet mills recently to give place to other kinds. Loss upon the buildings less than $1000; on contents, probably greater, but not ascertained; probably insured. Cause thought to be incendiary, as no one had been in the building for a fortnight. The property was mostly owned by Nashua capitalists.

How Eight Wives had a Dinner.

The Boston Post tell the following story about a dinner at a famous Boston restaurant:

"Such a fame as Taft's makes dinner parties as innumerable as they are inviting, and it would be unaccountable on the doctrine of chance alone, if there did not now and then befall a funny incident to give piquancy as well as substantial delights to the Point Shirley entertainments. Taft tells one that has just occurred at his cosey quarters, but a sly wink given after the whispering was over enjoined the preservation of the strictest incognito of all the parties concerned. It happened on the brightest and most deliciously cool day of the week, when the atmosphere, and the skies themselves, seemed attuned to the event which was celebrated. Eight married gentlemen of eminently epicurean tastes came together and set their minds upon having a dinner. There were four Englishmen and four Americans, all of whom had tested the skill of cooks the world over. They wished to have everything complete, and going to Taft they gave him carte blanche for serving them up such a feast as they wanted. Preparations began forthwith, and all the resources and appliances of Taft's cuisine were brought into requisition.

But meanwhile the wives of the eight gentlemen got wind of the affair. They learned to their just indignation that their husbands were preparing for a grand feast for their sole edification, and that eight plates only were to be laid at their table. Without waiting for an explanation they despatched a messenger to Taft's and duplicated their husbands' order, to be served in a separate dining room. The bills of fare were to be identical, with the exception of cigars, and the strictest silence was enjoined. Not even a hint or a whisper was to pass between the husbands and the landlord. The hour appointed for the two dinners came, and the husbands sat down to their dinner and the wives to theirs. The tables bore the results of Taft's unrivalled taste and skill, and nothing was omitted to make it complete in every detail. Fish, birds, and all yielded their delicious mouthfuls, while the shining plate and excellent service was tickling to every sense.

Not a word passed between the two spic-and-span dining rooms. All unsuspecting the husbands drank a bumper to their wives at home, while the wives sipped the health of their husbands, who never dreamed of their presence under the same hospitable roof. Dinner over the wives ordered their bill added to that of their unsuspecting husbands, and so the ruse was discovered. There is a pretty moral to all this, Taft thinks, and perhaps one hasn't far to search for it, either."

Deadly Struggle on a Tight-Rope.

Little did the tens of thousands of men, women, and children who thronged the public square of Agram, Croatia, on the 15th of August, anticipate that they were about to witness a spectacle such as has perhaps never been seen before—a mortal struggle in mid-air. The occasion of the gathering was a performance on the tight-rope. The acrobats, Andreas Kolter and Francis Pergowitch, were to appear on the rope, which had been stretched from a window in the fifth story of the Court-House to a window in the opposite house, a distance of two hundred and fifty feet. The acrobats were to meet midway, and then to pass each other. When the clock struck twelve the acrobats emerged from their respective windows, dressed in tights and without balance poles. Kolter walked rather cautiously, while Pergowitch came to meet him from the opposite direction with a nervous, quick step. At last they met, and the suspense of the crowd underneath changed the next moment to a feeling of indescribable horror. Pergowitch suddenly uttered an angry exclamation, and dealt Kolter a terrible blow on the head. Kolter staggered and fell, but in so doing succeeded in clutching the rope with one hand, while with the other he grasped the left leg of his assailant. Pergowitch now fell likewise, but passed his right arm around the rope, so that he hung upon it in comparative security. And now began a life and death struggle. Kolter, with his right hand, tried to drag Pergowitch from the rope, while Pergowitch kicked Kolter with his right foot, and with his left hand endeavored to loosen his antagonist's hold. No one was able to interfere, and the result, it was easy to foresee, must be the death of one or both of the acrobats. Many women fainted, while strong men wept like children. What added to the general despair was the appearance of Kolter's young wife at the open window, from which her husband a few moments before had set out upon his fatal walk. Her piteous screams were heard above the din below, and her appeals to Pergowitch to spare her husband's life would have moved the heart of an Apache. The struggle in mid-air lasted perhaps a minute, when Kolter suddenly uttered a last cry and lost his hold. He fell to the ground, striking it violently and expiring instantly. While the people gathered round the corpse of poor Kolter, the murderer on the tight-rope managed to get on his feet again. With a diabolical expression on his face he uttered a yell of triumph.

The Prefect of the Police ordered Pergowitch to surrender. In case he should not do so within five minutes he would be shot down like a dog. Finally he raised himself to his feet and ran quickly to the court-house window, where he surrendered, begging that he might be protected from violence. There was great danger of his being executed by the people, who loudly clamored that the murderer be given up to them; but the military by a bayonet charge cleared the public square. Pergowitch, being asked what caused him to perpetrate this crime, said that there had been a grudge between him and Kolter ever since the latter had married young Rosita Serganoff, a Polish girl of rare beauty. Kolter, in a fit of jealousy, had told him he knew one or the other of them must die on this account. Andreas Kolter was the youngest member of the distinguished family of acrobats of that name.

Spiritualism Indeed.

[Cor. springfield Republican.]

At Rutland, we took a carriage and rode six miles to Chittenden, to see the wonderful manifestations of the Eddy boys. Cicerone is a spiritualist. I am too wicked to become one, and think I must be a materialist. I've always believed Spiritualism to be a malady of temperament, or superstition, or ignorance, or the result of a diseased state of health and morbid mentality. I went there to please friends, but with a sneer in my heart; but when I saw spirit friends appear in bodily form, and could touch them and talk with them again and again, and in the light, then I pinched myself and asked if I was intoxicated or insane. But I'm sure, that however strong-minded I may be, or however prone to the belief and practice of equal rights, I was never yet so strong-minded as to get drunk. I saw distinctly, people whom I knew to be dead. They walk into the room, clothed in ordinary dress, sometimes several together, and sit or stand by the table, conversing and acting like any living person present. If the physical manifestations I witnessed can be termed "juggling," then it is of first-class character and deserves a chapter of special mention.

Mr. White the late editor of the Banner of Light, whom I recognized, as did several others, came twice and talked freely, referring to his paper and suggesting methods to aid the advance of Spiritualism. The Eddy family inherit their mediumistic powers from the mother's side. The father, who died twelve years ago, was a rigid old Methodist, disproving all manifestations and often whipping his children "to get the devil out of them," which seemed only to strengthen the "powers that be." The mother died eight months ago, and from her the family derive their power. She often appears and counsels them. The family consists of eight, but only three brothers and two sisters remain now at home, and they appear to live wholly under the guidance of the spirits. Their great-grandmother was one of the witches sentenced to be hung in Salem for witchcraft. We remained here two days in a state of bewildered amazement, and then moved on to Saratoga to absorb different influences than spiritual.

Swinburne has finished his new poem, and it is full of kisses, hot as those of the monkey who married the babboon's sister.

—The Washington correspondent of the Congregationalist says that "in the new Congress, of the three hundred members, not fifty can earn $7500 a year outside of Congress, and they are now to receive it for six months' work in the first year of their term, three months' in the second." This statement being true, the anxiety of needy politicians to serve the country where they can vote their own supplies, by their own ways and means, is no conundrum.

—It is the Bowling Green Democrat which tells this: "During an address by Mr. —— in Allen County a few days ago, a gentleman in the audience rose partly to his feet, and with pathetic tenderness remarked "Ouch!" He had been sitting on a wasp and the wasp had just noticed it."

—The Texas newspapers are making merry at the expense of a young city man who bought a fine orchard of two hundred apple trees in Steuben County, and tapped every one of them in order to secure a supply of cider.

WHAT IS VEGETINE?—It is a compound extracted from barks, roots and herbs. It is Nature's Remedy.

The Tonic of the Period.

This is a trying season to persons deficient in stamina and out of health. To rally their physical energies by the most approved artificial means is a duty they owe to themselves. Foremost among the tonics and alteratives of the age stands HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. It is a vegetable stimulant and corrective, against which no tenable objection can be urged. There is no risk in recommending it as the best preparation in existence for renovating an enfeebled and broken down system. The most valuable medicinal products that nature has ever yielded to botanical research are blended in this famous elixir, and its stimulating basis is recognized in our public hospitals as the purest of all the varieties of distilled liquors. For general debility, nervous weakness, dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism, billiousness and intermittent fevers it is a positive specific.

TEMPERANCE MEDICINES.

If you would patronize true Temperance Medicines, scientifically prepared by a skilled physician, and by a process the discovery of his own, wherein not a drop of rum, whiskey, beer or any other alcoholic or fermented liquor enters—use Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines. They do not manufacture drunkards, as do the various "Cordials," "Tonics," "Elixirs" and "Bitters" of the day. Golden Medical Discovery is nutritious, tonic, alterative, or blood cleansing, and an unequalled cough remedy. Pleasant Purgative Pellets, scarcely larger than mustard seeds, constitute an agreeable and reliable physic: Favorite Prescription—a remedy for debilitated females; while his Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is known the world over as the greatest specific for Catarrh and "Cold in the Head" ever given to the public. 698 aug6-2aotf E. A. JOY, General Agent.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions disease of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Local Matters.

The Proposed Road to Rye.

Messrs. Editors; When we consider that next year the bonds of the city of Portsmouth to the amount of $53,000 fall due, and the complaint made because of a slight increase of taxes this year when $10,000 was appropriated for the reception on the 4th of July; one is led to enquire, will it pay to build the new road from Lafayette Road to Rand's corner in Rye? We now have two roads leading to this point; it seems that a third will accommodate no local travel, but will take the travel beyond Rye centre over the hill near the Meeting house, where there are more small stores to a square foot in the road than at any other place in the State. The public having already two roads to this point, need a road from Lang's corner on Sagamore road, direct to Straw's Point, which would be little over one mile in length. The taxable property in Rye to be accommodated by the new road is by the sea coast and not toward the centre of the town. Let a road be built from Lang's corner towards Straw's Point, and the beaches and boarding houses are reached by a direct air line; and thence to Little Boar's Head the drive would be direct and give a good sea view. A glance at the map will show that starting by the Lafayette Road to visit Rye, even by diverging at Squirrel Hill, is not the shortest and easiest route, and if we are to expend five or six thousand dollars on some new road, let it be one that will commend itself to any disinterested person who will take the trouble to examine the locality in question. SQUIBO.

Temperance Proposition No. 1.

Any person who through carelessness or indifference neglects that care of the body by which it can be made to fulfil the design in its creation; any person who upholds the perversions of grain by the flour mill, the brewery and the distillery, the perversion of milk by the butter and cheese factories, the mixing of grease and farinaceous substances for food, or who follows any habit or indulgence not in harmony with the Divine Law, thereby fails and falls short of the at present realizable assurance of being a son or daughter of the Lord Almighty! What then? It not in a condition of sonship then in warfare:

Mr. Forceps' Experiments with a Spider.

[Danbury News.]

We recently published an item to the effect that amusement for the home circle could be obtained by setting up a stick in a basin of water, and placing a spider on top of the stick. The amusement consists in watching the spider throw a strand of web to the edge of the basin, and by it crawl to shore. It is a pretty experiment, we have been told. Mr. Forceps tried it Sunday afternoon. He made the arrangements complete. Then he caught a spider, a big fellow, and put it on top of the stick. He did it for the amusement of the whole family, but they having neglected to answer his calls, the thing was fixed without their presence, and he was in quite a flurry of excitement getting them together. His wife was up stairs, trying to think where she had put the pillow-cases for the front bed-room, and was not exactly in the humor of spider-watching, but he tried a little vigorous language and she came down. Then he hunted up his daughter Julia, who was at the gate with a young gentleman. He brought them in, looking anxiously at the spider who had not yet moved, thank heaven, and commenting in a surprised manner at the lack of appreciation on the part of his family. Then he plunged into a back room where his son Adolphus was making a sloop, and called him. But Adolphus didn't care to see a spider, and the impatient and sorely-tried parent was obliged to take him by the collar and jerk him out into the dining-room and cuff him on the the head two or three times before the young man felt a yearning to look into the intricacies of the experiment. Having got them all together, Mr. Forceps got down on his knees, feeling the full weight of his responsibility in the matter, and gazed at the spider with painful intensity. A half hour passed, still the spider did not move. Mrs. Forceps was suddenly struck with an idea. "There!" she exclaimed. Forceps looked up eagerly. "I'll bet those pillow-cases are in the chest in the back bed-room," she added. Mr. Forceps grated his teeth and turned again to the spider. "I'll bet he's asleep," volunteered Adolphus. Mr. Forceps intimated that he would split any one open who took the wager, and silence was again restored. Still the spider did not stir. It is likely it had not seen the item in the papers, and didn't know what was expected of it. Mr. Forceps grew more nervous and impatient every moment. The longer the spider delayed moving the harder Mr. Forceps stared at it. He was thus engaged when Mrs. Forceps emitted a sharp cry, and he looked up just in time to save himself. Adolphus, with the knife he had used on the sloop in his hand, had become so oppressed by the magnitude of the experiment, that he had actually fallen asleep, and losing his balance he struck against his mother and bounced thence over into the midst of the group, the knife describing a circle in its descent, and in a direct line with the back of Mr. Forceps' skull. He looked up just in time to save himself, but not the experiment. The unhappy youth went down in the basin with a crash, knocking the contents over the family and driving the point of the stick into his father's knee. The shock awoke him, and with that instinct peculiar to boys he apprehended a disturbance, and promptly darted out of the house. The old gentleman went directly to his room, took off his clothes, and went to bed, leaving Mrs. Forceps to clean up the muss and explain to those who cared to know that the house would look like a hogpen in spite of all her efforts.

PORTSMOUTH SAVINGS BANK.

DEPOSITS, $2,081,363.47.

William Simes, President. J. F. Shores, Treas.

THE Treasurer hereby gives notice to the Depositors:—

1st, That in conformity with the law of the State passed June, 1872, this Bank will declare an EXTRA DIVIDEND on the 1st of July 1873, and every TWO years thereafter, on all sums that shall have been in the bank six months or longer.

2d, That these Extra dividends will be based on the interest which may have accrued on the DEPOSITS of each depositor during the two preceding years: thus giving to each the FULL SHARE of all the net earnings of the bank.

3d, That the method heretofore followed of extra dividends every five years will of course be discontinued.

Shoeing A Camel.

[Rural New Yorker.]

A traveler from Pekin to Siberia, across the great desert of Gobi, tells us that when ever a camel's feet have become very tender and sore from long marches, the poor creature lies down. His driver knows at once that his feet hurt him, and looks to find out if the thick skin of the feet is blistered. Whenever a blister is found, two or three strong men, usually Mongols, keep watch of the camel until it is not noticing them. At just the right moment they make a rush all together upon the camel, throw it over upon the side, and make it fast. Then, with a needle made for that use, they sew a square piece of leather large enough to cover the hurt place over the camel's foot, the skin of which is quite thick enough to sew through, without hurting the animal. With his new shoes on, the camel is quite ready to get up and march on. The pieces of leather are very carefully prepared for this use. It sometimes happens that a camel lies down in the midst of his long march over the wide desert and dies. The natives take the thickest part of the skin to make shoes of. These bits of skin they take out day after day, when on the march, and pull, until they become so soft and yielding that a camel with blistered feet seems grateful to have shoes made of it, although he would resist the shoeing until the last, were he not held so that he could not move.

—It has been demonstrated that a beetle is capable of lifting 315 times his weight. A man of ordinary muscular power is fully 100 times feebler, and had an elephant such comparative strength it could run away with a load of 5,000,000 pounds. The flea, too, scarcely three-hundredths of an inch in height, manages to leap without difficulty over a barrier 500 times its own altitude. For a man, six feet is an unusually high leap. Imagine him jumping 3000 feet or nearly three-fifths of a mile.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an albumen, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

SOLICITOR OF PATENTS.

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, Boston." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE. SIX BOTTLES, $5.

PREPARED BY

SETH W. FOWLE & SONS,

IMPORTANT TO EVERY BUSINESS MAN.

THE conflagrations in Portland, Chicago and Boston have demonstrated beyond a doubt the advantage of LINEN over leather in the manufacture of Bankers' Cases, Bill Books, &c., for valuable papers placed in safes as LINEN BILL BOOKS, (being non-conductors of heat,) will afford a protection to Bonds, Notes, &c. when exposed to a heat which burns Blank Books.

A PICTURE FROM LIFE.

BY MARTHA REMICK.

Lonely and poor, and old,
I saw her fade away,
The glory of our life immortal,
'Round her lay;
It touched her sunken lip and brow,—
Where is her happy spirit now?

Lonely and poor, and old,
A humble lot she knew;
Lovers nor friends she had,
And comforts but a few—
A life prolonged, we cannot tell
Why such as she on earth should dwell.

Lonely and poor, and old,
She lived far in the past;
The halo of its spells
A light around her cast
And in the future of to-day
Her choicest hopes were laid away.

Silvered with age and grief,
Furrowed with thought and care,
It is a wondrous change
Which makes her young and fair,
Which gives her back her young life's dream
In lands where things are what they seem.

College Hazing.

[New Bedford Mercury.]

The first Monday of the college year at Harvard, goes among the collegians by the name of "Bloody Monday," as it is the day on which the severest hazing of the freshmen is prosecuted by the sophomores. This cruel and unmanly abuse of the unsophisticated boys who have just become members of the college is often carried to extremes which are a disgrace to the college and to human nature, and there is no line of argument in its favor which can palliate, much less vindicate it. We call to mind one instance of hazing on "Bloody Monday" which is as admirable and sweetly touching as such instances are generally revolting and disgraceful. It occurred, if we remember correctly, in 1862. It was noticed by some sophomores that two country boys had begun their housekeeping in a room on the ground floor of one of the college halls, with a miserable apology for a bed, no carpet, no table, and only two chairs, as the sum total of their outfit. It was learned also that they proposed to board themselves, and had only a few dollars for their food during the term. "On this hint they acted." On "Bloody Monday" night the poor trembling youths were summoned by a "soph," who was not over courteous, to go to a room upstairs. Upstairs they went, pale and trembling, expecting to be dealt with without mercy. They were detained there an hour or so, not being molested, but only quizzed by the circle of "sophs" in the room. Then they were dismissed to their own room. When they entered it, it was over a nice new carpet. There was a tasteful bedstead and appurtenances, a study table, chairs, a lamp, a book-case, a stove, and so forth, and in their closet they found provisions for several days. This was hazing to a blessed purpose. We fear that the example stands almost or quite alone.

The Meanest Man.

It turns out after all, that the meanest man is not the man we referred to the other day, who split up his wife's tombstone. Burrows is even meaner than he. Burrows was an inveterate tobacco chewer, but as his wife detested the practice, and made home tempestuous and stormy for him when he indulged in the habit there, he always chewed when away during the day, and declared to his wife that he had stopped permanently. But one evening, upon entering the front door and drawing out his handkerchief, he accidentally pulled out his paper of tobacco, and without noticing it, left it lying on the floor. When Burrows sat down to his tea, his wife walked in with the tobacco in her hand, and looking Burrows firmly in the eye, said: "Do you know who that belongs to?" With great presence of mind, Burrows turned scowling to his oldest boy and said, with a severe voice: "Immortal Man! Is it possible that you have begun to chew tobacco, you young reprobate? Wher'd you get that nasty stuff? What d'you mean by such conduct, you young villain? Haven't I told you often enough to let tobacco alone? Commers to me, or I'll tear the jacket off of you." And as he spoke the stern father made a grasp at the boy and dragged him out into the entry, where he chastized him with a cane. Then Burrows threw the tobacco over the fence, where he went and got it in the morning, and enjoyed it during the day. "Merciful Moses!" he exclaimed when he told us about it, "what would I have done if my children had all been girls? It makes an old father's heart glad when he feels that he has a boy that he can depend on in such emergencies."

—Some occurrences in real life resemble the climax of a bad dream. The bystanders who witnessed the following narrow escape related by a French paper, must have felt extremely anxious to awake: A child of five and a half years of age was playing at one of the windows of a house in the Rue de la Trappe, when it leaned too far out and fell. The mother darted to the window in agony, and saw her child hanging by its pinafore to an iron hook fastened to the half opened shutter of a window on a lower story. In spite of the entreaties of a neighbor, the unhappy mother stood gasping for breath, her hands clutching the window-sill, and her whole appearance a model for a statue of despair. Suddenly a voice cried: "Make haste, his pinafore is tearing." The mother fainted, but the door had now been broken in, and the porter drew the shutter gently inwards; and thus, at length, succeeded in placing the child safe and sound on the floor of the room.

THUSDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1873.

Readables.

The reduction of the public debt in September, amounts to one million nine hundred and one thousand dollars. There are three millions of currency in the treasury. The legal tender reserve has not yet been drawn upon.

The third trial of Stokes will commence next Monday.

Nellie Thurston made a successful balloon ascension from Fulton, N. Y., on Thursday, and landed safely some seventeen miles from the place of starting.

The Biddeford Times says a horse race came off in Saco, Friday, in which the agreement was that the winner should have both horses.

A rich old lady in New Haven keeps her hens in the parlor and feeds them with jelly cake and English walnuts.

A physician of Naples has transfused blood from the carotid artery of a lamb into the veins of a lady exhausted by hemorrhage, by means of a gum elastic tube.

The Pennsylvania State Treasury is reported to be a loser by the failure of the Union Banking Company of Philadelphia to the extent of nearly half a million dollars.

One of the officers at Bridgeport, Conn., offered Rambeau, the forger, some powdered chalk as arsenic, and advised him to poison himself. He eagerly swallowed it, schooled himself to resignation and fortitude, repented of his sins, and forgave all his enemies, only to find himself "sold." His subsequent language to that officer, says a local paper, indicates a slight falling from grace.

The case of Jacob Rosenzweig, who was sentenced to seven years in the N. Y. State prison for the killing of Alice Bowlsby, and who was subsequently ordered a new trial, was argued in the general sessions on Saturday by William F. Howe, who stated that the prisoner could not be again tried, the act under which he had originally been indicted having been since repealed. Judge Sutherland reserved his decision. It is probable that it will be in favor of the prisoner. The case was known at the time of its commission as "the trunk tragedy," the remains of Miss Bowlsby being found at a depot in a trunk. It made a profound sensation all over the country and Rosenzweig was convicted of causing her death by malpractice. He always boasted that he should not stay in prison long, saying that he had many friends and plenty of money.

State News.

To-day is the great day at the State Fair. Premiums will be awarded at the baby show and Prof. King will make his 172d ascension in a balloon. There will be trotting also.

Henry Ward Beecher was requested to lecture for the benefit of the Canterbury Educational Association, and was informed that if he would come he might calculate that Canterbury would nominate him as General Grant's successor at the White House. He wrote in reply: "I shall not be able to comply with your kind request, even in view of your tempting offer. If I live until I am nominated for president, I shall be so old that Methuselah will be regarded as a young chap."

The wool depot of J. W. Gerrish, the storehouse of the Sturtevant Manufacturing Co., and the residence of Lyman Whipple, at Lebanon, were burned on the 1st. Loss $18,000.

Pattee, the New Hampton wife murderer, has retracted his plea of not guilty and pleads guilty of murder in the second degree, and has been sentenced to the State prison for twenty years.

Rear Admiral John A. Winslow,

Who died at his residence on Kearsarge avenue, Boston Highlands, on Sunday afternoon, was born in Wilmington, N. C., Nov. 19, 1810. In 1825, his father, who was of northern birth, and a descendant of Governor Edward Winslow, brought his son north and placed him under the tuition of Rev. Dr. Sewall of Dedham, with a view of his entering college. His son's early liking for the sea caused Mr. Winslow to consent to his abandoning his course of study and in the month of February, 1827, he entered the navy from North Carolina through the influence of Daniel Webster. It was not until 1839 that he became a lieutenant. In that capacity, attached to the ill-fated Cumberland, he distinguished himself in an attack on Tabasco, and in several other engagements during the Mexican war. The war of the rebellion found Admiral Winslow among those officers of southern birth who were ready and willing to fight for the Union. He distinguished himself in the West, and commanded the Kearsarge when the latter vessel sunk the Alabama off the coast of France, June 9, 1864. He was made a commodore and in 1870 he was made rear admiral. Shortly afterwards he assumed command of the Pacific fleet. While off the island of Rimitara he was seized with a slight shock of paralysis one day after taking a bath. From that time he failed rapidly, resigning his command on account of his ill-health, and taking his placed on the retired list in July, 1872. During the winter of that year he was in California, his health improving gradually. Returning to Washington in May 1873, he became again very ill. May 29, he went to Boston, having a third severe illness, and sank away gradually until the hour of his death. Admiral Winslow leaves a widow, two sons and a daughter.

—It wasn't one of Job's comforts to have a severe cold, and be told by condoling friends when and where he caught it, as if he didn't know just how it was, and just how it felt himself. Job escaped that consolatory experience.

Sherman on Lincoln.

In his response to a toast at the dinner of the Army of the Cumberland, in Pittsburg, Pa., last week, General Sherman said:

There are a thousand episodes I might relate to-night, but I will confine myself to one or two; and one is a little thing which happened in the early part of the war, when I was a member of the Army of the Potomac, or you know I fought and was whipped at Bull Run. We had fallen back to the Potomac, and my line was between Georgetown and old Fort Corcoran. One day I was out inspecting a block-house on my line, when I saw a carriage approaching, drawn by two old hack horses, and I guessed atonce that Lincoln was coming. So I cut across and stood by the roadside as he came up. In answer to my salute he said: "Colonel Sherman?" "I am that person," I said. "I am out seeing some of the boys," added the President, "is this your brigade?" I replied that it was, and he said he would be pleased to visit them, if I would show the way. I escorted him and Mr. Seward, who sat by his side, to the nearest camp, sending a soldier in advance to warn the command of the approach of the President and cause the assembly to be beaten. Passing along up the hill (General Mc Dowell will remember the road by which we had to ascend) we talked of Bull Run and other matters of military interest, and Mr. Lincoln asked if he might make a speech to the boys. I said I should consider it a favor if he would, and I insisted he would discourage the yelling which was becoming so unpleasantly common among the soldiers. I had the first regiment drawn up in a line, and halting his carriage, Lincoln arose and spoke. Gentlemen, I have heard Clay in his palmiest days; I have heard Crittenden with his keenest satire; I have heard the best orators, and have marked them well; but I never heard a man who spoke to the hearts of men as Lincoln spoke to those of the men who stood before him. I remember almost every word he said. He addressed them as children, and said that those were sad days, but better were coming; that the rain had fallen, but the sky would soon be clear; they should not be discouraged, but think of the to-morrow which awaited them, having faith in the nation and in final success, which would come as surely as there was a God in Heaven. That speech reached all hearts, and was worth its weight in diamonds.

The Fall Elections.

Elections, general or partial, are to take place in ten States this fall. On the 14th of October, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Minnesota, Iowa and Wisconsin will hold general elections. Pennsylvania elects a Judge of the Supreme Court and minor State officers, while in the other States the full list of officers are to be chosen. On November 4th, Massachusetts will hold a general election, and on the same day New York will elect State officers and members of the Legislature. Texas votes on the 3d of the same month. Governors are to be chosen in Massachusetts, Virginia, Texas and Mississippi. In several of the Western States—Ohio, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Minnesota—the contest between the two great parties is diversified by the existence of a third and outside element known in Ohio as the People's Party, and which has nominated a State ticket; in Iowa as the Independent Grangers'. The Wisconsin grangers have generally united in support of the Republican party, while in Minnesota the reverse is the case. No third party intervenes in Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Virginia, or Texas, where the contest lies between the Democratic and Republican hosts. In Mississippi the Republicans and Liberal Republicans have both, so far, nominated State tickets. In those Western States where the new element, the grangers, is found most largely, the results of the coming elections will be awaited with interest. As the rise of the Patrons of Husbandry has been a thing of but a few months' time, and the members of the order comprise a very large and influential part of the population of Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Illinois, Indiana, and Kansas, their present influence as exerted upon local politics must have important results in the future. In Iowa, especially, where the grangers are believed to include half the voters of the State, will the attention of the country centre as upon the most favorite field in which the new organization can exhibit its power. Preferring at present to test their strength against that of both parties they have nominated a State ticket of their own, and are prosecuting a vigorous campaign on the basis of anti-monopoly and farmers' rights.

Origin of Fevers.

Dr. Littlejohn, Medical Officer of Edinburgh, in a recent report, gives it as his opinion that typhus fever is the result of over-crowding, and typhoid fever the effect of sewer gases. The former, therefore, is common in the dwellings of the poor, while the latter is found in houses of better description, where there are pipes communicating with an external drain. In the case of the very poor whose houses are deficient in drainage arrangements, typhoid fever is rarely seen. Practically, Dr. Littlejohn has failed to detect any bad effects resulting from the use by cows of grass grown on sewage meadows. All the cows fed on sewage-grown grass find their way to the slaughter-houses, where they are examined by Dr. Littlejohn and a staff of inspectors, who find that those appearance which are met with in diseased meat are not more frequent in these animals than in others. Sewage grass is, so far as his observations have gone, unobjectionable as food for cattle. In one of his letters to the London Times, Mr. Alfred Smee mentions the curious instance of a cat that would not drink the milk of cows fed on sewage grass, or that otherwise adulterated, while it lapped up eagerly a fresh can from the country.

—Where is "paris unknown?" asked a correspondent of the Danbury News, to which Bailey answers very truthfully: "Where they don't advertise."

Mount of the Holy Cross.

Professor Hayden, writing from the headquarters of his expedition, says, under date of August 25, 1873: "We have just accomplished the most difficult feat of the season—the ascent of the Holy Cross, the long vertical fissure of which is full of snow. The peak is 13,500 feet above the valley, and is so hedged in by other mountains covered with a network of fallen timber that it took us four days to get to it. We had to cut our way through the timber. The view from the summit is very fine. We now make four more geodetic stations—one in the Blue River Range, another on the north side of the Middle Park, Long's and Pike's peaks, and will that close up my work for the season. We have done nothing but climb peaks. Jackson performed a great feat. In company with Koulter and another man, he carried all his photographic outfit, over one hundred pounds weight, up to a ridge thirteen thousand feet high, across several miles of fallen timber, and was absent thirty-six hours without food or shelter. He carried about forty pounds on his back for ten hours, and eventually took some of the finest pictures he has secured this season. He has made splendid panoramic views of all the important mountain ranges. He has eighteen 11x14 views of the front range from Long's to Pike's peaks. He has connected a belt of from one hundred and fifty miles in width. Most of his panoramic views are taken from an elevation of fourteen thousand feet and upward. As exhibitions of mountain forms they cannot be surpassed in the known world. This mountain climbing has been hard on both men and animals. It has been the hardest though most successful season of all.

New Propeller Device.

And now we hear of another device for propelling canal boats, thought it is not an altogether new one. The invention embraces the old idea of drawing the water through openings in the sides of the boat, below the water line, and about 10 feet from the stem, and forcing it through channels out at the stern. It also includes the new device of deriving power at the inlet on the sides by the arrangement of stationary paddles in the opening. The apparatus and its operation are thus described: The paddles consist of sheet iron squares or strips, placed in the opening at a proper angle to give a forward impetus to the boat by means of the strong current which is expected to be produced. The motive power consists in four turbine water-wheels, two feet in diameter, placed two in each water channel, and so arranged as to be worked by one shaft. The two wheels are placed face to face opposite the openings in the side of the boat. The water passes from the outsides of the wheels to the centre and out at the stern. The wheels are driven by a twelve horse power piston engine, located in the bottom of the boat. The inlet openings are a little contracted as compared with the water-way through the box, so that the motion of the water-wheels creates something of a vacuum, and therefore increased force to the current as it strikes the stationary buckets arranged as stated in the openings. A speed of two and a half miles an hour has been already attained with the expectation of much increasing it by improvements.

—At a country fair, recently, writes a correspondent, my curiosity was excited by the following mysterious inscription over the door of a booth: "Walk in and see the Dancing Tree!" Curious to witness such a phenomenon, I paid my money, went in, and presently found that I constituted the entire audience. Soon after my entrance, a puny, sickly-looking being, dressed as a wild Indian, appeared, and, placing himself in an attitude, asked me in a melancholy voice to look at him. "Well," said I, "but—the dancing tree!" "That's the name given me by the chief of my tribe," replied the savage. "The Dancing Tree is a great chief." And he sat down apparently well satisfied with himself.

—An exchange says: "We suppose were the question, Do you want to be an angel? submitted to all the Sunday-school scholars in the land, ninety-nine out of a hundred would raise their hand in answer, 'Yes.' Now, that is all very well, but we think the three-year-old who gave us reply to that query was perhaps, more honest than the average of Sunday-school scholars. In discussions on the beauties of good little boys and girls, and the propriety of never indulging in a crying spell, we put the question: "Don't you want to be an angel?" The very prompt reply was, "I want to be an engine boy."

—A man belonging in South Carolina couldn't die happy until his son had shot a neighbor against whom there was an old grudge. "Did you hit him plumb centre?" asked the dying man, when receiving an affirmative reply he fell back and death's cold smile covered his face.

—A young man at Evansville coughed up a twenty-five cent currency note, and he has gone right back to the boarding house whose hash he complained of.

Business Notices.

WHAT IS VEGETINE?—It is a compound extracted from barks, roots and herbs. It is Nature's Remedy.

The Tonic of the Period.

This is a trying season to persons deficient in stamina and out of health. To rally their physical energies by the most approved artificial means is a duty they owe to themselves. Foremost among the tonics and alteratives of the age stands HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. It is a vegetable stimulant and corrective, against which no tenable objection can be urged. There is no risk in recommending it as the best preparation in existence for renovating an enfeebled and broken down system. The most valuable medicinal products that nature has ever yielded to botanical research are blended in this famous elixir, and its stimulating basis is recognized in our public hospitals as the purest of all the varieties of distilled liquors. For general debility, nervous weakness, dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism, billiousness and intermittent fevers it is a positive specific.

TEMPERANCE MEDICINES.

If you would patronize true Temperance Medicines, scientifically prepared by a skilled physician, and by a process the discovery of his own, wherein not a drop of rum, whiskey, beer or any other alcoholic or fermented liquor enters—use Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines. They do not manufacture drunkards, as do the various "Cordials," "Tonics," "Elixirs" and "Bitters" of the day. Golden Medical Discovery is nutritious, tonic, alterative, or blood cleansing, and an unequalled cough remedy. Pleasant Purgative Pellets, scarcely larger than mustard seeds, constitute an agreeable and reliable physic: Favorite Prescription—a remedy for debilitated females; while his Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is known the world over as the greatest specific for Catarrh and "Cold in the Head" ever given to the public. 698

Castoria is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in e xistence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It dimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Local Matters.

A Brave Act.

We congratulate our Kittery neighbors on the coolness and pluck of Deputy Sheriff Richard Philbrick of that town. On Wednesday, a party of roughs from Boston and Lowell went to Gerrish's Island, which is in the confines of Maine, for the purpose of having an undisturbed dog-fight. The animals had been biting and gouging each other about thirty-five minutes, one having a broken leg and the other being badly lacerated. At this time Mr. Philbrick arrived on the Island without any assistants and ordered the fight stopped. The principals in the cruel business took up their dogs and moved off, but afterward returned to have the fight finished. Mr. Philbrick, however, is the man for an emergency. He commanded the owner of the dog with a broken leg to put the poor animal down that he might put him out of his misery. The man demurred, but Sheriff Philbrick was firm and the dog was reluctantly placed on the ground, Mr. Philbrick dispatching him with his revolver. The brutes who had been enjoying the cruel scene were inclined to resent the interference of the officer, but thought it best in view of his presented revolver not to offer resistance. His action is highly commended. It is evident that dog-fighting cannot be carried on while such faithful officials are at hand to enforce the law.

Gunning Accident.

Mr. G. H. Jenness of Rye came near being seriously injured by the bursting of a gun while outside of Rye Ledge early Wednesday morning. The explosion split and blew overboard the barrel and lock, while the stock was shattered into atoms in the hands of Mr. J. Notwithstanding the terrific explosion—for the gun was a very heavy one—the only personal injury inflicted was a slight contusion of the right eye and a couple of shot through the edge of the left wrist. "Buggins" said last evening that his head felt as if eighteen thousand brass bands were giving a street concert, and as if his shoulder had been wrestling with a mule. And worst of all he says he idn't killed the bird.

An Irish Court.

At the Limerick session recently, the jury after a quarter of an hour's absence, returned into court, "We find him not guilty."

Chairman—Are you unanimous in your verdict?

Foreman—We are, your worship; we are nine to three. [Great laughter.]

Chairman—This is not a proper verdict.

Foreman—we first decided, your worship, that the minority should be ruled by the majority before going into the merits of the case. We then became all unanimous in the end. Laughter.

Chairman—But how could you be unanimous when you say you are nine to three?

Foreman—Your worship, I took down those who were for finding him guilty, and those who were for acquitting him, and the minority agreed to the verdict of the majority.

Chairman—Oh; go inside, each of the three men who were in the minority, are they of opinion that this man is guilty? Go inside and let them agree about it. I don't want to hear any more of your deliberations; go inside and let them find that this man did not strike the prosecutor.

The jury then retired, and after a few minutes re-entered and handed in a verdict of "not guilty."

Chairman (to the jury)—Gontlemen, you have agreed to your verdict. You say that the prisoner is not guilty?

Foreman—We do.

Chairman—Is that the verdict of the whole of you.

Several jurors.—Yes, your worship.

Chairman—Discharge the prisoner now. (To the prisoner.) I hope if you ever come here again you will not get off so easy.

Prisoner—It is my first offence, and it will be my last. [Loud laughter, in which the whole court joined.]

Chairman—But the jury say you have done nothing at all. [Laughter.]

A St. Louis Man Greets the Texans.

[Reported by Himself.]

"Gentlemen," says I, "since we have heard of your intended exodus unto our shores, we have sat upon the house tops and gazed over the boundless prairies from the rising of the rosy god of day to the waning sheen of the mellow September moon. You have come, and we are happy. In the name of the biggest city on the right hand side as you go down the biggest river in this big country, we give you the biggest kind of a welcome. Make yourselves sociable, and if you don't see what you want, ask for it. Some of you have had a long and ex-Austin journey. You came by Chicago; we rejoice, for nothing gives such a zest to appetite as hunger. Gentlemen, in the variegated quilt on Uncle Sam's bed your patch is the largest, and covers with genial warmth his right foot when he lies with his head to the north'ard. You are a whopper, and we are glad of it. Tell your folks to 'cotton up' to us, and we will do you good. We will pour out the horns of plenty if you will send us plenty of horns. Don't, I beg of you, fellow-scribblers, hide your light, but light your hides up here, with the best inside of them. Our dry goods merchants have thousands of yards of stock to sell, and you have thousands of stock for our yards. Hoof 'em along. There are 'ties' that bind us together. We have 'railed' at you sometimes, but our intentions are now 'Pacific.' But I won't pursue this train further. We have shown you some of the features of the city. You have seen the shah's garden, which was planted by the Persian monarch on one of his annual visits to his country. You have visited Unrig's cave, discovered by Gambrinus, the great he-brew, whose bier now rests within. We intended to show you a copy of The Heart of the Andes after Church, if you remained over Sunday. When I think, gentlemen, of the influence of the far-reaching—"

Here the presiding man rapped on the table with a salt-cellar, and he thought I had said enough.

An ex-communicator to our columns has evidently been gladly welcomed by our neighbor of the Times, who needed him sadly.

—It is rumored that Parisians are trying to bring out again those ugly tight dress sleeves with a big puff at the top, which cause a woman to resemble an offended hen.

[Chicago Inter-Ocean.]

A very curious incident recently transpired in Canada. A Mr. Cameron some years ago returned from India, bringing with him a coffin containing the remains of his wife and child, who had died in that far country during his sojourn there. They were interred in the burying-ground near his home. The ever-busy tongue of slander, however, made him its victim, and a story got abroad a short time since that he had merely brought a coffin filled with clay, and that he had sold his wife to an Indian chief for a gold chain. The neighboring Canucks were inclined to credit the preposterous yarn, and things were becoming uncomfortable for poor Mr. Cameron. He therefore gave out that on a certain day the grave would be publicly opened and the contents of the coffin would put to shame the ruthless detractors of his fair fame.

At the appointed time a large concourse of people came together, and the corpses were exhumed. They had been tenderly embalmed, and were in an excellent state of preservation. The features of Mrs. Cameron were so little affected by their long stay under ground that they were at once recognized by those who had known her in life. This proceeding quieted the tale bearers and vindicated the good name of the husband and father, who had borne his beloved dead so many thousands of miles over the sea in order that they might still be near him.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon as iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

Daily Chronicle.

Il Bacio.

[New York Tribune.]

In the midst of the flurry in Wall street it is greatly to be feared that a much more important event may be lost sight of. The Court of Appeals has just affirmed the decision of the Brooklyn City Count in the case of Homan vs. Earle. This decision practically abolishes kissing in affixing thereto the penalty of matrimony at the discretion of the kissee. To thousands of gay butterflies and pretty innocents this news will be of deep and painful interest. The story of the case is the following: A few months ago Miss Roxelana Homan brought suit in our neighboring city for breach of promise against Mr. Alexander Earle, a prosperous merchant. Mr. Earle imagined that before Roxelana could gain her case she must make the promise appear. He denied it and rested calmly, "just like a man," upon the law and logic of the matter. Miss Homan admitted there was no promise, verbal or written, but founded her claim upon the fact that Earle had frequently kissed her. While the unhappy man was congratulating himself upon his easy escap, his heart within him was turned to stone by these inconceivable words from the Bench, spoken by Judge Neilson, with measured accents and slowly flapping ears. He charged that no words were necessary to constitute an engagement. "The gleam of the eye and the conjunction of the lips," said this light of jurisprudence, "are overtures, when they become frequent and protracted." The jury, always eager to do a thing which shall be at once idiotic and gallant, gave Roxelana $15,000 for the wear and tear of her lips and affections.

Of course the case was appealed, and the higher tribunal has promptly confirmed the decision of the court below. It is therefore the law at this hour in the State of New York that if a bachelor kisses a spinster, said spinster may rightfully claim his hand or his goods. In cases where shyness or lack of opportunity may have prevented actual osculation, the young lady has still another string to her beau; if she can show that he has ever "shined his eye" in her direction, he is her lawful spoil, according to Judge Neilson. There is positively no protection for a bachelor except nose-bags and blind-bridles, and the ability to prove he has never left them off. To this extent the future at least is secure. But how many bachelors can wake up in the night and soothe their consciences with the reflection that, like Sir Galahad, "they never felt the kiss of love, or maiden's hand in their's?" If any such there be, sweet may be his sleep; but if in his memory lurks any record of early spoons, how harrowing must be the thought that he is the promised spouse of every girl he has ever idly saluted. There are young men to-day universally beloved and respected, the cynosures of Sunday-schools, and the delight of evangelical tea-parties, who in the clear vision of Judge Neilson are no better than Priam, King of Troy, or Brigham, Patriarch of Salt Lake.

The practical results of this momentous decision are appalling. No youth who values his liberty will hereafter suffer himself to be kissed except by a lady who can show her marriage certificate, and bring proof that her husband is living. With this exception, this soothing and humanizing amusement must be confined to the domestic circle, and the young men of the future will be "doomed mere sisterly salutes to feel, insipid things, like sandwiches of veal."

A Fly-Catch.

[Belfast Journal.]

We once tried to use "sticky" fly-paper, and made a bigger catch than we expected. The sheet of adhesive material was laid in a chair, and placed in the most enticing spot of the room editorial, where it awaited its victim. Now in those days we were afflicted with a fearful bore, an old chap who used to come in, seat himself in the handiest chair, draw it to our elbow, and then proceed to insert his auger and bore for information on all possible and impossible subjects, such as — who will the next President be? What do you think of George Francis Train? What makes boiled lobsters red? How many tons was Noah's ark? What became of the lost tribes of Israel? The fly paper had not long reposed there before that fearful bore came in. With his eyes fixed on our dismayed countenance he seized the chair, drew it beside us, parted his coat tails gracefully, and sank down. The burden of his vapid talk was that day lighter than usual, because we were thinking what his end would be, both verbal and physical. When that unfortunate man arose to go, his coat tails were still parted, gracefully held asunder by the stiff and adhering paper, on which predominated the picture of a huge fly. When he reached the street, a roar of laughter arose behind his back; turning to investigate, the mirth broke out anew, still in his rear. After revolving like a weathercock in a cyclone, a small boy volunteered the information, "Mister, your trowsers is got a paper patch." What suspicion stole over the mind of our visitor we know not, but we fear he did us injustice in his belief. But now we are happy in his conspicuous absence.

John B. Baldwin, speaker of the rebel house of representatives, died at Staunton on Tuesday.

Daily Chronicle.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1873.

Readables.

Lovett, the defaulting cashier of the Hingham National Bank was arrested on Thursday, and bailed in the sum of $50,-000.

At the Texas Republican State convention, recently held at Dallas, one Judge MaCown introduced himself as follows: "I am Judge MaCown, the old he bar of the Brazos bottom, the father of twenty-four children born in lawful wedlock, and the grandfather of forty-six grandchildren."

Conductor Wesley L. Breese was standing on the steps of a car of the Eastern and North American up train, near Wytopitlock station, on the 31st ult, and had just leaned out at the side to look at a heated box, when he was struck by the side of a small bridge, knocked off and instantly killed, his skull being crushed in.

There is a prospect of the introduction of the national currency in California. The San Francisco Chronicle says: "It is time that we should again agitate the currency question. Our legislators are now elected, and they should be carefully preparing themselves to legislate intelligently for the requirements of the State. The welfare of the State and all its industries demand the introduction and use of national currency. The opposition to us is broken and divided; at least one of the heaviest banking institutions of San Francisco, and very many of our wealthiest citizens, are in favor of currency, and will give to the cause their aid. Quite a number of our heaviest manufacturers and nearly all of our jobbing and retail merchants favor the change, while the idea is universal among mechanics, laborers and owners of homesteads and real estate. Our miners who produce gold, and our farmers who find in foreign countries a gold market for their grains, are, of course, with us as natural allies from their business interest. One earnest, grand effort, and California will wheel into line with the whole nation."

Who can read without emotion the story of two little girls in Green Bay, Wis.? The eldest was seven years of age, the youngest only five. A drunken father left them alone in their room for six days with only a small loaf of bread for food. When the children were found the elder sister was nearly dead, having refused to eat of the bread so that her little sister might not suffer. We hear a great deal of heroines. Does history furnish an example equal to this?

It is now proposed to extend the railway system of Nova Scotia to Louisburg, on the southeast coast of that colony. A through line would enable passengers from New York to reach a steamer in that port in thirty-seven hours. The distance from Louisburg to the nearest point in Europe, say Valencia in Ireland, is not over 2000 miles, and a powerful steamer could make the passage in four days and a half. Thus, with railway communication in Ireland, the time between New York and Liverpool may be shortened to little more than six days, a third of which will be devoted to land travel. This route might be too expensive for emigrants, but the saving of nearly a week on the sea would make it popular for first class travel.

More Veracity Than Sentiment.

The Merrimack Journal thus discourses relative to ministers, physicians and lawyers. It is worth reading:—

"What does a man want to study theology for? The people wont let him preach it from the pulpits. There was a time when ministers could preach on the trinity, the foreknowledge and decrees of God, the plan of salvation, and the importance of the sacraments; but if a preacher should announce for his subject next Sunday—"The eternal sonship of the Lord," he might just as well adjourn his meeting. They don't want to hear of the second advent, for they don't know or care whether the first advent has taken place. They complain universally at doctrinal sermons, and it matters not to them whether the Jew or Puritans were the chosen people. They don't want a man either of mature mind or sound judgment, and hence will not bear grey hairs in the pulpit. It is more pleasant to have a white cravat under a long, black, glossy beard; and soap locks and whiskers that show more cultivation than the brains, are attractive. The young men, smooth and handsome, take best. The people prefer veal to beef, lamb to mutton; and a pastor who can talk love in the social rooms draws more than he who can talk wisdom in the meeting house. After 1800 years of preaching, the churches are full of spiritual babes, who cry for sweetened milk, but who have no stomach for solid food.

Turn to other professions and all this is reversed. An old physician is preferred to a young one. Their experience is something. They have learned from books; they have learned from practice; and years add value to their action. The same with the lawyers. They don't take striplings for the bench, or 'green 'uns' for important cases. If men like Reverdy Johnson, Charles O'Connor or Caleb Cushing, complaining, say, "we don't want the case—can't give the labor that it needs," the client replies—let us retain you; your very presence in court will have weight; we will ask you only to advise—to give the benefit of your experience to the young men we employ, but can't wholly trust. It is the same in science generally; and the same in business; but in politics the less known the better, because absolute ignorance will win votes; and religion has become emotional and sensational, and boys are called when full grown men are rejected.

—We commend to the consideration of wives whose husbands "go to Lodge" Mrs. Banning's childlike confidence that her husband would return from the Polaris cruise "just when he said he would." It will go very far toward inaugurating a new era in night keys.

State News.

Francis Strong of Colebrook was standing in his wagon when the horse started, throwing out Strong and a bag of meal he had on his shoulder, straining him fearfully.

A son of W. P. Wheeler of Milan had an arm broken a few days ago by the kick of a cow.

The wife of Rev. Mr. Sherman of Piermont, having been confined to bed for several months by illness and having suffered from chronic lameness, claims that the Saviour appeared and healed her. She called her husband, got up in the night and is now all right. This alleged miracle has made much excitement in Piermont.

A Brookfield man who has been married for thirty years is now having his wedding boots repaired for the first time.

A young lady in Rochester wanted some bristles to finish artificial flowers with. She baited a porker with a dougnut, made a grab, was pulled into the pen and screamed in conjunction with furious grunts from the hog, but got her bristles.

On the 21st ult. Herbert Fletcher of Stewartstown, getting over a fence with a large pistol in his hand loaded with a ball cartridge, and a ramrod in the barrel, the pistol was discharged, the contents entering his right side, slanting upward. After remaining in his body seven hours the contents of the weapon, eleven inches in length were removed. On the 24th he was doing quite well.

A man in Stratham recently tried to shoot a hawk that was making havoc in his poultry-yard. He missed the hawk, but laid low an old hen and her two chicks. After calmly surveying the bloody field, he commenced to re-load, when his wife appeared and in no very gentle terms reprimanded him for killing her favorite biddy. Then, nerved by his apparent indifference, she suddenly seized the inanimate body of the hen, and with all her strength hurled it at her lord and master, striking him full in the chest. He looked as calm as a May morning, and made this simple remark:—"Wife, you and I seldom miss."

Mr. D. S. Perkins of Boston who was arrested in Nashua last fall for forging and using forged mileage tickets on the Lowell and Nashua Railroad, was tried in the Supreme Judicial court at Nashua on Tuesday and acquitted.

An Irish woman with a child arrived at Nashua on Tuesday on the Acton Railroad in search of a sister, but not finding her went to the station house and died during the night. The little girl says her name is Kildare and that she is from Maine.

A game of billiards, American caroms, 1000 points, was played at Portland, Me., Wednesday night, between W. W. Callahan, champion of New Hampshire, and Henry Smith of Portland. Callahan won by 162 points. Callahan has challenged Shiel, champion of Maine, to play him for $200 a side.

A Female Traveler.

[Detroit Free Press.]

"M. Quod" "took charge of a lady," on a railroad car, the other day, and thus details his woes: Perhaps the man meant to do me a favor when he came up to me at the depot, with a spinster hugging his arm, and wanted to know if I wouldn't take charge of her from Chicago to Detroit. Many men think a railroad journey rendered really pleasant by the companionship of an unprotected female. She insisted in counting her bandbox and traveling-bag as we got seated. She counted. There were just two. I counted and made no more nor less. Then she wanted her parasol put into the rack, her shawl folded up, and her bandbox counted again. I counted it. There was just exactly one bandbox of it. As we got started she wanted to know if I was sure that we were on the right road to Detroit. I was sure. Then she wanted her traveling-bag counted. I counted it. By this time she wanted the window up, and asked me if it wasn't a hot day. I said it was. Then she felt for her money and found it was safe, though she was sure that she had lost it. While counting it she related how Mrs. Graff, in going East, five years ago, lost her purse and $3. She ended the story by asking me if it wasn't a hot day. I said it was. Then she wanted that bandbox counted and I counted him. He was still one bandbox. There was a pause of five minutes, and then she wanted a drink. I got it for her. Then she wanted to know if we were on the right road to Detroit. I assured her that I was positive of the fact. The brakeman here called out the name of a station in such an indistinct manner that the lady wanted me to go and see what the name really was. I went. It was Calumet. She wanted to know if I was sure that it was Calumet, and I put my hand on my sacred heart and assured her that I would perish sooner than deceive her. By this time she wanted the traveling bag counted, and I counted her. She figured up as before. I had just finished counting when she wanted to know if I didn't think it was a hot day. I told her I did. We got along very well for the next half hour, as I got her to narrating a story about how she got lost in the woods, eighteen years before but as soon as she finished it she wanted to know if I was sure that we were on the right road to Detroit. I told her that I hoped to perish with the liars if we were not, and she was satisfied. Then the parasol fell down, she wanted me to change a ten-cent piece, and the window had to go down. When we got down to Marshall she wanted to know if the place wasn't named after court-martial, and whether it wasn't barely possible that the station was Niles instead of Marshall. The bandbox was counted again, and he was just one. Then the window went up, and she asked me if, in my opinion, it wasn't a hot day. I replied that it was. Then she related a story about her uncle, another about a young lady who had been dead several years. During that day I counted that bandbox three hundred times; raised the window thirty times; said it was a hot day until my tongue was blistered; arranged that parasol twenty-one times; got her sixteen drinks of water, and inquired the names of thirteen stations. She said it was so nice to have a man in whom a stranger could place confidence, and I dared not reply for fear of bringing out another story. When we reached Detroit I counted the things three times over, helped her off the cars, got her a hack, directed her to a hotel, told her the street, price, name of the landlord, head waiter, porter, and cook; assured her she would not be robbed or murdered; that it had been a hot day; that Detroit had a population of 105,000; that the fall term of school had commenced; that all Detroit hack-drivers were honest and obliging. Poor woman! I hope the landlord didn't get out of patience with her artless ways.

An Arizona Editorial.

[Prescott Miner, Sept. 16.]

Being a firm believer in the axiom that "it is never too late to do good," we boldly announce to all old and new patrons and readers of the Miner, that we, the editor, have mustered sufficient courage to "pop the question" to one of Arizona's fairest and best daughters, who has for some unaccountable reason, said "yea" to our proposal and agreed to become Mrs. Marion. Wedding to take place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. W. Wells in Prescott, on the 16th inst. Reception at the residence of the parties of the first and second part, in the evening of the same day, to which latter trying ceremony friends from here, there, and everywhere, are cordially invited to come and not stay too long.

As some people may have a desire to know the name of the lady who has condescended to become the better half of a poor Arizona editor, we will honor her and gratify their laudable desire by printing it in capitals, MISS FLORA E. BANGHART, of China Valley, in this county and Territory.

And now for a few remarks of a personal nature. Over ten years of our life have been passed in Arizona, seven of which have been devoted to the service of patrons and readers of the Miner. During these ten years we have prospected, mined, risked our lives among Indians, suffered hardships innumerable, sewed on many a button, flopped many a flap-jack, and upon several occasions gone to bed upon Mother Earth tired, hungry and a little alarmed about the permanency of our scalp. During all these long years, we were not strictly happy; no, indeed. That something which the God of Nature has planted in every man's bosom made us yearn for a partner—a woman, if you please, "God's best gift to man." Quartz claims, placer claims, auxiliary claims had we in abundance but all these did not satisfy us. Now, however, we have, at last, struck a "claim" to Miss Flora, and said claim is not for sale. With her we hope to glide down life's rugged pathway in a pleasant way. With her, and but little else, we propose to take a new departure; to commence anew the battle of life; to earn an honest livelihood out of the Miner, to which we must hereafter, if possible, devote more excruciating toil and thought; to labor for the advancement and prosperity of Arizona, and last, but not least, to trim our sails for a voyage over the River of Time to that land beyond the grave, where transplanted souls live in happiness forever and ever.

Absent-Minded.

[Danbury News.]

Here is another sad result of being absent-minded. A citizen on New street has been several times dunned for an amount due his grocer, but has always neglected to settle. Yesterday he received the bill again, with a note sharply reminding him of his backwardness. He at once counted out the money, and having done so, deliberately enclosed in the bill a sheet of fly-paper, and put the money in his pocket again. Then feeling a trifle irritated by the tone of the grocer's note, he relieved himself by scribbling on the back of the bill: "This is all the money you will get out of me," and sent it. When the merchant read these words and looked at the fly-paper, he took it all in at a glance, and explosively shouting, "Stuck, am I?" put his cap on wrong and dashed out to the nearest law-office. The proper papers were promptly drawn up, and immediately served upon the astonished citizen. When notified of the trick on the grocer, he indignantly repelled the insinuation; but upon feeling in his pocket, and discovering his money, he was forced to admit that his treacherous mind had got the best of him. Explanations followed, good nature was restored, the legal people refused any compensation, and the whole party buried all memory of the unpleasantness in exhilarating soda water at the expense of the grocer. After that they had cigars all round at the expense of the pleased customer, who, in his delight at the happy result of the threatened trouble, lost sight entirely of the fact that he never smoked. Fifteen minutes later, when resting over a barrel in the back yard of the store, and trying his utmost to keep down his stockings, he bitterly regretted that he hadn't went to law and "busted" that grocer.

Business Notices.

WHAT IS VEGETINE?—It is a compound extracted from barks, roots and herbs. It is Nature's Remedy.

The Tonic of the Period.

This is a trying season to persons deficient in stamina and out of health. To rally their physical energies by the most approved artificial means is a duty they owe to themselves. Foremost among the tonics and alteratives of the age stands HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. It is a vegetable stimulant and corrective, against which no tenable objection can be urged. There is no risk in recommending it as the best preparation in existence for renovating an enfeebled and broken down system. The most valuable medicinal products that nature has ever yielded to botanical research are blended in this famous elixir, and its stimulating basis is recognized in our public hospitals as the purest of all the varieties of distilled liquors. For general debility, nervous weakness, dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism, billiousness and intermittent fevers it is a positive specific.

TEMPERANCE MEDICINES.

If you would patronize true Temperance Medicines, scientifically prepared by a skilled physician, and by a process the discovery of his own, wherein not a drop of rum, whiskey, beer or any other alcoholic or fermented liquor enters—use Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines. They do not manufacture drunkards, as do the various "Cordials," "Tonics," "Elixirs" and "Bitters" of the day. Golden Medical Discovery is nutritious, tonic, alterative, or blood cleansing, acd an unequalled cough remedy. Pleasant Purgative Pellets, scarcely larger than mustard seeds, constitute an agreeable and reliable physic; Favorite Prescription—a remedy for debilitated females; while his Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is known the world over as the greatest specific for Catarrh and "Cold in the Head" ever given to the public. 608

THE NEW DOMESTIC SEWING MACHINE,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

38 Market Street, Portsmouth, N. H.

234 Congress Street, Portland, Maine.

aug6-ca6f E. A. JOY, General Agent.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to other of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus healthy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Proposition No. 2.

Any person guilty of eating ground corn, ground wheat, ground rye, or anything farinaceous, is not a child of the Lord almighty.

Any person indulging in the luxury of butter or anything of a greasy nature for the base purpose of lubricating the food, that it may easily slide into the stomach, is a "child of the devil."

Any person who does not conform to the same diet that I do, is in open rebellion against his Maker, and down on the hard pan of the never realizable condition of future bliss!

Any person who cannot live according to my standard of alimentativeness is a puttyhead and consequently a sinner. What then? Why he should go without his dinner, or be compelled to take a HARD HAND.

Laconics.

The residents of Water street near South Mill Bridge are anxiously awaiting the coming of the street commissioner.

A heavy frost made its appearance in this vicinity on Tuesday and Wednesday mornings the first exhibit of chilled dew this season worthy of note.

U. S. S. Monongahela sailed from the lower harbor for Newport, Thursday afternoon.

Two vessels with lumber for the coal pockets to be built on Noble's Island arrived here on the 1st.

The biggest thing of the State Fair was a mammoth squash, raised in Concord. It weighed 158 lbs.

Now is the time to gather barberries. Old ladies tell us that they are not good before the frost comes. They are not good after; that's sure. Take ten cents and go to a leather dealer and get a pound or so of shoe pegs, and boil them well in molasses, and let them stand until cold, and they are just as good as barberries—in fact no one can tell the difference.

For town teams at the State Fair, the first premium was awarded to Capt. Chester Pike, of Cornish; the second to Hon. Frank Jones, of Portsmouth. For the largest and best team owned by any one man, the first premium was awarded to Hon. Frank Jones, of Portsmouth, fifteen yoke of oxen.

The State Fair at Manchester closes today. The balloon ascension, Thursday, was a great success. Mr. L. L. Holden, who was to go up with Prof. King, kindly relinquished his privilege to Mr. A. W. Quint of Manchester, who wanted to go so much that he paid Prof. King $100. The balloon went up about a mile and remained in sight for an hour, landing its occupants safely about two miles from Exeter on the Newmarket road. Gen. Butler, Ex-Gov. Warmoth of Louisiana, and others addressed the crowd on Thursday.

An Imprudent Client.

The New Orleans Picayune says: A few days ago, in one of our streets, the attorneys, the judge, and all the officials, with the spectators, had their gravity upset by the remark of a defendant in a minor case. This defendant was an old colored man, who had been a slave in the family of the well-known young lawyer who was defending the case. The lawyer was requested by his honor to furnish testimony as to the general good character of his client, which he did, putting in a good word for old Tom himself. This carried Tom away. He jumped up and said: "Judge, every word de young gemman say is true, 'case when he was a baby I toted him in my arms and nursed him." The young lawyer smiled a weak, sickly smile, while every one else in the court, except the colored spectators, roared.

—Little John (before the piano): "Isn't Miss Dackson a bad tounter for a governess, Ma?" Mamma: "What for, my dear?" Little John: "'Cause she keeps tounting one, two, three, four, one, two, three, four, and t'ant get any farther—but she teeps trying. May I tell her the next is five? Do listen, ma!"

—The travelling funny man of the New York Sun leaves Newport with the conviction that Napoleon lied when he said "that Providence was on the side of the heaviest artillery;" for the heaviest artillery is at Fort Adams, and Providence is on the other side.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, Boston." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

LYKENS VALLEY COAL.
In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

National Education.

[Herbert Spencer in Popular Science Monthly.]

The belief in the moralizing effects of intellectual culture, flatly contradicted by facts, is absurd a priori. What imaginable connection is there between the learning that certain clusters of marks on paper stand for certain words and the getting a higher sense of duty? What possible effect can acquirement of facility in making written signs of sounds have in strengthening the desire to do right? How does knowledge of the multiplication table, or quickness in adding and dividing, so increase the sympathies as to restrain the tendency to trespass against fellow creatures? In what way can the attainment of accuracy in spelling and parsing, etc., make the sentiment of justice more powerful than it was; or why from stores of geographical information perseveringly gained, is there likely to be increased regard for truth? The irrelation between such causes and such effects is almost as great as that between exercise of the fingers and strengthening of the legs. One who should by lessons in Latin hope to give a knowledge of geometry, or one who should expect practice in drawing to be followed by expressive rendering of a sonata, would be thought fit for an asylum; and yet he would be scarcely more irrational than are those who by discipline of the intellectual faculties expect to produce better feelings.

This faith in lesson-books and readings is one of the superstitions of the age. Even as appliances to intellectual culture, books are greatly over-estimated. Instead of second-hand knowledge being regarded as of less value than first-hand knowledge, and as a knowledge to be sought only where first-hand knowledge cannot be had, it is actually regarded as of greater value. Something gathered from printed pages is supposed to enter into a course of education; but, if gathered by observation of life and nature, is supposed not thus to enter. Reading is seeing by proxy—is learning indirectly through another man's faculties, instead of directly through one's own faculties; and such is the prevailing bias that the indirect learning is thought preferable to the direct learning, and usurps the name of cultivation! We smile when told that savages consider writing as a kind of magic; and we laugh at the story of the negro who hid a letter under a stone, that it might not inform against him when he devoured the fruit he was sent with. Yet the current notions about printed information betray a kindred delusion; a kind of magical efficiency is ascribed to ideas gained through artificial appliances, as compared with ideas otherwise gained. And this delusion, injurious in its effects even on intellectual culture, produces effects still more injurious on moral culture, by generating the assumption that this, too, can be got by reading and the repeating of lessons.

Few, I suppose, will deliberately assert that information is important and character relatively unimportant. Every one observes from time to time how much more valuable to himself and others is the workman who breaks his engagements, spends days in drinking, and neglects his family. And, comparing members of the upper classes, no one doubts that the spendthrift or the gambler, however good his intellectual training, is inferior as a social unit to the man who, not having passed through the approved curriculum, nevertheless prospers by performing well the work he undertakes, and provides for his children instead of leaving them in poverty to the care of relatives. That is to say, looking at the matter in the concrete, all see that, for social welfare, good character is more important than much knowledge. And yet the manifest corollary is not drawn. What effect will be produced on character by artificial appliances for spreading knowledge is not asked. Of the ends to be kept in view by the legislator, all are unimportant compared with the end of character-making; and yet character-making is an end wholly unrecognized.

Let it be seen that the future of a nation depends on the natures of its units; that their natures are inevitably modified in adaptation to the conditions in which they are placed; that the feelings called into play by these conditions will strengthen, while those which have diminished demands on them will dwindle; and it will be seen that the bettering of conduct can be effected, not by insisting on maxims of good conduct, still less by mere intellectual culture, but only by that daily exercise of the higher sentiments and repression of the lower, which results from keeping men subordinate to the requirements of orderly social life—letting them suffer the inevitable penalties of breaking these requirements, and reap the benefits of conforming to them. This alone is national education.

—"So yer mother's dead, is she?" inquired a Detroit shoe-black of a rather solemn-faced lad who had come back with his "kit" after an absence of a day or two "Yes, she is," replied the boy; and then straightening himself up, he continued, "and dad did the fair thing by her—seven more hacks than Mrs. —— had the other day."

—A respected resident of Richmond, Va., whose character for veracity is unimpeached, recently testified under oath that he hadn't been sober for twenty years; which puts him considerably ahead of any other congressional candidate in popular estimation.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1873.

Readables.

Mayor Henry L. Peirce of Boston has been nominated by the republicans of the third Massachusetts district for representative to Congress.

A somewhat singular case is before the superior court of New London county, Conn., it being that of Mary T. Smith of Norwich against Mr. Lewis A. Hyde, one of the most prominent citizens, for $300 damages for injuries caused her by the falling of a piece of lead upon her foot. The two were in a horse-car, and Mr. Hyde had leaned the pipe against the seat and then gone to the other end of the car. It fell upon Miss Smith's foot and caused her serious injury. The best legal counsel is employed on each side.

The Post Office Department decides that to write "one book" on the wrapper of a book subjects it to letter postage.

The Maine Central officials have discovered that during State Fair week, over five hundred counterfeit tickets from Woodford's Corner to Bangor, were passed on the trains. This involves a loss to the company of over $1500. The counterfeit ticket lacked only the stamp, and was by this omission recognized.

Some idea of the mining activity in Nevada may be formed from the fact that the United States mint at Carson is coining about a million dollars a month.

Hudson's chief ill at present is diptheria, which is very prevalent in one locality.

Westmoreland has an absurd apple tree which is now blossoming.

Donaldson, the balloon man, had a wife once, and spent three months teaching her to walk a slack wire.

In the supreme court at Alfred, Me., Thursday, the case of the State versus Marcus Watson et als, for libel in the Biddeford Times against Judge Barrows and the jury in the Wagner case, was tried. The defendants are father and sons, the father being publisher of the Times. The two sons pleaded not guilty and the father appealed, and pleaded that he did publish the article but without malice in fact and without wrongful intention, and filed a statement tending to show that it was made in his absence and that he disapproved it. This explanation being deemed satisfactory the prosecuting officer was advised by the judge to prosecute no farther and the defendants were discharged.

In the York county (Me.) S. J. Court, the past week, the case of Hannah A. Littlefield, charged with the murder of her illegitimate child at Saco on the 17th of May last, has been on trial. The respondent admitted that she was delivered of the child while sitting in the privy; that she heard it cry and left it there. Dr. Kimball testified that the child was in a healthy condition when born and had lived after birth, from appearances. The girl was acquitted.

Fifty years ago the following advertisement appeared in a Cincinnati paper: "Passengers wanted—A wagon will start for New York city in about two weeks. Five passengers will be accommodated at $25 each."

"Rum did it" was the inscription placed by a man lying on Salisbury Beach one day last week, so drunk that he could not move. It was written on a piece of board in the form of the headstone to a grave, and put in position.

The following order was issued by the Navy Department: The department, with great regret, has to announce to the naval service the death of Rear-Admiral John A. Winslow, at his residence near Boston, Mass. The name of this distinguished officer will live in the history of his country as that of the victor in the memorable seafight during the late war of the rebellion, which ended in the destruction of the Alabama by the Kearsarge. On the day after the receipt of this order the flags of the navy yards and stations, and of all ships of war in commission, will be kept at half-mast from sunrise to sunset, and thirteen minute guns will be fired at noon ashore and afloat. The officers of the navy and marine corps will wear crape on the left arm for the usual period of thirty days.

The power of Thomas A. Scott, says Geo. Alfred Townsend, is in instant decision, followed up by executive spirit, and never vacillating, and in his dispatch of an infinite number of different items consecutively. Thus, memory, confidence, and to a considerable degree, judgment, enter into the man. He acquired his art by original endowments, and by experience in all branches of railroading, from repairing track and selling tickets, to managing legislatures and boards of directors. The mental strain to which this application would subject him is apparently neutralized by his control of sleep. He can sleep in a minute,—in his office-chair, in a railroad-car, in a stock-holders' meeting. After business hours, he dismisses every responsibility from his mind, and plays euchre like a boy. He never enrages his mind with petty provocations, and antagonizes nobody, except by an agent; but he will beat an opponent for the Legislature or Congress without showing himself. He is a tea-drinker, and at 1 o'clock takes his cup of tea in his office-chair, dispatching business all the while to Mr. Barclay or Mr. Greene, his assistants, both of whom are cautious and prompt as himself.

—A bare-back circus rider lately had a $1200 diamond bosom-pin stolen at Dayton, O. We should like to know what right a bare-back rider has to own a $1200 diamond pin. He ought to have sold it and got something to put on his back.

A patent fire-escape killed four men in Montreal, last week, and there wasn't any fire either, they were only experimenting with the thing.

State News.

Dover has 75 cases of typhoid fever.

Nashua contemplates the introduction of the fire alarm telegraph at an early date, a committee of the City Government having reported unanimously in favor of the project.

A suggestion from the Board of Trade that there be a Union depot erected at Dover was not favorably received by the Eastern and Boston and Maine Roads.

The premiums for the baby show at the State Fair were awarded as follows: For the most beautiful child in respect to form, feature, complexion and intelligence, under six months of age, Fred H. Stevens of Bedford, three and one-half months, gold necklace; between six and twelve months Mrs. Henry Haseltine of Manchester, ten months, gold cup; between twelve and twenty months, Norris C. Gault, Hookset, eighteen months, gold medal. For the baby with the reddest hair, irrespective of disposition, Mrs. Thomas Geron, ten-dollar gold coin. For the handsomest and best physically-developed twins, of and under four years of age, girls, Charles A. Clement of Derry, twenty-two months, pair of gold mugs; boys, Thomas Burns of Nashua, two years, six months, medal. For triplets, Cyrus R. Bacon of West Henniker, each a gold medal.

Among the new patents exhibited at the State Fair were the Eureka Burglar Alarm, and the Ne Plus Ultra Door Bell and Door Plate, patented by Mr. Everett O. Foss of Dover. They are valuable inventions.

Nashua now has a population of nearly 13,000 people, of whom nearly 25 per cent. are French Canadians, who are described as quiet, industrious people, many of them having accumulated considerable fortunes having risen to high social positions in their adopted city. The church lately erected by them is one of the most beautiful religious edifices in Nashua.

The Condemned Modocs.

A correspondent of the San Francisco Bulletin, writing from Fort Klamath, Oregon, under date of Sept. 9th, says:

"The Modocs under sentence of death are confined in the general guard-house, which is under strict surveillance, and are only twice a week allowed an airing in the parade ground. Nevertheless, all of the condemned save the curly-headed doctor are in fair health, aside from the weakness induced by long and close confinement, and appear to worry very little over the approach of death. The Doctor's system is an unhealthy state. For many years he has been addicted to strong drink. Shut off from his bitters and fresh air, he has fallen into a decline. Captain Jack has gained flesh rapidly of late, and is in good spirits. He says he does not fear death, but will feel ashamed to be hanged by the neck. He prefers to die like a warrior—to be shot.

The death warrant has not been received at Klamath, and in consequence of its non-appearance, rumors of a commutation of the sentence of death to imprisonment for life are freely circulated and often believed.

Report says that certain officials have come to the conclusion that Seolux (incorrectly known as Slatuck) and Barncho, two of the condemned murderers, were merely the tools of Jack in the Peace Commission tragedy, and therefore ought to be pardoned out and out, and the officials have forwarded a special petition in their behalf to the President.

The disposition of Captain Jack's remains is a question in which many professional gentlemen take a live interest at the present time, and one which may cause trouble. An embalmer named Sherwood, recently visited the military headquarters here for information in regard to execution, etc., remarking that he had consummated a bargain with Jack for his body after death, and had a receipt showing that he had already paid the purchase money. An officer advanced the idea that Jack's life and body were the property of the government, and neither could be taken without its consent. Mr. Sherwood having replied that he might invoke the aid of the civil courts, he finally concluded to open a correspondence with the Secretary of War on the subject. The embalmer desires to exhibit Jack for coin."

The Moon and Peat.

The Pall Mall Gazette speaks as follows of a curious superstition: Householders who are laying in their stock of coal for the winter will do well to study the moon, which is believed, in some quarters, to exercise no small influence on fuel stacked or stored at a certain season. The Skye correspondent of the Cornish Telegraph mentions that, during the fortnight which began on the 10th of last month the people of Skye were busy stacking their peats and securing their winter firing, being anxious to complete the operation while the moon was waning. During the fortnight commencing on the 24th of June, when the moon was crescent, no real Skyeman would stack his peat for any consideration, believing that unless stacked under a waning moon the peats will give neither light nor heat when burned. "A power of smoke" is all that can be expected from peats stacked under a crescent moon. In Skye the crescent is called "fas" and the wane "tarradh," and under these two terms the moon not only exercises great influence over peats, but also over many other things. In some parts of the Highlands, sheep, pigs and cows are only killed in the "fas," as meat made in the "tarradh" is supposed to be good for nothing but "shrinking" when in the pot.

—The citizens of Uniontown, Va., feel a little cold toward Henry Snyder. His wife fell down a well, and he rode three miles to borrow a rope, when there was a ladder long enough for the purpose leaning against the house.

—"How much are these tearful bulbs a quart?" asked a maiden, of a Danbury grocer, one morning. He stared at her a moment, recovering himself, and said: "Oh, them inyuns; eight cents."

How Does He Sleep?

A man who achieves any great thing in any department of human effort, must have assistants in the shape of employes, lieutenants, deputies, marshals—whatever you may choose to call them. He has brain enough to furnish direction to the energy of many men. His success or failure will be due to the judiciousness of his selection. He must know his men. They must be capable. They must be faithful. They must have no bad habits.

This last brings me to what I wish to present to my readers.

One of the most important things to know about any man upon whom you are going to place any dependence is, how he sleeps. Sleeplessness may sometimes be involuntary. There may have been some shock to the man's nerves which has made him insomnolent; but sleeplessness is more frequently voluntary. Men choose to push their studies for their work into those hours when they should be asleep. It does not matter for what cause any man may do this; the mere fact of not sleeping spoils his case. He may spend his nights in the theatre, in the study, or in the "protracted meeting." It will make no difference; the result to the body will be the same. The sleep was not had and for that the man must pay. One man must do with a little less sleep than another; but, as a general rule, if you want a clerk, a lieutenant, a lawyer, a physician, a legislator, a judge, a president or a pastor, do not trust your interests to any man that does not take on the average eight good, solid hours of sleep out of every twenty-four. Whatever may be his reason for it, if he does not give himself that, he will susp sometimes just when you want him to be strong.

The intellectual and moral connections of sleeping, have not, I think, been sufficiently appreciated. Men and boys have been praised for "burning the midnight oil." Now this "midnight oil" is a delusion and a snare. The student who is fast asleep at eleven o'clock every night, and is wide awake at seven in the morning, is going to surpass another student of the same intellectual ability who goes to bed after twelve and rises before five. In sleep the plate on which the picture is taken is receiving its chemical and it is plain that that which is the best prepared will take the premium.

Men who are the fastest asleep when they are asleep are the widest awake when they are awake. Great workers must be great resters. Every man who has clerks in his employ ought to know what their sleeping habits are. The young man who is up till two, three and four o'clock in the morning, and must put in his appearance at the bank or store at nine or ten o'clock, and work all day, cannot repeat this process many days without a certain shakiness coming into the system, which he will endeavor to steady by some delusive stimulus. It is in this way that many a young man begins his course to ruin. He need not necessarily have been in bad company. He has lost his sleep; and in losing sleep is losing strength and grace.

An Extraordinary Movement.

The neatest achievement of a tornado which passed over Sullivan county a few days ago, was the removal of the house of Buswell Benway, of East Unity. The house was a heavy one 40x28 feet. It was instantaneously taken from its foundation and moved 40 feet, as if it had slid on ice. Scarcely an underpinning stone was displaced; not a thing was dropped into the cellar, which was deep and of the size of the whole house; and the ground where it stopped was but little disturbed. Mr. Benway was pumping a pail of water in the back room, and his wife was in the front room; both were carried along, only being aware that some terrible blow had fallen upon their dwelling, but having no suspicion that it had been moved, and neither of them was hurt. Many of the windows were dashed out; every article of crockery or glass was broken to pieces; clothes that were hanging about, and other things, were scattered rods away. The back side of the house coming in contact with the front door step, and perhaps the underpinning, the latter was handsomely laid upon the ground inside down, and although badly racked, the house stood, while the shed some 30 feet in length, at the end, was entirely demolished.

—If you are in the habit of bewailing your "luck," read this concerning the family of Mr. Jasper Baker, until recently a resident of North State street, Chicago. Three years ago Mr. Baker was a conductor on one of the North Chicago street railways, and the happy head of a family consisting of a wife and three interesting children. On the 4th of July his wife went to visit a sister at Aurora, taking the children with her. On the same day Eddy, her eldest child, a boy of six, while attempting to catch a ride on a freight-train was run over, and had a leg and a foot cut off. His little sister, a child of two, was so appalled at the sight that she was thrown into brain fever and died. After returning to Chicago the cripple was seized with small-pox and infected the rest of the family, including Mr. Baker's mother and sister. Mrs. Baker died, and her husband, not sufficiently recovered, in attending her funeral took cold, and, after six months of suffering, died. This was a few days since. Finally, the elder Mrs. Baker received a dispatch summoning her to the death-bed of a daughter at Elgin.

WHAT IS VEGETINE?—It is a compound extracted from barks, roots and herbs. It is Nature's Remedy.

If you desire rosy cheeks and a complexion fair and free from Pimples, Blotches and Eruptions, purify your blood by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It has no equal for this purpose. 609

The Tonic of the Period.

This is a trying season to persons deficient in stamina and out of health. To rally their physical energies by the most approved artificial means is a duty they owe to themselves. Foremost among the tonics and alteratives of the age stands HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. It is a vegetable stimulant and corrective, against which no tenable objection can be urged. There is no risk in recommending it as the best preparation in existence for renovating an enfeebled and broken down system. The most valuable medicinal products that nature has ever yielded to botanical research are blended in this famous elixir, and its stimulating basis is recognized in our public hospitals as the purest of all the varieties of distilled liquors. For general debility, nervous weakness, dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism, billiousness and intermittent fevers it is a positive specific.

THE NEW DOMESTIC SEWING MACHINE,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

38 Market Street, Portsmouth, N. H.
234 Congress Street, Portland, Maine.

aug6-tuoltf E. A. JOY, General Agent.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Local Matters.

City Council.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, the committee on streets was empowered to establish the line of the highway on Spinney's road at land of Francis I. Wilson.

The petition of George Paul and others for the use of a ward-room for a social dance was referred to the Mayor with power.

THE WATER QUESTION.

Mayor Marvin and Aldermen Lefavour and Sise were appointed a committee to ascertain and report some plan for providing an adequate supply of pure water for the city.

The Mayor reported that the landing at the foot of Daniel street is completed.

The board refused the application of Canon Walsh for permission to build two steps on Summer street, near the Catholic church; voted to employ a civil engineer to define the line opposite and near the church; and instructed the Street Commissioner to raise the street near the church to the established grade.

Notices were received of suits against the city for salaries by Geo. E. Barsantee and Chas. W. Shannon.

ENFORCEMENT OF THE LIQUOR LAW.

Voted, that the petitioners for the enforcement of the liquor law be notified that the city government will prosecute all cases of violation of the law of which sufficient evidence is furnished.

Voted, that the Mayor be requested to enforce the city ordinance requiring barrooms, etc., to be closed at 11 o'clock, P. M.

CITY LOAN.

The Common Council passed the Port Wardens and orchard bill; also a bill authorising a city loan of $50,000. The bill was passed in concurrence by the Aldermanic Board under a suspension of the rules.

Laconics.

Congressman Small was in town, Friday.

The new hotel at Newcastle is going up.

Dumas is to enlarge the Boar's Head hotel.

The crop of old maids in Portsmouth is being reduced.

Thanks to Mrs. G. W. Towle of Newcastle for a fine bouquet.

Lieutenant Commander M. L. Johnson has been ordered to the receiving ship Sabine.

One of the new stores in the Mechanics' block is to be occupied for the apothecary business.

A confectioner from Philadelphia will lease one of the new stores in the old Rogers building.

Morning services to-morrow at 10.30, at the Unitarian church. Vespers at 7.30 P. M.

According to the Journal, teetotallers are the salt of the earth. There are eighty of them in Portsmouth.

Notwithstanding the panic, the extension of the Portsmouth and Dover Road to Great Falls will be carried on with all possible activity.

Prof. King, in his balloon, Thursday, drifted over Portsmouth, and then ascending, struck another current and sailed inland to Exeter. Who saw him?

Rev. James Denormandie will give next Sunday evening the first of a series of historical sketches of the South Parish of this city and the early religious matters of the Piscataqua settlement.

Game is abundant in the vicinity of Portsmouth. "Ring-taw" is scarce, but "hopskotch" is ripe. "Hispythewolf," "old johnbrown-kittykittykown" and "Tmon ticklytoby'sland" have set in.

The Dover Enquirer hopes the temperance men of Portsmouth will not wait for city officials to make complaints of violation of the liquor law! But that wasn't the feast to which the petitioners invited themselves.

Dover Should Celebrate.

[Dover Enquirer.]

The city of Portsmouth on the Fourth of July last celebrated the 250th anniversary of its settlement. It was an event for which many preparations had been made, and neither expense nor labor spared to make the reunion of the living and the commemoration of the dead a befitting tribute to the past and a memorable occasion to all its citizens. And such indeed it proved—one that reflected the highest honor upon their patriotism and hospitality, and in its revival of sacred memories, its rich associations and festivities will long be recalled with delight.

We too in Dover made some preparations or talked of preparations for a like celebration. Our history was as old as that of Portsmouth. The same ship brought settlers to them and us. The same week probably saw the settlement of both towns. The ensuing years brought as hard trials and severe sacrifices to, and exhibited as noble instances of sterling patriotism, of Christian faith and unflinching fidelity to principles in our ancestry as in theirs. Of all the early settlements of New England scarcely another has a more stirring history, richer in adventure and incident worthy of commemoration than our own.

Yet for all this, we let the opportunity pass. Neither our city nor our citizens considered the occasion worthy of special notice. With the exception of the commemorative discourse in the old First Parish church, we have shown no recognition of the sacrifices and paid no tribute to the memories of our fathers.

This indifference to our ancient history is undoubtedly more apparent than real. There are very many of our citizens who would gladly have taken part in and shared the labors and expense of its suitable commemoration. There are those especially—and the number is surprisingly large—who can trace their ancestry to the earliest settlers, and who would be only too ready to join in such action or testimonial as would best honor the deeds and keep fresh the memories of their forefathers. To such and to that other large class who sympathize with them in their respect for whatever is noble and inspiring in the character of those who have once lived in our very midst, another and better way of accomplishing their object than by any mere celebration is suggested in the erection of a permanent monument.

Fishy.

[Rochester Union.]

The Penn Yan Democrat tells a fish story which we are inclined to treat as such and pass it by, but for the fact that we have seen a private letter from a reliable source fully confirming all that was stated in the paper. The story is substantially as follows: Mrs. Myron Morse, of Penn Yan, her son, seven years old, and her sister were fishing in a boat on Kenka Lake, on Wednesday last. The boy leaned over the side of the boat, when a large trout jumped from the water and caught hold of the boy's nose. The boy sprang back, and in so doing pulled the fish into the boat. The trout thus caught weighed eight pounds. The Penn Yan Democrat offers to wager $10,000 it will verify this statement, strange as it may seem. The letter received in this city states that the child's nose was considerably mutilated, and its mother has caused its photograph to be taken, that it may be shown to friends. Expert anglers are compelled to resort to many devices to allure the salmon trout to their hooks, and that one of those wary fish should leave the water to reach for the nose of a juvenile angler is indeed remarkable, and quite beyond the understanding of those acquainted with the habits of fishes.

—This is the way Turquisians take their meals:

First they made away with a gallon kettle of hot tea. Then they prepared a four-quart pailful of boiled fish and soup. Just as this was dispatched their comrade returned, and the pail was twice filled with boiled beef, all of which was devoured by the three, the bones being cracked for the marrow. They then rinsed out the pail and cooked it full of "crupa," a kind of mush, which went the way of the fish and beef. They then fell upon "ukale" or dried salmon, devouring even the skin, after broiling it over the fire. Then they built their own camp-fire and began to cook another meal. We did not keep any account of the dishes, but the last thing we heard after retiring was the cracking of beef bones to get at the marrow. Swartz told us that a few months before a number of horses had been sent to Ajan under charge of half a dozen Cossacks. One of the horses broke his leg and had to be killed. At evening the six Cossacks sat down to the carcass, and in the morning there was nothing left of it but the hide and bones. Even the head and entrails had been eaten.

—An unfortunate German, Reif by name, and a resident of Saginaw County, Mich., has had most tremendous experiences in well digging. Calmly and unmurmuring he excavated to the depth of forty feet, and then, as he did not get much water, he desided to bore. When he had drilled down some thirty feet, things began to happen. His residence was badly shaken as by a small earthquake. Down in the well rumbling sounds, like the discharge of a cannon were heard. The neighbors became excited. A bunch of ignited straw was lowered, and up came a volume of flame rising fifty feet above the surface. The ill-starred Reif wanted water and he got fire. The well continues to go off whenever a light is applied, and we are told that "the neighbors do not feel such a state of security as to their hereafter as they did before the sinking of Reif's well."

—The Barnesville (O.) Enterprise says: "An old gentleman and lady from Pennsylvania are visiting our fair whose life history is somewhat singular. It appears that a widow lady took an orphan boy to raise, and when he arrived at the age of eighteen she married him, she then being in her fiftieth year. Ten years ago they took an orphan girl to raise. This summer the old lady died, being ninety-six years of age, and in nine weeks after the old man married the girl they had raised, he being sixty-eight years old and she eighteen.

—"Anna, dear, if I should attempt to spell Cupid, why could I not get beyond the first syllable?" Anna gave it up, whereupon William said: "Because when I come to c u, of course I cannot go any further." Anna said she thought that was the nicest conundrum she had ever heard.

PORTSMOUTH SAVINGS BANK,

DEPOSITS, $2,081,363.47.

William Simes, President. J. F. Shores, Treas.

THE Treasurer hereby gives notice to the Depositors:—

1st, That in conformity with the law of the State passed June, 1872, this Bank will declare an EXTRA DIVIDEND on the 1st of July 1875, and every TWO years thereafter, on all sums that shall have been in the bank six months or longer.

2d, That these Extra dividends will be based on the interest which may have accrued on the DEPOSITS of each depositor during the two preceding years: thus giving to each the FULL SHARE of all the net earnings of the bank.

3d, That the method heretofore followed of extra dividends every five years will of course be discontinued.

The Newsboy and the Bank.

The New York Sun tells of a prudent news-boy in a ragged jacket and one suspender who confronted a teller at one of the savings banks the other day, and demanded to know if "she was all right"—meaning the bank—because, if she was he didn't mean to be scared if every one else was. The teller assured him the money was ready for him at any moment. "'Nuff said 'tween gentlemen; but I don't want it," and with a self-satisfied air he walked out of the bank. "Is she good?" cried two or three newsboys, awaiting the result at the doorsteps. "Yes sir-ree; as good as wheat. Catch our bank to stop! Yoos ought to seed the gold I seed in the safe. More'n a house full. An' yoos don't ketch this feller a making a fool of hisself and drawing it out. I ain't so green, I ain't." At the same bank a man who drew out his deposits was so intoxicated he could scarcely stand. Probably he lost the savings of years before night.

—Boys who disturb camp meetings by crying "Amen" in the wrong place, and remarking "Glory" with more zeal than judgment, should read and ponder the fate of thirteen small boys in Kansas. Those thirteen ill-advised boys were guilty, so the story goes, of disturbing a Kansas camp-meeting by insisting upon shouting "Amen," when a very muscular preacher, who prided himself on his voice, was singing a hymn. The preacher bore it for some time, but finally becoming filled with righteous wrath, he descended from the pulpit and, never once interrupting his hymn, successively reversed and spanked the thirteen small boys. As his avenging hand descended, and the dust of the small boys filled the air, the rest of the congregation shouted in rapture and encouraged him with loud cries of "Go on, brother; go on." Then he returned to the pulpit, still singing, and those boys went half a mile away, behind a haystack, and laid down with their faces to the ground, weeping bitterly.

—A Michigan editor finds it necessary to deny that he has a tame mosquito so large that a Newfoundland dog can run under it without touching, and says the whole story originated with some reckless defamer at Kalamazoo.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Appetite, Total Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but a permanent, lasting strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the practice of many preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

A New Departure in Agricultural Addresses.

In these days of agricultural addresses the following will be appreciated as being unique of its kind. It was delivered by T. Joshua Jenkins, a writer not unknown to fame, at the Oneida county fair at Rome, N. Y.:

Fellow Farmers; I see it announced by the papers that I am to tell you what I know about farming. Such was my intention, but after I had written all I knew about farming it only made one page of letter paper, and I was obliged to choose some other theme. Then I concluded to speak of what I don't know about farming, but I had neither the paper nor the time to treat that subject properly. I never felt prouder of my intellectual attainments than I did when I discovered the vast expanse of my ignorance as to agriculture. I shall therefore tell you of some things that I know, more that I guess at, and of some things that are hidden from me.

The school boy who has met with success in his search for apples hastens to tell his comrades the best place to climb the fence, the position of the best trees, and how to avoid the old man and his dog—especially the dog. The married lady freely tells her less fortunate friend how she hooked and landed a husband. By interchanging experiences, the fair daughters of Eve have reduced the matter of husband-getting to a science. Some men crow that no woman can catch them, but, bless you, no woman wants them, otherwise they would be caught quick enough. This power is the result of judicious exchange of experiences among ladies.

Instinct teaches the school boy the necessity of this commerce of ideas. Common sense commends it to ladies, and speakers at agricultural fairs urge it upon farmers. I can offer for the benefit of my fellow-sufferers an experience, not very rich in ideas, but far richer in ideas than it is in potatoes.

FARM ACCOUNTS.

I learn first, that every farmer should be a good accountant, and should keep accurately the items of expenditure on and receipts from each crop. That is the way I run my farm. Last spring I figured $200 profit on my farm, in less than an hour. Money never was made easier, but it is a little slow in coming into my pocket. This fall my wife can't figure 25 cents profit out of the farm, a forcible illustration of the good results to be derived from promptness on the farm, and an equally striking example of the superiority of the masculine intellect.

CHEMISTRY.

Chemistry is another thing that every farmer should study to some extent. Salt, I find, does not contain the elements sought after by tomato vines. It is excellent for cabbages, but it kills the tomato and does not injure the tomato worm. It was while warring on the latter that I made this discovery. Salt cannot be used to advantage either in the cultivation of the cucumber.

In this connection let me say to my fellow agriculturists that I am well supplied with cucumber bugs. Our family is small and we have cucumber bugs enough to last until the spring crop comes in. I lost three of these bugs last spring and advertised them, not because of the value of the bugs, but they had carried off some choice tomato vines. Well, there never was such a generous response from a great-hearted people. I take this opportunity to thank the county for its remembrance of me and mine in our hour of affliction. The price of flour and coal might have made it difficult for Maria and myself to get through the winter, but secure in the possession of a cellar well filled with cucumber bugs we defy fate and laugh at panic. We could get up a corner in the market, but we shall not so outrage the confidence of farmers who have deposited bugs with us. But the bugs drag me from chemistry.

A solution of sugar in water, with the added juice of lemons, may be used to advantage on the farm. Some recommend the addition of whiskey, but I do not find that it increases the crops. The preparation is introduced into the farmer and hired man once an hour during the heated term. We used it once during the summer, but we can not find who stole the pitcher from under the fence. Until I have a talk with him, it is impossible for me to tell the immediate chemical effect of the preparation. Agricultural chemistry is as yet in its infancy, but it is to be hoped these suggestions will the more generally interest farmers in the subject.

FINANCE.

We should become more familiar with financial affairs. It is not enough that we get acquainted with all the currency in our vicinity. We must study the laws which govern these things. Last July potatoes sold for a dollar a peck, and I was happy until I found there were no potatoes on my farm. Afterward they grew, but then potatoes were worth but fifty cents a bushel. Instead of eight dollars we only got one dollar for our whole crop. Just so with the string beans. When no one had any they were worth fifteen cents a quart. When they were ready for market they would only bring twenty-five cents a bushel. Great injustice is done farmers in this way. The time to sell potatoes for fifty cents a peck is in July, when few farmers would suffer. Then in September, when potatoes are at their best, sell them at a dollar a bushel.

Then the things we can raise the easiest will not sell at all. My friends will be pained to learn that their bounty was, in a measure, made ineffectual from the fact that we cannot get one cent for those cucumber bugs, canned, dried and preserved; and it is just so with cabbage worms. The cabbage worm is hardy; nothing but a streak of lightning kills it. It is fatter than the silk worm and easier to raise; but we have no home market for cabbage worms.

Another blunder is made with Canada thistles. I have over ten thousand dollars' worth of thistles on my farm, and may not get a hundred dollars for the whole lot. It would be worth more than two million dollars to this county if we could establish a good market for Canada thistles. Some one ought to take lead in this matter. I have no money to spare, but would give a thousand dollars' worth of thistles to start the thing along, and many other farmers would do the same. As it is now, thistles are worth nothing, except to feed mules, nothing else will eat them. Now, most farmers are not prepared to raise mules. If a man has a grave-yard on his farm, a good stout hearse, and a large family, so that he can spare a boy every two or three weeks, without feeling it, why, let him raise mules. He will have a good rich grave-yard, and once in a while he may come across an idiot who will buy a mule, but few farmers are so situated. Every mule has serious moments, when he gets a thinking of his latter end, and if the farmer does his own work and intrudes too near the subject of the mule's meditations, why, it leaves the farmer no time at all to prepare for death and the grave. The farmer's widow will sell the mule to buy mourning, and that will end the whole business. It is not to be wondered at that farmers will not invest their thistles in mules, and there is no other way to invest them, unless they happen to sit down in a lot where they grow, and that don't pay.

These are common, every day matters, and I should not refer to them, were it not for the negligence of agricultural papers.

STOCK.

In a county like Oneida, of course, the attention of farmers is much engrossed in matters pertaining to live stock. What I can say of that is not of an encouraging nature. We kept but one cow this summer, and we did not keep her long. We never could find out who she belonged to. During the fifteen minutes we kept her, she ate three cabbages and half a bushel of sweet corn. Giving her twelve hours' sleep in the twenty-four, and estimating her feed at the above rates, and I suppose it would cost one hundred dollars a week to keep her. You can not get one hundred dollars a week out of a cow—not honestly. Then, too, she broke a board out of the fence and kicked a set of teeth out of the dog. We have kept no cattle since she left. We have kept some poultry, but the hens came around only for meals. They board with us and lodge with another man. We could make it pay better if we should kill a hen once in a while: but I have never been able to kill any yet. I have killed pretty much everything else in the garden and broken some glass, but I could never hit a hen.

Farmers and others who cultivate the soil or raise stock should draw a clearly marked line between the departments of their business. Seth Green has done great things for this country by the information he has furnished about fish culture. Fish give nourishment to the brain, and it would be well if we could raise more fish, not so much to sell as to eat at home. But when I read, as I did not long since, about the discovery of a lively little fish in a pitcher of milk, I don't like it. To my mind, that shows a disgusting disregard for the finer distinctions of our business. In another case a hop merchant found a section of stone wall in a bale of hops. Now, that is no place for a stone wall. Mistakes of that kind break down all social barriers, and should be zealously guarded against. In this instance the hop merchant threw the stone carelessly through the door and hit the horse of a man who was driving by, and then the man came in and hit the hop merchant. No one could keep any trace of transactions in that establishment for some time after that. When once these irregularities creep in, you cannot tell where they may end.

We keep a cat, and dog, and canary bird, not for profit, but for—well, come to think of it, I do not know what we do keep them for. So long as we keep them separated there is peace in the family, but if by mismanagement the dog gets mixed with the cat, or the cat gets mixed with the bird, it interrupts that regular movement of farm affairs which every farmer should strive to maintain.

There was a peddler come to our house once, and so long as he managed his business himself he kept within proper limits, but so soon as he admitted the dog to his business disaster ensued. You could not get any ruling quotations from that market for almost half an hour. There was an abrupt decline of dry goods and notions, immediately followed by the rising of the peddler and much activity in the dog. It was a money losing operation all around. The peddler refused to sit down square in a chair for a month, and the dog would not eat anything but fresh meat for a month. How much better if each had attended to his affairs himself. There is an important lesson in this.

FRUIT.

The increasing importance of our fruit growing interests demands a word. We have three varieties of apple trees. The first is too young to bear, the second is too old to bear, and the third bears well enough, but the apples are not good for anything. Naturally, I have devoted much time to fruit. I had good success in keeping the worms away, but since the apples got large enough to cook I have lost about half of them. These have been destroyed by some insect not as yet described by bug philosophers. The insects vary in size from the proportions of a monkey on a hand organ to four feet in height. They carry as a usual thing, a brick in one claw and a stick in the other. These they throw at the tree. The fruit which falls is swallowed whole. Their instincts are wonderfully acute, and they imitate the human voice. Approaching the tree where they were committing their ravages one evening, I heard one of them scream quite distinctly, "Run, Dan. Here comes the old cuss himself." I am trying to kill one to send to the Smithsonian Institute. I am told that a judicious application of salt will keep these pests away from the trees. Rock salt is the best. Mix with powder and administer with a shot gun. A tablespoonful is a dose.

MAKE HOME HAPPY.

The farmer and the farmer's wife should cultivate a love for the beautiful. If farmers' houses were more generally surrounded with trees and flowers, fewer farmers' boys would ramble away from home. The farmer's wife should do what she can to make her home suggestive of something better than the corn and potatoes with which the farmer has associated all day. The effect of proper home influences will be not only to cultivate the taste of the farmer, but it will give him renewed love for his wife and make him doubly attentive to her desires and tastes.

I know a woman whose husband left her at home every evening and tramped one mile into the village to hear old jokes at the blacksmith's shop. Still, he gave her fits if she went to Thursday evening prayer-meeting. She determined to surround him with refining influences. She bought a beautiful red and blue lithograph of Martha Washington. She bought a beautiful plaster cast of a stumpy boy carrying a pet cat or lamb, or owl or something. The influence of that cast was felt at the house right off. The woman said the boy was carrying a lamb, and the man said any fool could see that it was a pig, and she said he could only give the opinion of one fool, and he said the law gave him authority to speak for two, and she started for the mop, and he started for the village. The wife persevered. She got a picture of John the Baptist, but her man was a Methodist and refused to have anything to do with John. Still she persevered. She had the parlor frescoed, but the carpet smelled of camphor and cedar chips, and the old man would not sit there. She was not discouraged even then. She frescoed the farmer's face, and put a mansard on him, and let in a bay window over his eye, and built a porch around his mouth, and that farmer did not go to the village for a week. Woman's love can accomplish anything.

USEFUL KNOWLEDGE.

But surround the farmer's home with beauty as we may, this only cultivates the taste; the mind needs more solid food. Provision should be made for the distribution of useful knowledge in forms calculated to awaken interest and hold the attention.

Provision should be made for the more frequent distribution of patent office reports. Positively some farmers do not get more than one volume of patent office reports in a year. The whole farming community should cry aloud as one man against this criminal negligence. No wonder we have poor grass, and lose our bees, and see panic stalk through our business centers. We must have a change. The country demands it. We must have patent office reports.

Another feature of the present which must awaken gloomy forebodings in the mind of every true friend of agriculture is the lamentable dearth of book agents. These talented men should bear in mind that they do not live for themselves alone. They should be more sociable and easier of approach by common people. Because they hold the springs of all knowledge in the hollows of their hands is another reason why book agents should become more familiar with the masses. They should come around more frequently. Why, under present arrangements, remote farmers do not see book agents more than twice a day. Then when they stop at a house they should not be in such a hurry to leave; they should take more pains to explain the contents of their books, and, if occasion requires, they should sometimes even ask a farmer to buy a book—most farmers will buy if they are asked; and sometimes there are one or two ideas in those books. Irreparable injury is done the community by the exclusiveness and the modesty of book agents. I ask your serious consideration of this topic.

LABOR SAVING.

To give him the more time to cultivate his mind the farmer calls to his aid many labor-saving machines. This is as it should be. Mowing machines, threshing machines, corn planters and potato diggers need no description from me. Most of you are probably more or less acquainted with the patent churn. Your wife feels such calm satisfaction when she puts in the cream. There is such conscious power expressed in the eye of the hired girl as she pertly looks at the thermometer in the side of the machine, and sits down to churn. Some farmers kiss the hired girl, but your wife will probably tell you that it won't be healthy for you to try it. There is a splendid chance to bring the butter in ten minutes with a patent churn, but the butter is generally a couple of hours behind time. Hired girls learn patience from a patent churn. They have good exercise for patience when the butter won't come, and more when the farmer's wife does come, because she tells the girls he is lazy and sends her to get dinner. Then the farmer's wife runs the churn. At first it is easy as a rocking-chair. Then the butter not coming she puts in more strokes to the minute, and gets a back ache, and by dinner time she is just making the churn purr, and is talking so awfully about the man who made it that the whole family has gone off into another part of the house. When the farmer comes he falls victim to a cream-spattered woman, who sails at him in a torrent of tears, and putting him down by that churn leaves him to wrestle with fate. Farm gates are another good thing; the patent kind which open when you drive up, and scare the horse, and which run down every little while and won't open at all. You can frequently save an hour's labor sitting in your buggy and yelling for some one who understands the confounded thing to come and open one of those gates.

Of all the labor-saving machines on a farm none is quite so successful as a boy. The amount of work a boy can save is perfectly miraculous. My heart thrills with pride when I reflect how much work I was enabled to save when I was a boy. An enterprising farmer hired me, and it took two men all day to follow me around and do the work that I saved; farmers never do appreciate new inventions. When the evening came the farmer applied some sole leather to me, and made so much fuss over me that I left the farm. I knew he would miss me, but my modesty would not let me stay. I have never forgotten the lessons I learned on that farm. My wife says I save myself more work than any one she ever knew.

FINALLY.

I am aware I have not covered all the ground in this address, but I have covered considerably more ground than I own. My aim is to promote a more general exchange of experience among farmers. If I have not more experience to offer it is because my farm is small and unproductive. Nothing I got from it was fit for the fair except my experience.

There was a time when I felt a good deal of pity for Adam. There was a time when I could shed tears over the fate of that unhappy man turned out of his garden just as the vegetables were getting ripe for the market. I do not feel so any more. I have got a garden of my own, and nothing would please me better than that some one should turn me out of it.

The following story is related in connection with the run on the Union Trust Company in New York, last week. A long line of people were waiting to draw their money out of the institution. An excited individual offered a boy representing a commercial house, $50 for his place in the line, and afterward increased the bid to $100. The boy, loyal to his employers, would not sell his place for the tempting offer. A man ahead of him, however, responded, and said he would sell his place for $200. The money was paid him immediately, and the place was given up. As he walked away he said to a friend: "I had only $100 in that concern, and I think I have come out a little ahead."

Alabama is another Southern State for the debt of which the democratic party is responsible. It was free from financial difficulties when the democrats assumed control, in 1870. The revenues were ample, and the laws regulating them were so carefully and judiciously executed that the expenses of the State government were defrayed without the imposition of onerous burdens. Soon after 1870 when the democrats fraudulently obtained control of affairs, the credit of the State was pledged by the indorsement of railroad bonds, and its assets were, like those of Virginia, squandered for the benefit of a select few, chosen from among the leaders of the democracy. It is the old tale over again, as we have heard it from New York, where Boss Tweed robbed the people of millions, and from Virginia, where Mahone, so far as he could, copied Tweed's manipulation of the affairs of the great metropolis.

At Truro, N. S., at the instance of the Clerk of Licenses there, a woman was fined for violating the license law. She paid the fine and turned the table on the Clerk of License by proving a case of selling liquor without license against that official, and the magistrate before whom the case was tried imposed a heavy fine, with the cost of trial.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 87.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

"STRAWBERRY BANK" was the name of Portsmouth at first. The first settlement was in 1623 at Odierne's Point, two and a half miles south of what is now the compact part of the city. We all know that! This was too, the first in what is now New Hampshire. There the first house was built on a spot still pointed out. The inhabitants were few till eight years later, that is, in 1631, when about thirty others came over and joined them, twenty-two of whom were women. Then the settlements began to extend farther back into the wilderness. That same year a Mr. Chadborn erected a house, long called the "Great House." Its location, it is said, was on what is now Water street, on the south-east corner of Court street. If this house was well built, it could not have been kept in good repair, as after about fifty years it was reported in a ruinous condition, and soon fell down. This is considered the second house built in the town and Province. If so, the settlers up the river at Dover Neck where a portion of those who landed at Odierne's Point went in 1623, had only small cuts.

This commencement on what is now Water street, which was the beginning of Portsmouth proper, led to an examination of the features and productions of the place. The Piscataqua flowed rapidly towards the sea. Its excellent harbor was there, though not improved. The dense forest was there, with its stately trees. From the "Great House" north over Church Hill to the bank of the river, in small openings, strawberries grew, and hence the settlers called the place Strawberry Bank. Possibly and probably it had this name even before 1631. It was so called till 1653, thirty years from the first settlement. In that time in all papers and public documents, it was called "Strawberry Bank," sometimes simply "The Bank."

In 1641 the settlements of the then four towns in the Province, which were what is now Portsmouth, Dover, Exeter and Hampton placed themselves under the government of Massachusetts. In 1653 in Strawberry Bank and the region round about, embracing what is now Greenland, Rye, Newcastle and Newington, there were some 50 or 60 families. If families were large there might have been 250 or 300 souls. A petition was sent to the General Court of Massachusetts to have the place become a definite township. It commenced thus, "To the hon'd Gen'l Court of Boston, this present month of May, 1653. This humble petition of the Inha'ts of the Towne at present called Strabery Banke." It was in very respectful language, earnestly setting forth their wishes and the advantages they aimed at in having their petition granted. It was signed "Brian Pedleton, Renald Fernald, (the first Physician,) John Sherbourn, Rish. Cutt, Samuel Haines, in behalf of the rest."

The petitioners requested that the place be called Portsmouth. The General Court granted the request May 28th, 1653, and so Portsmouth has been the name 220 years. In newspapers &c., it is sometimes called Strawberry Bank, its former name, but it is in good humor, not in derision, but rather a compliment.

The name Portsmouth was suggested by the petitioners. They stated that the place was at the river's mouth, "and good as any in this land." Good as a port, probably they meant. It would seem that the pronunciation should be Ports-mouth, but the proper pronunciation is Ports-muth.

The Tonic of the Period.

This is a trying season to persons deficient in stamina and out of health. To rally their physical energies by the most approved artificial means is a duty they owe to themselves. Foremost among the tonics and alteratives of the age stands HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. It is a vegetable stimulant and corrective, against which no tenable objection can be urged. There is no risk in recommending it as the best preparation in existence for renovating an enfeebled and broken down system. The most valuable medicinal products that nature has ever yielded to botanical research are blended in this famous elixir, and its stimulating basis is recognized in our public hospitals as the purest of all the varieties of distilled liquors. For general debility, nervous weakness, dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism, billiousness and intermittent fevers it is a positive specific.

Notice to Church Wardens & Music Committees

MR. E. Q. NORTON, late of Boston, will remain in Portsmouth for the purpose of tuning and repairing Pianos and Organs. Correspondence solicited with churches out of town, having organs needing repairs. Organs rebuilt, voiced and tuned in the most thorough manner. Estimates given on jobs; also specifications for new organs. Churches about to buy will save money by consulting me, as I am under the control of no maker and work for the interest of the party buying.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuble is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Local Matters.

The Reunion of '73.

At last, the history of the "Return of the Sons and Daughters of Portsmouth," last 4th of July, is out of the hands of the printer, and the hundreds of eager children of old "Strawberry Bank" who impatiently awaited its appearance may now secure it. The waiters are by no means losers. The book is a pamphlet of 96 closely printed pages and bears witness to the indefatigable and faithful labors of the Historian, Charles W. Gardner, Esq. In reading again the speeches of the ladies and gentlemen who took active part in the festivities of that three days' JUBILEE, the event seems upon us once more, so thrilling is the narrative and so correct the reports. Mr. Gardner seems to have omitted nothing, from the extensive preparations of months at home and abroad to the detailed account of the organizations taking part in the procession, the full list of the decorations, the speeches at the tent on the 4th, the successful High School Reunion on the 5th, and the grand closing Union Concert on Sunday, the 6th. Of course, every one wants a copy. The pamphlet edition is for sale by Mr. Gardner and at the book-stores, at 50 cents per copy. A limited number of copies, bound in cloth, will be for sale in a few days at one dollar each.

Messrs. King and Quint, who went up in the balloon from Manchester, state that they came as far east as Portsmouth.

Mr. A. Hall, formerly of the Vermont Central and Northern Railroads, has been appointed assistant train dispatcher at the Eastern depot.

The inconsiderate Times is fooled by our remark that there are eighty teetotallers in Portsmouth, and draws the conclusion that we think there are no more than eighty. Which only goes to show the truth of Josh Foster's statement that the Times editor does not know the meaning of words.

The Catholics of this city propose holding a Fair for the benefit of St. Mary's Church, to open on Tuesday, Oct. 14. Any desirous of contributing anything toward this enterprise can leave their donations at the house of Rev. Canon Walsh, 116 State street, where they will be gratefully received and properly applied.

An Act of Kindness.

[Danbury News.]

A New York party named Reynolds, who had been spending the summer here, was at the upper end of Deer Hill avenue, strolling for his health, yesterday morning, when he observed a boy trying to pull a kite from an apple tree, where it had lodged. As Mr. Reynolds came up the string broke, leaving the kite up there. With the natural promptings of a human heart, the gentleman gave his coat in charge of the boy, and, crawling over the fence, was soon up the tree.

The boy felt pretty bad about the accident to his kite, but on taking a second look at the coat which was almost new, he dried his tears, and scampered off with it, unperceived by Mr. Reynolds, who was trying to take an obstinate twig from the back of his neck. After considerable difficulty he reached the kite, and was stretching forth his hand to take it, when the limb he was on suddenly snapped in two, and he fell some six feet, splitting one of his pantaloon legs half way up, and running a twig into his nose with such violence as to make that organ bleed. Fortunately he was saved from further mishaps by catching on a strong limb.

He stooped then to feel of his nose, and meditate on the accident, when a rough voice from below demanding what he was doing there, and looking down he saw a shirt-sleeved, bare-headed man, with a pitchfork in his hand and fire in his eye.

Mr. Reynolds explained about the kite.

"That won't do," said the man. "I've had too many apples hooked from that 'ere tree, and now that I've got the thief, I intend to make him dance." And the man looked ferociously at Reynolds' facilities for dancing.

The unhappy Reynolds referred him to the boy for a indorsement of his story.

"What boy?" asked the owner of the orchard. "I don't see no boy. There ain't no boy here."

Reynolds looked out in the road, but ther was no boy in sight. He shouted "Bub" two or three times, but there was no sesponse. The color deserted his face and a look of astonishment and horror spread over his face.

"This is very extraordinary," he said.

"Very," coincided the farmer, with great dryness.

"That boy has stolen my coat, and I must pursue him and recover it," said Reynolds, suddenly becoming frantic over his loss, and preparing to descend.

"O, come down and catch him," said the farmer with biting sarcasm, chewing his tongue to show how calm he was and placing the fork in such a way as to take in the most valuable portions of Mr. Reynolds' body.

That gentleman saw the preparations in time to stop.

"Why, you wouldn't run that fork into me, you old idiot?"

"Who are you calling an old idiot, you miserable whipper-snapper," shouted the old chap, as he instantly danced around the foot of the tree, and glared fiercely at his victim. "Come here and rob me, you villain, will you, and then stand in my own tree an' blaspheme me. Run the fork into you, will I? Yes, I'd run it into 200 of ye."

Mr. Reynolds was shocked.

"What do you want me to do?" he said, despairing of reasoning with the owner of the orchard.

"I want you to pay me $5, and get out of this orchard as fast at your rascally legs can take you."

Mr. Reynolds hesitated. It was bad enough to lose a coat, ruin his pants, and split his nose to help an evil boy out of trouble, without being bombarded with epithets, and charged $5 for the performance. He thought he would jump down on the old man and crush him, but he looked at the fork and repented of the design. Then he drew out a $2 bill and dropped it to his enemy, and humiliatingly slid down the tree, reaching his feet in time to avoid a kick the irate man aimed at him. He was helped out of the orchard with the fork handle, and immediately started for the hotel, which he reached in a condition of nervous prostration that at first threatened to result seriously. An active search has been made for the boy, but neither he nor the coat has been discovered.

Important Railroad Action.

A bill in equity praying that the Directors of the Concord Railroad be restrained by an injunction from depositing the moneys of that corporation with any parties other than the Treasurer of the road has been signed by John H. Pearson, of Concord, a very heavy stockholder, and by his attorneys, Hon. Edmund Burke of Newport and Samuel B. Page of Concord, and filed with the Clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court at Concord. A hearing for a temporary injunction will be had before Chief Justice Sargent at an early day. In answer to a legal demand for information upon the Cashier of the road, that official stated that the Corporation had about $70,000 deposited with Tower, Giddings & Torrey of Boston, and about the same amount on deposit in national banks in Concord, Manchester and other places. Hon. Nathan Parker of Manchester, Treasurer of the corporation, says the deposits made with him, all told, have not amounted to $20,000. In the present state of financial uncertainty the matter naturally causes anxiety among the stockholders.

—A Connecticut lady has substituted for the tar and feathers with which she used to punish her drunken better-half, a coating of soft-soap, liberally covered with flour. The cleaning process is thus more easily performed.

English Bathing Drawers.

HAM & CO., have just received a lot of Gentlemen's English Bathing Drawers.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—It is a great mistake to set up our standard of right and wrong ,and judge people accordingly.

To measure the enjoyment of others by our own.

To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.

To endeavor to mould all dispositions alike.

Not to yield to immaterial trifles.

To look for perfection in our own units.

To worry ourselves and others with what cannot be remedied.

Not to make allowances for the infirmities of others.

To consider everything impossible which we cannot perform.

To expect to be able to understand everything.

Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

LEHIGH, WILKESBARRE, PITTSTON

And other first class Coal. For sale by the Cargo, Car-load or at retail from our wharf.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN

HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, be its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their natural vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy; from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING IN THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

Daily Chronicle.

Behind the Scenes.

Some fair contributor to a New York sporting journal, who apparently enjoys the entree to the theatre back door and the sacred precincts of the dressing-rooms, gives quite an interesting account of the scenes that ensue behind the curtain after the performance. The curtain having fallen, she says, upon the usual vivacious picture, and to the usual tumultuous applause, Flora Fansee and the rest of the dashing burlesquers make all possible speed to reach their dressing rooms. Flora, whose boots preclude the possibility of rapid movement, when unobserved by an audience, reaches the last of those who occupy it. Hurriedly removing her waist, belt and "trunks," she throws a skirt over her head, and, having secured it round her waist, she loosens her "tights" and sits down to remove her shoes. Several of her room-mates being engaged in the same occupation, there is quite a concert of long-breathed "Ohs!" of relief in the dressing-room, accompanied by the squeaking of trunk-lids, that are raised in order to deposit the shoes in their proper places for the night. Flora having been relieved of the agony of her shoes, proceeds to denude herself of her tights, which she does by unfastening them at the top, and "skinning" them off—and by "skinning" I mean pulling them off, so that when they have been removed, they are turned inside out.

There are one or two of the girls who do not follow Flora's by taking off their tights. That plump little girl whose dressing-place is next the door, keeps her tights on, and puts her stockings and shoes on over them because she is in a great hurry to get home to-night—as anybody could have known who had noticed how rapidly she took off her waist and put on her skirt, and how she had, as soon as her wig was off and her own hair arranged, immediately put her bonnet on—an action which there is no girl in the room who is not

PREPARED TO SWEAR SAVES TIME!

That tall, stately girl, in the corner of the room, is never in a hurry like the plump little one. Nevertheless, she invariably wears her tights home, having, no doubt, reasons of her own for so doing. The other girls say that if you could follow her home, and into her room, you would see a pair or two of ancle tights made of cotton or merino, and with a strap on the bottom that goes under her foot, resting in the hollow thereof, to hold the tights in position. Those girls further say that, if you were to examine these ancle-tights, you would find that they were lined with lamb's wool, and more thickly in some places than in others. And, finally, these same girls assert that these ancle-tights, with lamb's wool stitched to the inside, are called pads, and that the stately girl wears them, but won't admit it, therefore she won't take off her tights before her companions. They also say that they are strengthened in their belief by the fact the stately girl will never wear slippers on the stage although her foot and ankle are perfection. They declare that who wears slippers, the end of the pads can be seen resting on the instep, as can also the shape of the strap that holds the pad in place; and that—to quote the phraseology of the plump girl who has a wicked black eye and talks slang—to betray such facts to the world "would give her away dead."

Flora having divested herself, as stated, of her tights, carefully rolls them up and puts them in her trunk. She might, perhaps, like to hang them up, but mayhap there are strange supernumeraries in the theatre, and tights cost from fourteen to twenty dollars a pair. The rolling up of the tights is absolutely necessary to prevent the flossy strands of which they are made catching in anything that might pull one of those same strands out, and so leave a long bare mark on that side of the tights. This is called "having a ladder in your tights," and is considered quite objectionable. After putting away her tights, and putting on her shoes and stockings, Flora enrobes herself in one or two garments, the names of which it is needless to mention, and then stands in front of her glass, and taking off her wig, proceeds to

WASH OFF HER "MAKE-UP."

If the weather be cold, Flora merely rubs some cold cream on the end of a towel, and, rubbing it on her face, removes all traces of make-up entirely. The reason for doing this is that if the fair-skinned Flora were to use soap and water to take off her make-up, and were to go out into the cold air shortly after, her beautiful face would all be chapped; whereas the cold cream removes the chalk, rouge, and cosmetic, equally as well as soap and water, and, in addition, prevents the skin from chapping, be the wind ever so keen and cold. The make-up taken off, Flora commences to fix her hair, and as most of the other girls are doing the same thing, conversation for a brief interval reigns. To judge by the dialogue, there has never been the same number of girls in the profession, who have done so well under such adverse circumstances, as they have that night. Flora asserts that the leader of the orchestra is a muff, and it is only through her own talent that her songs went off even passably well. The stately lady complains that not a single person gave her a cue, and two or three times her lines were spoiled because others refused to take their cues from her, thus making her look as though she were stuck. Another lady murmurs over the fact that the comedian, by the destruction of that didn't get a laugh from anybody, cut her out of her best speech, in which she was sure of a round. The black-eyed, plump little girl is not heard, for the reason that she has long since got dressed and gone home.

The ladies having arranged their hair, each to her own satisfaction, they all proceed to arrange the clothes in their respective trunks, preparatory to locking them up for the night. Their manner of doing this is different. Two of the ladies, of whom Flora is one, are content as long as their dresses are put into the trunk. It don't matter to them how they are put in; it is sufficient if the lid will close. The stately lady, on the contrary, will not be satisfied if each separate article is not laid just in its proper place and position; and she folds her things and places them as carefully and neatly as though she were packing up for a voyage to Europe. The little black-eyed, plump lady scorns the use of a trunk, despite the fact that she has the largest one in the room. She merely kicks her things under her dressing-place, or lets them

LIE WHERE THEY DROP.

The idea of carrying home dirty towels or clothes never enters her head; and some day, after paying a visit to her washer-woman, and almost accusing that hard-working female of having stolen her clothes, she finds the things she thought were stolen all in a heap in some corner of the dressing-room. Hastily doing them up in an awkward bundle, she dispatches the bootjack with it to her laundress, and immediately commences to apply herself to the accumulation of just such another heap.

The different ideas of neatness entertained by the girls is displayed at their dressing places as noticeably as within their boxes. The little plump beauty disdains to hide the fact that she and neatness are strangers, and displays the same by the carelessness that rules around her. Vermilion and flake-white are mixed together in the same box. Hair-pins, old combs, and cosmetic stains ornament the old newspaper laid on the shelf underneath her looking-glass. Powder puffs are glued on to the cosmetique noir, while ground-up chalk, burned cork, spangles dropped from her dresses, and a dozen other like objects, point out when "making up" and dressing. The stately lady, however, in a manner balances the carelessness of the other one by her extreme punctiliousness in all matters connected with her toilet. A neat linen dressing-cloth is laid on her dressing-place. The rouge, the cosmetic and whitings, each have a place of their own. No stains of hands soil the purity of the dressing-cloth, and each pin has its proper place in the cushion. Flora oscillates between the two extremes, sometimes being neat, even to primness, and again so careless and slovenly as to elicit a remark from the plump little lady. The habits of the remaining lady who dresses in the room it is impossible to discover, inasmuch as she never was known to possess any materials whatever for make-up, and invariably beautifies herself by levying from her companions, whose towels, combs, brushes and powder rags she uses with the utmost freedom. As to water, she would employ every water-jug and wash bowl in the room for her accommodation, if she wasn't vigilantly watched.

FORCED CONTRIBUTIONS

Little remains for Flora to do but put on her dress and cloak and hat. This she quickly accomplishes, bids the other ladies good-night, and runs out, giving a glance at the call board to make sure there is no rehearsal in the morning. Before the stately lady (who will not go out in the street until her kid-gloves are buttoned, and her hat sets "just so") has turned on the gas in the dressing-room, Flora is at home, partaking of a light supper, and rehearsing the gossip of the theatre to her mother (whom, good girl, she supports,) to which tattle that estimable old lady listens with infinite relish and enjoyment.

—Eighty-eight ladies have entered Michigan University. One reason why this institution is so popular is that the hazing is done by the lady students blindfolding the young men and then kissing them. A handsome young man named Gates, from Worcester, Mass., was nearly smothered in this manner recently.

—This is the pathetic appeal of a disgusted Englishman: "We are going to war again to soundly thrash the Ashantees, and probably put a penny or twopence more on to the income tax. Let me ask them, why not arbitrate with these misguided niggers. Get Quashee to Geneva, as we did Jonathan, and arbitrate."

—A Providence man got so drunk the other day that he actually believed he was obliged to go before the court without the preliminary formalities of an arrest and formal complaint. He accordingly hunted up the judge, pleaded guilty, and begged off on a promise not to do so again.

—Sarah Jane DeFoe said that she would be married in her old Kentucky home in spite of her father, and some men tied him to the sofa, the crowd walked in, and while he gnashed his teeth Sarah Jane was wed.

—A man in Placerville, Cal., when asked by a Saratoga waiter what he would have for breakfast, replied, "Well I rather guess I'll just flop my lip over a chicken."

Daily Chronicle.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1873.

Off for Europe!

The Graphic balloon left Brooklyn, N. Y., for Europe, Monday morning, at 9.19. Messrs. Donaldson, Ford and Lunt went in it, taking with them a boat. The balloon when last seen was going in a north-easterly direction, which would carry it to the Atlantic ocean via Cape Cod. Should they continue in the same direction and go fast enough they might land in Norway.

Readables.

A special to the World, dated London, Oct. 5, says that Thiers has given consent to the proposed alliance between the Republicans and Imperialists, or Bonapartists, as the only means of preventing the restoration of a monarchy with Count de Chambord as Henry V. The new party is constantly receiving new accessions to its ranks.

Some of our Newburyport neighbors thought levity came in in the wrong place, recently, when a Portsmouth organization supped there and a member ejaculated—instead of the usual "Amen?"—the more modern expression: "Good Enough!" at the close of the blessing asked!

The hay crop of Maine this season is said to be worth $30,000,000.

George L. Wentworth, a Dover lawyer, was arrested on Friday for blackmailing. He has appeared as counsel for one A. C. Hadley and wife, in aiding them to get money from third parties under false pretensions. The three were brought before the municipal court and after examination ordered to recognize each in $1000 bonds for trial before the supreme court.

Peake, Opdyke & Co., one of the largest dry goods houses on Broadway, New York, suspended on Saturday. Much excitement was caused in that trade, but no serious consequences followed or are anticipated.

English editorial writers should take a turn at American journalism to get their lazy notions taken out of them. Writing one leading article a day is a feat accomplished by but few, while most of the editors on leading journals furnish but three a week.

We give the following paragraph for what it is worth: "The most interesting literary discovery of the day has recently been made at Paris in the shape of an unfinished manuscript by DeFoe, the author of "Robinson Crusoe." It is entitled "Six Months in the Air," and describes the supposed wanderings and experience of a soul after its separation from the body. The narrative is said to be in the most graphic style of the celebrated author, and has been purchased by a wealthy American for $2,500."

Parson Talmage suggests that if they could roll "Old Hundred" through Wall street the panic would end. Wouldn't Five-Twenties answer the purpose just as well?

At a camp-meeting at Middleton, Lake county, Cal., a lady, under great excitement, and while shouting and clapping her hands, declared she wanted to die then and there. Her wish was granted, for she almost instantly fell back, and died in a few minutes.

The Greatest Cattle Raiser in the World.

[Kentucky Yeoman.]

Samuel W. Allen, a native of Kentucky, who has resided from infancy in Texas, and is now a citizen of Harris County, in that State, is the largest cattle raiser in the world. He is the owner of the following ranches: 1. Ranch Grande—the largest on the continent—embraces an area eighty miles long and forty wide, and lies between the Colorado and Nevada rivers, extending through the three counties of Matagorda, Lavacca, and Jackson. On this one ranch alone Mr. Allen herds 120,000 cattle. 2. The Home Ranch, situated in Harris County, pastures 70,000, and includes an area of a little less than half that of the Ranch Grande. 3. The San Bernardo Ranch is in Fort Bend County, and pastures 35,000, making a grand total of two hundred and fifty thousand (250,000) head of cattle owned and handled by one man, and subsisted and fattened upon the native grasses and spontaneous growth of a comparatively small section of the great territory of Texas. Besides this prodigious number of cattle, there are 3,000 horses which are kept constantly in use by herders and branders, of whom at least 400 are employed by Mr. Allen at good wages. At a low estimate of $10 per head, the value of Mr. Allen's cattle may be put down at $2,500,000; of his horses at $60,000; making a total valuation of $2,560,000. Sixty thousand calves are branded by him every year to keep up the supply. These amounts represent the capital of the chief meat purveyor of beef for the city of New Orleans and the adjacent counties of the gulf coast, without estimating the value of his lands, which are more than ducal in extent if not in value.

An Awful Accident.

[Wapello (Iowa) Republican.]

One of the most frightful scenes that men and women are ever called upon to witness occurred at this place Thursday, September 25th, at about half-past 5 o'clock P. M.—the spectacle of a human being descending from a great height with great rapidity, with the certainty that in a moment he will be dashed to pieces.

Prof. John H. Boley has been making ascensions in Illinois and in this State recently in a hot-air balloon. The manner of inflating it is as follows: He digs a trench some two or three feet long and two or three feet deep and wide. This is filled with dry wood and other combustible matter, and covered over. At the mouth the fire is set, and a large barrel with a sieve in each end to keep out cinders and covered with cement to prevent burning, constitute the chimney at the outer end. Over this chimney the mouth of the balloon is placed to catch the heat as it rises. The mouth of the balloon is secured to a strong wooden hoop six or eight feet in diameter, and to this hoop is fastened the ropes that descend to the bar upon which the aeronaut stands in his giddy flight. He did not use a basket, as is usual. During the process of inflation the flames came up through the barrel, and frequently ten or twelve feet into the body of the balloon. When the balloon is full, and just before starting, it is customary to have some trusty man enter the mouth of the balloon and place a cover over the top of the barrel, so as to prevent danger from fire. His cousin, James R. Spence, who travels with him, usually performs this duty. Occasionally Mr. Boley has started without this precaution, but it is always hazardous, and once before his balloon caught fire, burning slowly without blazing, and he got down in safety. Thursday Mr. Spence was unwell and could not bear the intense heat of the balloon, and the ascent was attempted without the precaution of covering the top of the barrel. The sickening scene that followed was the unfortunate result.

The wind was blowing briskly from the south, and it was not prudent to make the attempt, but the Professor was to receive some pecuniary aid from the Agricultural Society, and one or two of the Board of Managers had given their assent to the appropriation only on the ground that one of the ascensions should be made that day. Hence the inducement, in part, at least, to brave the peril. Besides, Mr. Boley was a brave, conscientious man, and he felt that he must redeem his promise to make the ascension.

No sooner had the balloon been let go than, to the horror and dismay of every one, it was discovered to be on fire near the mouth, and the Professor, instead of standing on his bar, was holding to it with his hands and dangling below. It was a fearful sight, that sent an indescribable shudder through the crowd. There was no outcry, but a sort of smothered groan that was more appalling. Women sank to the ground, or hid their eyes, or burst into tears, and men held their breath in awful suspense.

Mr. Boley did not appear to notice the fire until he had gained an altitude of a hundred or more feet, and then it was too late to let go. Besides, his assistants say the balloon was not fully inflated, and not one of them thought it would rise so high. But up it shot, and he held on to his frail support, the flames every moment cutting away the canvas above the hoop, and thus hurrying the instant that would launch him into eternity.

There were long ropes attached to the top of the balloon, that had been used during inflation to control it, and one of these swinging out over the sphere came near him several times, and he attempted to grasp it. Could he have done so he would have had one other means of support; besides, his weight on this would have inverted the balloon, turned the burning end up, and, though he might have descended with uncomfortable rapidity, it is probable that the volume of canvas would have saved him. But he missed his grasp and lost his hat in the effort, which came whirling down in advance. A moment more and the canvas parted, and he came darting through the space feet foremost, like an arrow. Who can forget the sight that witnessed it? The fall occupied but a few seconds, but they seemed all too long.

He fell in a stubble field of low ground nearly a half mile from the starting point, coming down on his feet, with such force as to drive them in the ground a foot, and breaking the bones of his legs in many places and thrusting their ragged ends through the flesh. The body, head and arms were not visibly injured. The upper end of the balloon, shortly after he left it, turned inside out and fell, a burning mass a quarter of a mile away.

Boley moved to Allensville, Vinton County, Ohio, leaving that place June 25th, for Aledo, Ill. His age was about 31. He had made twenty-eight ascensions before coming West and has made twelve since. He leaves a wife and four children in destitute circumstances. His wife has been staying in Ohio, and the oldest children are now there. Recently she became so uneasy about him that she felt she must come soon or never see him again. She was here and entreated him several times during the inflation not to make the ascension, as she felt he would never come down alive, and at last, when everything was ready, she bade him adieu and told him to kiss the baby for the last time. Her presentiment seemed to have been too true.

—A sea captain invited to meet the committee of a society for the evangelization of Africa, when asked, "Do the subjects of the King of Dahomey keep Sunday?" replied, "Yes, and everything else they can lay their hands on."

—A clergyman recently asked a girl concerning her intended. "Is he, in his conversation and carriage, a consistent Christian?" She replied, "In his conversation he is very pious, but I never saw him in his carriage."

Ah Too and His Pal.

[San Francisco Call.]

Ah Too and his pal, whose celestial cognomen is known, yesterday morning emerged from their opium-perfumed rat-hole into the misty darkness of Fire Alley, and started upon their regular weekly hunt for "burglarizable" places. Out of Fire Alley into the Street of Burning Prayers they shuffled until they reached the Alley of a Thousand Perfumes. Here they held a council replete with burglarious intentions.

"Hast the keys which the outside barbarian chooses to designate skeleton?" asked the pal.

"Hast," was the laconic reply of Ah Too.

"Possessest thou the necessary iron bar, termed by our pale-faced prototypes a jimmy?" again queried the prudent pal.

"Possessest," was the second answer of the almost speechless Ah Too.

"Then 'tis well, and we glide like the nomadic rodent to our quarry. Let's away."

"Let's," was the growl emitted by Ah Too.

From the Alley of a Thousand Perfumes, rendered historical as it is by a hundred Mongolian romances, and endeared as it is to the heart of the exile of far Cathay by the fragrant opium that may be there obtained, the two midnight prowlers issued, and found themselves on the thoroughfare called Dupont. Here again they paused in their scraping flight and listened intently. Not a sound broke the tomb-like stillness, and the flickering gas-light on the corner threw but a faint glimmer of ghostly illumination upon the heavy fog that came drifting down from the frowning hights of Russian Hill. Satisfied that the police were safely stowed away in neighboring coffee saloons and feed stores, the two professionals bore down on Clay street, up which they glided until they stood in front of the mansion where Mr. Harris constructs gentlemen's outer garments, on Clay street, below Stockton. They gazed upon the facade and the foundation of the habitation with that professional gaze with which burglars generally regard points of entrance. They made a combined assault upon the door, and were a moment Mandarins of all they surveyed. Three dozen coats, two dozen pairs of pantaloons, and sundry other goods lying around loose, they appropriated and stowed away in their capacious blouses. About five o'clock they had cleaned out the entire establishment, and having separated, were shuffling back to Fire Alley. The pal probably reached his destination, but Ah Too did not. On the corner of Jackson and Dupont streets he met the Videocq of the Chinese Quarter, Rogers, D. O. T. C. A. O.

"Hi, John!" was the greeting of Rogers.

"No sabe," replied Ah Too.

"No? Well, I rather think we'll sabe pretty soon. Come here, you wanderer on the night's plutonian shore."

"No sabe," reiterated Ah Too, and this time he probably spoke the truth.

"What have you got there, old Chopsticks?" asked the officer in his cheeriest tones.

"No hab got nothing. What for you allee time foolee Chinaman, Logers. Chinamen heap plenty lonest man. You too muchee foolee him. He bime by plenty steal allee same. Levenge! You sabe?"

Rogers stood aghast at the inordinate cheek of this emigrant from Macao, and had hardly enough strength to "go through" the thief. The surplus coats and pantaloons on his person induced the officer to escort Ah Too to the city prison, and, as the owner has identified the property, a charge of burglary will probably be entered against him.

Shrewd Pigeon.

A correspondent writes as follows: Having occasion to want for my pony to be harnessed at an inn a few years since, my attention was directed by a gentleman (a resident of the neighborhood) with whom I was acquainted to the strange conduct of a pigeon. A number of them were feeding on a few oats that had accidentally let fall while fixing the nose-bag on a horse standing at bait. Having finished all the grain at hand, a large one rose, flapped its wings furiously, flew directly at the horse's eyes, causing that animal to toss his head, and in doing so, of course shake out more corn. I saw this several times repeated; in fact whenever the supply had been exhausted. I leave it to your readers to consider the train of thoughts that must have passed through that pigeon's brain before it adopted the clever method above narrated, of stealing the horse's provender.

—Jones dropped in at a closed bar and purchased a glass of his favorite beverage. As he munched the customary clove he observed that the bar-tender had returned him short change. "Well," said the gentleman of the shirt-front and diamond pin, "We'll owe it to you." "But what security can you give me?" asked the wary Jones. "Supposing you take a lean on the bar," was the reply.

The Tonic of the Period.

This is a trying season to persons deficient in stamina and out of health. To rally their physical energies by the most approved artificial means is a duty they owe to themselves. Foremost among the tonics and alteratives of the age stands HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. It is a vegetable stimulant and corrective, against which no tenable objection can be urged. There is no risk in recommending it as the best preparation in existence for renovating an enfeebled and broken down system. The most valuable medicinal products that nature has ever yielded to botanical research are blended in this famous elixir, and its stimulating basis is recognized in our public hospitals as the purest of all the varieties of distilled liquors. For general debility, nervous weakness, dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism, billiousness and intermittent fevers it is a positive specific.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other machine. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuble is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Local Matters.

A Christian Act.

It is pleasant to record such a practical example of charity as that which occurred in this city on Saturday evening. Mr Benj. P. Chase, commonly known as "Father Chase," was the recipient of a purse of $175 from his friends to indemnify him for the loss of the money of which he was robbed by Henderson and Varney in April last. The old man was exceedingly grateful for this friendly remembrance and we doubt not that it will prove timely in relieving him from the wants which inevitably creep on with declining years. This act of these donors is a pleasant contrast with that of the villains who committed the robbery.

Just Recognition.

Those who visited the State Fair, last week, and called at the Secretary's office, will echo the following from the Manchester Union: For ourselves we desire to express our obligations to J. Horace Kent of Portsmouth, the correspondent of the Boston Traveller, assistant Secretary at the Fair, for many favors rendered us while on duty at the grounds; every assistance which was in his power to give was cheerfully afforded, and in the many hours we spent in his office we never heard a hasty or ungentlemanly expression from his lips, though he was often interrupted with questions not relating to his duty; we make this acknowledgment, knowing that every one of the thousands who did business with him will endorse our words.

Laconics.

One hundred and seventeen years ago to-day, Daniel Fowle commenced the publication of the NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE.

The Sunday law was so well enforced on the 5th that no arrest was made during the twenty-four hours ending with Monday.

Mr. James Hennessey, who has been in the employ of E. F. Sise & Co. for many years, fell down the cellar stairs at home, Saturday evening, mistaking his way, and died Monday of his injuries.

Mr. Pearson and Miss Miller have very pleasant school and music rooms corner of Market and Daniel streets,—entrance on Daniel. Miss Miller commenced her classes Monday; and Mr. Pearson announces his juvenile singing school for Wednesday afternoon next.

A well-known expressman of this city narrowly escaped injury while driving through the streets, Monday. Striking the horse suddenly, the animal sprang and broke the whiffle-tree at both ends. The driver went over the dasher and down to the horses' heels—but that sensible animal stopped and saved us a more serious item.

All the animals sent to the State Fair from Portsmouth were awarded premiums. Frank Jones took first premium, for best show of oxen owned by one man, and second premium on town ox teams. Frank W. Miller took second premium for 2-year old colts, with his Fearnaught filly "Junie"; and second premium for matched horses, with his pair of yearling colts, "Jilly" Fearnaught, and "Lady Buff," driven to harness.

Our Girls at School.

The Boston Journal of Chemistry says: "The summer vacation having passed, the school children are seen upon the streets, with their satchels, and piles of heavy books bound by leather straps, after the fashion of securing clothing needed in late summer travels. These books are what are known as "text books," and are carried to and fro between the school room and the homes of the children, for the purpose of enabling them to study between school hours. Not long since we met a group of young girls returning from school, each with a package of books so heavy that we thought of sending to their relief a job wagon. Here were girls just at the time of life when growth is rapid, and when the vital powers are taxed to develop and bring into healthy action all the functions of the body, tugging home books for evening study. Is it right thus to burden our girls? It is not so much the load of books that excites pity and apprehension, but the knowledge that they contain the hard lessons which are to be studied and puzzled over, during hours which should be devoted to physical exercise and recreation. Reader, have you girls at school? If you have, may we ask if you know much about the nature of the studies, or the number they are pursuing? Have you carefully watched the effect of the school regulations and studies upon the health of your daughters? if you have not, you are neglecting one of the most important duties which can possibly engage your attention. Our girls, for some reason, do not possess that robust health which is essential to their happiness and usefulness in life; they in general are not strong enough and well enough to fill the high positions of wives and mothers, for which nature designed them. Their nervous organizations are so delicate and sensitive, and their nutrition so defective, that if they struggle into womanhood all the joys of life must be turned into sorrows. What is the reason for this deplorable physical condition of our girls? It is unquestionably due in a great measure to our vicious, absurd system of school education. The schools are ruining the health of our girls. They are overworked, they are burdened with too many studies. Our competitive system keeps them in a high state of excitement, they are struggling to keep up with their classes, they are looking forward to a time when they will graduate,—be put in white dresses and blue ribbons some hot day in July, and in the presence of an admiring crowd receive at the hands of a trustee or school-committee-man a diploma, certifying that they have mastered philosophy, history, the higher mathematics, Latin, Greek, the modern languages, etc. School-days in this age are days of excitement; the mind is crammed, the body neglected. In our view, the sooner our school system is broken down, or radically changed, the better—better for our boys, immeasurably better for our girls.

Two Adventurous Youths.

[Greenbriar (Va.) Independent.]

In Layfayette county, near the line of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, there is a famous rattlesnake den, which has always been a source of terror and fear to those who have looked over its precincts, as well as to those who have ever heard of the fearful revelations regarding the size and the number of the venomous reptiles which infest this poison-stricken cavern. In number their name is legion, and in age, size and downright radicalism, there are no figures or names to represent them.

A short time since two daring young men resolved to make an experiment by way of forming some insight as regarded their numbers, and clothing themselves from head to foot in suits of thick buckskin (such as our friend Donnelly uses to make his best gloves,) with large, sharp knives in hand, they sallied forth into the poison-infested region. They entered, cutting and slashing, the snakes rattling, hissing and striking at their adversaries, and when these enterprising youths landed on the other side their clothes were a sight to see!

As a snake would strike, his fangs would be deeply and firmly implanted in the buckskin, and off would go his head by a well-directed blow by the hand and knife. By making a fair count it was found that 240 snake heads were attached to the clothes of one of the party, and 100 heads firmly attached to the other. More would have been secured, but it was not a good day for snakes. But any one who does not believe the foregoing true story will be convinced of its entire correctness by inquiring at this office for the name of our informant.

—Philadelphia is the twelfth city of the world in the number of its inhabitants, and the first in the number of conveniences which it offers to all classes of working people. The population of London is estimated at 3,252,000; of Paris, 1,684,000; of Pekin, 1,648,000; of Jeddo, 1,554,000; of Canton, 1,236,000; of Constantinople, 1,075,000; of Calcutta, 1,000,000; of New York, 942,292; of Berlin, 828,000; of Vienna, 825,000; of Bombay, 816,000; and of Philadelphia, 674,022. Of the thirty-five cities of the world having over 300,000 inhabitants, six are in China, five in the United States, viz.: New York, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, St. Louis and Chicago, five in Great Britain, four in India, three in France, three in Japan, and one each in Turkey, Prussia, Austria, Russia, Siam, Brazil, Spain and Egypt.

—Glass bonnets have appeared. They are formed of a tissue woven of fine glass threads, and may be said to be the glass of fashion fitted to the mould of form. But ladies who wear them must deny themselves the pleasure of criticising the neighbors, on the principle that it is dangerous for those who live in glass houses to throw stones.

—A French writer says that a cat is the only animal which is allowed entire liberty. We chain our dogs, we put birds into cages; but our cats go and come as they please.

—"Heroism is cheap," said a man the other day. "What the world wants is common sense."

English Bathing Drawers.

HAM & CO., have just received a lot of Gentlemen's English Bathing Drawers.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—A new use for patent pills has been discovered. A farmer living in a Kansas village was abruptly visited by robbers one night not long ago, and having a gun and powder, but no shot, loaded with a box of fever pills, and blazed away. The result was as satisfactory as though the rascals had swallowed the pills. One of them was killed outright, and another dangerously wounded.

—Since nothing but good is to be said of the dead, the following will do perhaps:—"Louise Muhlbach is dead. She wrote more fiction in her histories or more history in her fictions than any woman who ever used up paper and ink."

—A man in Boston spoiled a new hat, and nearly stove in his head by attempting to ascend a flight of cellar stairs which had been closed up while he was away from home. His hat looked like a discouraged accordeon.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.
Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.
It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.
It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.
By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.
As a dressing, nothing has been found so efficacious or desirable.
Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE, FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUPS

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, scarching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.
R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY!
THE GREAT REMEDY FOR
CONSUMPTION!
And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all
LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of
COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &C.

CONSUMPTION
CURED
By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties. ☞

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE. SIX BOTTLES, $5.

Seaside Sorrows.

[Lawrence American.]

In an unfortunate moment I married. That was two years ago; and the strange part of it is, that I never knew it was unfortunate until this summer. I am not in the habit of writing for newspapers, and as a natural consequence am unusually flurried now that I have made up my mind to tell you all that I have suffered. I don't mean all—that would be impossible. It may seem a little strange that I should fly to you with my misery; the fact is I want to sound a warning; I want to sound it everywhere, in every land, east and west, north and south, above and below, as far as enterprise can send a newspaper. I only wish this story of my wrongs could go up in the "balloon." Who knows but up there, where nobody but Prof. Wise and two or three more plucky individuals have dared to penetrate, there may not be found some just such poor wretches as I? If they board the nearest planet there certainly will be. Oh! for a trumpet whose tone could vibrate to the remotest ring of Saturn, and wake up persecuted husbands all along the road! As I said before, I married two years ago, and as I didn't say before, I am a christian gentleman. I belong to a church in the plousest city under the sun, and to an organization no member of which ever thinks of such a thing as taking a drink where it can be remarked upon, or playing a game of poker without first locking the door, and knowing their man. Nobody can say that I ever taught any fellow to play a game, not even billiards, harmless as we all know that game to be. I never led a human being astray, and I never expected to be led off the track; but I have been, and by a woman too, and that woman my own wife. Why, sir, that female has caused me to use language which has made my blood run cold in my veins as I think of it. I am afraid I shall not be forgiven either; for the same anathemas roll over and over inside of me as often as I think of her.

Last May I found that my wife had engaged a room at the hotel, Long Branch. I was a good deal indignant then, for she knew that I was utterly opposed to all watering places. When I remonstrated, she said:

"Last summer you had your way. I stayed at home and sweltered in the city to gratify your whim, if I know it, I shall never do it again."

What was a good-natured man to do under such circumstances?

I sought my pastor and asked his advice.

"Consult me," he answered with a groan, "on any other subject, and I will do my best to help you; but let me say that in all my experience I never saw but one way to manage such a case as yours, and that is to let the woman have her own way."

He didn't say that he had had similar trouble, but the story told by that groan was enough to satisfy me. I resolved to profit by what he told me, and accordingly fell in with her Long Branch notion.

"I can't be with you much," said I, as I strapped her last trunk.

"I didn't expect you could be with me at all," was the singular reply; and then, noticing my look of surprise added—

"How could I, knowing how heartily you detest such places?"

"But," said I, "don't you suppose a husband who loves his wife is capable of making some small sacrifices?"

What do you think she said? Just one word, and then she turned on her heel to the looking glass; that word was—"Bother?"

I felt rather cut up, and when I left her at the boat and turned to drive home alone, I felt more cut up still. She presented her cheek in an indifferent sort of a way, and then turned to her poodle and almost smothered the nasty brute with kisses. The last glimpse I caught of her she had the dog's nose between her two hands, and was rubbing it against the cheek I had kissed as if to scour away the contamination of my touch. I took a solemn oath to wring the neck of that poodle the very first opportunity.

Two weeks after, I found that I could leave business for a few days, and accordingly started for the Branch like a dutiful husband. Arriving at the hotel, I registered my name and inquired for my wife.

"Show this gentleman to Mrs. Bymea's room," said the clerk to a waiter.

We started.

"What's the number of the room?" I inquired of my leader.

"91," said he, as up the stairs and through devious passages we wound.

"Here, Ed." exclaimed a portly gentleman to my guide. "Take this telegram to the office, as quick as you can travel."

"Be back in a minute," said the black witch to me, and he was gone. I looked at the numbers and concluded that if I couldn't find 91, I was a fool. Through another narrow corrridor, then out on to a broader one, and I stood before the door. I turned the knob and walked in. It looked like home there I assure you. Flora's hoop skirt and waist occupied the northeast corner; a few feet from that lay a night gown and dressing sacque; the bed was covered with every description of flummery possible to conceive of; and the bureau was piled to the middle of the mirror with ruffles and laces and ribbons—and false hair—and Beelzebub only knows what. I cleared a chair by the window and sat down to await my wife's entrance. Presently the door of a room just at my left hand opened and in she walked in dishabille. Her back was toward me. What could that be she held in her right hand? A tooth brush for one thing and as true as I live, a whole set of false teeth. This was news, you see! My wife with a mouthful of those dreadful things? I groaned aloud. Said I—

"Flora, how could you deceive me so?"

That woman turned round—opened her awful mouth, and such a shiek as she let out of it I never heard before, and may heaven preserve me from ever hearing again. I watched her! I couldn't help it! My eyes were riveted to the spot. With one dexterous motion the miniature grave stones were transferred to the yawning sepulchre, and then the creature commenced to talk.

"Get out of my room! you horrible man! How dare you invade a lady's privacy?"

I found out I had got into the wrong box as soon as the woman turned her face toward me. It wasn't Flora at all.

Said I mildly:

"I beg your pardon, ma'am; isn't this 91?"

"No," she answered with a jerk—opening the door and standing behind it. Can't you read? This is No. 93; and before I could say another word the door was slammed on my retreating figure with such force as to bring the celestial firmament vividly before my eyes. When I could see straight I took a good look at that 3.

It was as good a 3 as I ever saw in my life, perfect in every respect and uncommonly distinct in coloring. No wonder that woman asked me if I could read. The query in my mind ever since has been, are there periods in our lives when the devil takes command of our destinies, and leads us wherever his infernal will may suggest? That 3 was a 1 when I went in—and when I came out it was as clear and symmetrical a figure 3 as the most practised accountant could make, if he tried for a week. Drunk? No sir, I hadn't taken a drop that day. I found 91 with difficulty, and the miseries of the next three days, together with the final throwing up of the matrimonial sponge, must be left till next time, I suppose on account of room.

I never shall be content until I see it all in print.

Yours all worked up;

BYMEA.

I knocked at 91. No answer. I knocked again. Not a sound. I turned the knob. The door was fastened. Just then a frowzy-headed chambermaid came along with a bunch of keys.

"Who do you want?" said she.

"My wife," said I.

"There is a good many men's wives on this floor," said the girl with an impudent grin. "Which one are you after wanting?"

"Is this Mrs. Bymea's room, or isn't it?" I asked.

"The same," said the hussy without a move.

"Well, she's my wife and I want to go in."

"Oh, indade!" said the jade, unlocking the door. "But you'll not find her, sure. She's in bathing. This is the hour when ladies and gentlemen bathe together."

If 93 looked like home, 91 looked still more so. Nobody but the husband of a fashionable woman can form the least conception of such a place. There wasn't a chair to sit down in, nor a place for the sole of a man's foot.

"Mrs. Bymea uses this for a sitting room," said the chambermaid opening the door of an adjoining apartment.

"The deuce she does," said I, and walked in.

There wasn't any litter there. On the centre table in the middle of the room was a large elegant bouquet, and on the mat beside it a pearl meerschaum case. I unclasped it, and there lay a pipe.

"This is my wife's parlor, is it?" I enquired of the girl as she passed out.

"It is that, sir," she answered.

"Whose pipe is that?"

"Her cousin's, I guess."

"Her cousin's?"

"Yes, sir; the fine, handsome English gentleman that all the ladies is wild over; the lady's own cousin, so she was after telling me."

Flora had a cousin whom I had never seen, and about whom she had talked a good deal. I concluded it wouldn't do to be jealous, though that pipe and that bouquet, and a pair of gloves lying on the mantel piece were anything but reassuring.

"Why don't you go down and have a bath?" continued the girl. "They are all in now, and you'll have time enough if you hurry."

I took the girl's advice and started for the beach. There they were, nearly two or three hundred of them, flopping about and making as much noise as a public school at recess. I tried to pick out Flora as I stood in the sand, dressed in the regulation regimentals. It was no use, so in I went. I had made one mistake that day, and had no notion of making another; but look and see how the devil managed my case:

"Look here, Mrs. Bymea, and see what I can do." I heard a woman say just at my left on the other side of the rope. "I can float."

"So can I," replied Flora; "Charlie taught me yesterday."

"Charlie" was her cousin, of course. He must be her cousin, or she would never speak of him so familiarly, but the cousin I had heard of was called "Ned"—"Cousin Ned." I was sure of that. Still, there was no law against a woman having two cousins. That reflection was so original, and I flattered myself so manly, that I felt very comfortable. Flora was pretty, and fascinating, and bewitching, and coquettish and all that sort of thing; but I was determined that a regiment of cousins should not make me jealous. I started in the direction of my wife's voice. I waited for her to speak again. Sure enough that was her laugh. I made a dive and seized her under the arms, and drew her back upon my shoulder; and then waited a second for a breaker to cover us. Then I kissed her. That 93 woman could scream, but 'pon honor she couldn't hold a candle to this one.

"Shut up;" said I in despair. "It's me! your husband. Don't you know me, John? For heaven's sake stop yelling; what'll folks think?"

Of course I thought 'twas Flora! She was just her size; but I found out my mistake in double quick. A man swam alongside, and with a snort demanded what I meant.

"I beg your pardon," said I, the brine dripping from my hair and nose. "Take her, if she belongs to you! If it's the last word I have to speak I swear I don't want her."

"What the ——— do you mean?" he roared.

"Nothing!" said I; "I thought 'twas my wife, Mrs. Bymea. How's a man going to know who's who, in such a place as this?"

"Come out of this!" said somebody grabbing my arm. That was Flora. No mistake now.

"I never thought, John Bymea, that you were a fool before," she continued in the low tones of concentrated wrath.

"Nor I," I answered in disgust.

"Nobody but an idiot would cut up such a caper as this," she went on, still holding my arm, and heading towards the beach. "What are you here for, any way?"

"To see you," was my husbandly answer.

"Indeed, you have made a pretty botch of it any way."

I wondered what she'd think if she knew of the other botch. Some way it grew funny, and I burst out laughing. The harder I laughed the madder she grew.

"Simpleton!" she muttered. "Great awkward clown! The one thing I can't endure is a fool."

"Where's Cousin Charlie?" I asked, hoping to make something that way.

"He's about his business," she answered with admirable self-possession. "And you would have been about yours, floating out to the ocean, if he'd been here, let me tell you."

"A fighter, eh? on his muscle, is he? I shouldn't be surprised if two could play at that game!"

Then she laughed; and the harder she laughed the madder I grew. The tables were turned you see.

"Where are your biceps located, John?" she snickered. "I didn't know the members of the Young Men's Christian Association ever boasted of their muscle! How you have improved," and my wife's silvery laugh rang out clear and tantalizing.

"I go this way," she went on. "Do try, John, to get into the right dressing-room. If anything should happen I should be obliged to suspect that you are more wicked than ignorant."

I made no more mistakes that day; but the situation was unbearable. I was obliged to get another room, Flora declaring that two could not dress in her's and that if I insisted upon remaining there she would remove her traps. There wasn't room enough to turn round when she was alone; I said I could dress in the parlor. This proposition was almost indignantly scouted.

"You should have sent me word that you was coming," was her unanswerable argument, and I found myself banished to a little room under the roof, with only a yard of space in which to stand erect.

That day's dinner is indelibly stamped upon my memory.

"I will see the head waiter, and ask him if he can give you a seat next us," she said, as we entered the dining-room.

"Us," said I.

"Yes, us, Mr. Bymea."

She spoke in a low confidential tone to the waiter, and when I saw the wretch bite his lips to keep from laughing I could have knocked his brains out.

"Here if you please," said he, pulling out a chair next the head of the table, while Flora settled herself directly opposite me.

"Why not here?" I inquired pointing to a vacant place at the head.

"That is Charlie's seat," said my wife, "He'll be here in a minute."

"But don't you think it will look a good deal better, to say nothing of my being more comfortable, if I occupy this seat," I asked in a whisper going round to Flora's side.

"If you had sent me word that you were coming, I could have arranged things in better shape, but if folks will pop in Paul Pry fashion, they must take what they find ready for them."

I tipped back the forbidden chair, and seated myself. In a moment the head waiter was upon me.

"This is the Harristo seat," said that functionary."

"But I prefer it," I replied.

"That don't make no difference," he answered. "He's had this seat the whole season and it's his; I shall be much obliged if you will get up, sir."

These were his words; his tone said plainly—"If you don't move yourself, I shall move you."

I concluded to let him try it.

He started for the office.

"You are going to fight it out are you?" said Flora.

"Yes, ma'am," I answered with emphasis.

"I will give you one minute to take the seat assigned you," she went on, with a face as pale as death. "A keen sense of justice you must have to be willing to appropriate another man's property, and a keen sense of decency too; to raise a rumpus in a hotel."

"Yes, ma'am, but I want you to understand that neither you nor your Charlie can impose upon me with impunity."

"Will you take the seat opposite?" she continued.

"I will not, I answered. At that moment a tall man stood between us. Flora rose and saying something in a low tone, took his arm, and left the dining-room. I didn't see that woman again until ten o'clock that evening, when I met her promenading with a stranger. Her dressing room was locked all that time, and no answer given to my repeated demands for entrance.

I was bound to make a bold stand. I approached her.

"The next dance is the Lancers," I remarked. "And I shall expect you to dance with me, Flora."

"Indeed?" elevating her eyebrows. "That dance and every other is appropriated."

"By whom?"

"By gentlemen," this with a withering inflection.

The music struck up, and I had the satisfaction of seeing my wife sail gracefully through a favorite dance with another man, and it was another man the whole evening. I made half a dozen ineffectual attempts to take her by surprise, and finally retired to my wife's sitting room to wait for her.

About two o'clock, I heard a voice outside. I waited for her to enter.

"I wish you would let me send you up some champagne, Flora," I heard a man say.

"Truly, Charlie, I don't want a bit," said my wife in her most dulcet tones. "It invariably makes my head ache in the morning."

"Bye, bye," said her companion.

"Bye, bye," said Flora, and in she went at the other door. I waited a moment and then demanded admittance.

"You can't come in, John Bymea," she protested. "And if I ever have anything to do with you in this world, may I drop dead before your face and eyes. To begin with, you are a fool, and to end with, you are an idiot, and I have grown to hate the very sight of you, and besides all this you are a hog."

"Let me in," said I. "I'll give you just five minutes to open this door."

I sat down by the table, and took out my watch, one, two, three, four, five; no sound.

"Once more, Flora, will you open this door?" No answer. In I went. Did my eyes deceive me? Could this be the place of elegant litter I had entered the day before? A bed, a bureau, a wardrobe, three chairs and a wash-stand greeted my expectant vision. Flora, dog and four trunks had vacated. I rushed to the office. Proprietor was asleep. Clerk knew nothing about it, except that Mrs. Bymea had paid her bills the evening previous. I couldn't get anything out of anybody, and I have not laid eyes on my wife since. I went to my pastor on my return, told him all about it, and asked him what I had better do.

"Do," said he, "do nothing. You don't know what it is to be cursed with a wife who is always threatening to leave you and never goes. Some men have to endure that. A woman who can get up and get in the manner of Mrs. Bymea, inspires my respect. No tears, no sniveling, no snooping, no sulking, nothing but a straight up and down line of conduct. Better so, Bymea, better so."

"Some men live in a hell upon earth all their lives." Of course he couldn't by any possibility allude to himself, for just then his wife entered and said:

"Just as I thought, Pa, sitting in the draught. If you get any more cold, you'll not be able to preach, dear," and down went the window.

"There's a wife for you," said I with enthusiasm, as she went out. "They don't make such women nowadays."

"Don't they?" he answered abstractedly, and up went the window again.

"My wife is so careful of me," he continued, "that sometimes, Bymea, I expect to go back to bibs and belly bands. There's freedom in fresh air, and I like it."

How delightful to be taken such care of. I don't think he appreciated her as I should. I suppose it's always so. I have told you the whole story, now what would you do if you were in my place?

Yours forlorn;

BYMEA.

An Unexpected Bill.

[Amoka (Minn.) Republican.]

A few days since a well dressed couple in the prime of life stopped at a hotel in a neighboring town, and sending for a justice of the peace, informed that functionary that they wished to be married. The justice said "All right," and inquired their names. After being told it struck him that he had performed the same service for the lady before. Upon inquiring if such was the case, the lady said she had been married previously. "Have you a bill from your former husband?" asked Mr. Justice. "Yes," she replied. "I have a bill." This being satisfactory, the ceremony was performed, and the couple declared "man and wife." As they were about departing the justice, who had never seen a "bill of divorce" and having a strong desire to behold the document, thought this an excellent opportunity to satisfy his curiosity. He, therefore, said to the lady: "Have you the bill with you?" "Oh yes," she replied. "Have you any objections to allowing me to see the bill?" said our friend. "None whatever, she replied, stepping to the door and calling to a little boy some three or four years of age, she said, "Here, Bill, come here quick, here is a gentleman that wishes to see you." The gentleman wilted.

Up in a Balloon.

The balloon expedition which started from Brooklyn for Europe, Monday morning, very nearly had a fatal termination. Prof. King assisted in its inflation and the gas was shut off when 300,000 feet had been let in. Messrs. Donaldson, Lunt and Ford took passage, carrying with them a life boat and forty days' provisions. The stay cable was cut and the monster air vessel bounded upward with great velocity, the drag-rope ripping through the grass with a whizzing sound. The balloon went directly north until it was a mile high, then deflected toward the east, and then north-east. Reaching Connecticut, it beat a train of cars going from Ansonia to Seymour, and its speed was estimated at one mile a minute! Just after cutting loose, a carrier pigeon was thrown, 2000 feet from the ground. Another was let out a mile high, forty-five minutes afterward, and both arrived home at River-cliff together, in less than two hours after the ascension, but were so frightened that they were caught with difficulty. The messages sent by the pigeons were to the effect that Lunt was engaged in blowing a horn, Donaldson had been singing "Do they miss me at home," and all were jolly—the scenery being of magnificent grandeur.

The aeronauts started in good weather but encountered a storm in Litchfield county, Conn., about noon, three hours after their ascension. Passing over a mountain, they entered a cloud in a valley and the balloon came to a stand still in a pouring rain, being shaken occasionally by a gust of wind. The storm increased and the balloon was driven high in air with great velocity and then down again toward the earth, spinning over the tops of trees. This was more than human nature could stand and Prof. Donaldson gave the order for all to jump together when near the ground. He and Ford did so when thirty feet from the ground, but Lunt was not quick enough. Donaldson and Ford escaped serious injury but were considerably strained. The balloon, relieved of their weight, went up into the clouds again with Lunt clinging to the ropes. It spun around frightfully and he endeavored to let out the gas by pulling the valve-cord, but it was entangled and would not work. Suddenly, tree-tops appeared and he caught a high limb, falling through the branches to the ground, unhurt. The balloon went a mile further and was captured in a sadly demoralized condition. Its occupants had landed near the town of New Canaan, Conn., where they were comfortably cared for, afterward returning to New York.

The rails are being laid on the Nashua & Rochester Railroad, between Rochester and Epping, at the rate of half a mile a day, and it is expected the road will be opened to Epping in December.

A shoemaker named Frederick Lane, who has been employed in Robert Oliver's shoe shop in Nashua for three or four weeks, was choked to death with a piece of beefsteak as large as a man's hand, that he was attempting to swallow on Monday. He had been intoxicated for several days.

The excitement over the trials of working cattle at the State fair at Manchester, last week, rose to such a pitch that the contests were continued till nearly midnight by the aid of lanterns and torchlights.

Thomas Brown, while attempting to cross the railroad at West Henniker, Monday, was struck by the engine of the down train, and badly, though not fatally, injured. The wagon was a complete wreck, though the horse escaped unhurt.

The ladies of Amherst have purchased a steel bell for the engine house. Three new reservoirs are to be constructed.

Twenty Enfield Shakers have astonished everybody in the vicinity by taking season tickets to the lecture course at Lebanon, this winter.

Business Notices.

For General Debility, the good effects of the VEGETINE are realized immediately after commencing to take it.

If you desire rosy cheeks and a complexion fair and free from Pimples, Blotches and Eruptions, purify your blood by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It has no equal for this purpose. 609

New Life for the Languid.

Perfect health is vouchsafed to few. Probably ninety people out of every hundred who call themselves healthy have their "turns" of languor, exhaustion, depression of spirits and bodily pain. At these times a wineglassful of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is as refreshing as "the shadow of a rock in a weary land." It invigorates and rests the system and cheers the mind. The effect of the Bitters in cases of nervous debility, produced either by undue physical exertion, overstudy, intense anxiety, or any other cause, is wonderfully reviving and invigorating. In fact, this healthful vegetable restorative possesses medicinal properties which entitle it to the rank of an article of prime necessity, and it should be kept on hand in every dwelling, and promptly taken as a remedy for all the minor ailments as well as for more serious complaints.

Liberality of Physicians.

It has always been said that physicians would disparage any remedy, however valuable, which they did not originate themselves. This has been disproved by their liberal course toward J. C. AYER's preparations. They have adopted them into general use in their practice, which shows a willingness to countenance articles that have intrinsic merits which deserve their attention. This does the learned profession great credit, and effectually contradicts the prevalent erroneous notion that their opposition to proprietary remedies is based in their interest to discard them. We have always had confidence in the honorable motives of our medical men, and are glad to find it sustained by the liberal welcome they accord to such remedies as AYER & CO.'s inimitable remedies, even though they are not ordered in the books, but are made known to the people through the newspapers.—[New Orleans Delta.]

Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

Local Matters.

Newcastle.

Before giving the news of this little island, we wish to correct an item that appeared in a late number, which made our former communication seem false in regard to the works at Jerry's Point. In that issue you give the number of men employed there as 25, and the same on Gerrish's Island, while the exact number on the two works is 82—there being 42 employed at Jerry's Fort. We have, as we did have before, our information from Mr. Sauthoff, who is untiring in his labor as overseer of the work on the fortifications. The government have a faithful man in him.

Some of the older inhabitants were thrown into quite a flurry, while all were rejoiced, at receiving a communication addressed to H. M. Curtis, Esq., from Henry Starr, London, England, concerning the Records of the town, lost years ago, the oldest inhabitant not remembering when they were taken.

Mr. Starr states that the Records are in a good state of preservation, being the old manuscript bound in rough calf. They are of much importance to the community, as they commence to record at the incorporating of the town in 1693, and give a concise history for 31 years, to 1724.

This history tells of "Meetings of the Town assembly, appointments of officials, ministers, constables, &c., discussions and resolutions concerning the repairs of meeting houses, court house, the appropriation of lots, managements of ferries, births, deaths, marriages and a host of other curious and interesting proceedings and events during that period." Such a Record is not only of value to one town but as a colonial document it is of worth to the State, because at that time Great Island was "head center" of the colony, and many of the Sirs met here to enjoy the convivial society of that time.

The first Christian Church is receiving an addition, a belfry, in which within a few weeks will be hung a good bell.

The scholars of the grammar school have secured a melodeon. Elmer Palmer presides at the instrument while Miss Gracie Rand leads the vocal part.

Mr. George Magrath has opened a new grocery store on the corner of Main and Tarlton streets. We hope success will crown his undertaking. R.

Laconics.

The steam fishing fleet has commenced operations for the season.

In commencing a new volume, this week, the NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE enters its 118th year, more prosperous than ever.

There are at present in this port nineteen schooners and two brigs, laden with foreign and domestic coal, lumber, plaster and grindstones, the larger part to go over the Concord Railroad.

Contributions for the Catholic Fair, which is to be held at St. Mary's Church next week, will be gratefully received at the house of Rev. Canon Walsh, 116 State Street.

The temperance men, thwarted by the unwisdom of their leaders, are to hold a consultation meeting at their hall on Ladd street, this evening. A spirited address will be delivered and committee appointed to discuss the ways and means of promoting the cause of temperance will report. The public are invited, as will be seen by an advertisement elsewhere.

Executions in Brazil.

A correspondent writes to the Liverpool Albion as to how they formerly executed criminals in Brazil. The writer says:

The day the execution took place was one of great excitement in the city. Political parties were fiercely in opposition. The elections were pending; the candidates, from their rostrums in the churches, were addressing throngs of excited electors. Political feeling ran high, and in the height of the excitement the sheen of the knife glittered over the heads of the swaying multitude; when the city authorities, equal to the occasion, out of the condemned stock of prisoners in hand announced an execution. A scene so sensational takes in the tropics as it would have done here years ago. The streets filled in proportion as the churches emptied. Headed by its band came a body of soldiery, followed by some priests, and then the culprit with his arms pinioned and a halter round his neck. He was a man of color, as was also the hangman, who followed next. The procession moved past the churches and the noisy, excited electors increased in numbers at every turn till it thronged into the open square of the Praca. The British steam frigates Ardent and Growler were upon the coast, and I with some of their officers got into the upper room of a ship-store dealer's store which overlooked the square, upon the opposite side of which, facing the guard-house at the foot of the Rue de Estrella, was erected a simple triangle which was to serve as a gallows, of about the height and form of those which support a swing-boat at an English country fair. One of its three legs formed a ladder, up which the culprit clambered, and the top steps being broad enough to form a seat; on this he sat with his back to the executioner, who stood upon the steps below him, and after fastening the end of the rope to the seat the culprit sat upon, he then either pushed him off or had the power of turning the upper seat, for the criminal, falling forward head first, turned over, and being brought up sharp by the rope, swung with his shoulders on a level with the body of the executioner, who, getting hold of the rope above the head of the swinging form, lifted himself upon its shoulders, with his legs down upon the wretch's breast, and then lifting himself once and more by means of his hands to the rope, allowed his weight to come thud upon the shoulders of the man; leaving go of the rope, with the man's head between his knees, he then placed the palm of one hand over the mouth, and with the fingers of the other pinched tightly the nose, so as effectually to prevent any respiration.

A Sorely Tried Husband.

Rev. Alvah Wiswall, of Trinity Church, New York, makes reply to the charges of Mrs. Wiswall against him for squandering her property, and makes out a pretty bad case for the other party. When he married her she had property to the value of $58,035. He offers to prove that every change in that property advised and carried out by him has been to the profit of her estate, but that the dissipation of her property is due to her unbounded extravagance, against his wish and remonstrance. He gives the amounts of her bills for ten years, for which he says he can show vouchers, and they foot up over $70,000. One year she maintained an equipage costing $2,000, and at the same incurred an expense of $1,387.50 in carriage hire. This gentleman has always devoted his salary to family expenses, and has "run" himself for less than $500 a year. At the present time, after paying the rent of Mrs. Wiswall's house, the wages of her servant, and $2.50 a day for her support, he has left from his annual $2,000 just $67.50. Mr. Wiswall denies any unhusband-like treatment of his heiress-wife, and, altogether, represents himself to the authorities of Trinity as an abused man.

—Age 102, revolutionary war, Lafayette, physical and mental faculties unimpaired, etc., are the main points in the career of William Muir, who died at Westhampton, N. Y., last week.

English Bathing Drawers.

HAM & CO., have just received a lot of Gentlemen's English Bathing Drawers.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—In Galloway, large crags are met with having ancient writings on them. One on the farm of Knockleby has cut deep on the upper side, "Lift me up, and I'll tell you more." A number of people gathered to this crag, and succeeded in lifting it up in hopes of being well repaid; but, instead of finding any gold, they found written on it, "Lay me down as I was before."

—"Put down your umbrellas! You'll scare this engine off the track!" screamed the engineer on a western North Carolina road to a crowd of country people who had gathered to see the first train of cars come in. They were lowered at once.

aug6-cnoff E. A. JOY, General Agent.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuble is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 40,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN
HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,
FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at a slight cost. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
NO. 75 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents or Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their application in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION
CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

$1 PER BOTTLE. SIX BOTTLES, $5.

Trials of Living Lightning Rods.

"Is it cold up there?" This seems, at first sight, an innocent question enough. So it is, under some circumstances. For my own part, however, I have grown tired of hearing it. This is not surprising, for I have listened to it a great many times. When people address it to me they laugh in a disagreeable sort of manner, as if they saw a joke somewhere. There may be one. All I can say is, that I have never yet been able to appreciate the point of it.

I may remark that I am tall. I have always been big for my age. My father and mother used to say that I should turn out an extraordinary man. They sent me to a school, and I was the biggest lad there. For a time I was very comfortable. My fellows treated me with marked respect, and some of them were in the habit of making me presents of bulls'-eyes, taffee, and the like. But by-the-by a change was brought about. It turned out that my size was considered a grievance by some of my companions. One day a passionate little wretch with red hair wound up a dispute about a game of three-holes by hurling a sharp-edged stone at my leg, accompanying the act with the remark that though I was as big as jackass I wasn't going to bully him. I love peace, otherwise the consequence might have been serious. The young gentleman in question presumed on my leniency, and by and by others followed his pernicious example. I was shortly the recipient of many challenges to fight. These I felt compelled to decline, and the consequence was that I was covered by obloquy. People never seemed to get the idea out of their heads that it was a positive disgrace for a big fellow like me not to be able to attack and defend any medium-sized lad at a moment's notice.

Sometimes my temper got the better of me and I turned on my comparatively small antagonists. If they beat me they were loudly cheered by admiring crowds; if I seemed to be thrashing them the crowds took up their cause, called me a brute of a fellow, and acted in such manner that I soon got more than I bargained for. All this was very natural and praiseworthy, perhaps, but I failed to see the justice of it.

During my life many people have tried to make a hero of me. I have frequently, as the saying is, been "put in the breach." It is, perhaps, extremely flattering to be called on to uphold the honors of your companions, but when you are rather slow in your movements, and have very sensitive feelings, I am inclined to think that you pay too dearly for the honor.

Once I joined a cricket club, and played in a match. I remember that, as I walked to the wicket, bat in hand, there was a buzz of excitement, and many opinions were expressed to the effect that I was going to "do it all." People also advised each other to "look out." The first ball that I received was so awfully swift that I never saw it before I felt it. There was a great laugh when people saw me double up, and some individuals remarked, in tones of intense satisfaction, that the "big 'un" had got it pretty hot that time. The second ball I got bowled me out. At once there was a howl of derision, and I walked back to the pavilion amidst the jeers of a portion of the great "unwashed." Other fellows got out in an equally ignominious manner, but no particular notice was taken of them.

I have run in races once or twice, but have not won. Those who have watched the contests have gone nearly mad with excitement when a smaller man than myself has "left me standing," as the phrase is. Ladies have fluttered their fans with joy when, after a desperate struggle, I have been compelled to give in. In short, in everything that I have attempted I have always got the sympathies of the mob against me. If ever I had been fortunate enough to achieve a successful result, I feel that not a single atom of credit would have been accorded me.

It is said that the British public always side with the weak. Bosh! They always side with the small. I don't complain, for I want no sympathy. The only thing I wish is, that people would leave me in peace. They needn't make a point of looking pointedly at me as I pass them in the streets. There is no reason why they should make very audible remarks on me as I walk along. Nor can I see any reason why they should be constantly expecting me to do things which I cannot perform, and which, for the matter of that, would puzzle most men. I'll admit that I don't like hard work; that, in fact, on the other hand, I'm fond of taking mine ease. I know that I am not calculated to shine in public, for I feel that I am awkward, and not so strong as I look. All that I want, then—all I ask—is that the people will be kind enough to devote that attention which they now give me on their own affairs. If they did this, I feel that all parties concerned would be gainers. At any rate, I am certain that one individual would.

Austrian Ladies.

Mr. Fulton of the Baltimore American writes: "How do the Vienna ladies dress?" Well, the ladies of Vienna wear no bustles, and we may as well speak plainly, and add, that it is because most of them need none. In all other respects they follow the same fashions that the ladies of America adopt. Their dresses and overskirts have all the folds, drills, pleats, points, ruffles, laces and trimmings that are to be found in Paris, and their skirts drag in the dirt of the pavements just as those of the rest of the civilized nations. The only difference that we have observed in this respect is that they wear all their underskirts with trails also, and when the pavements are wet and dirty, they let them drag much more recklessly than the ladies of Baltimore do, seldom raise them to avoid a puddle, but move on as unconcerned as if their skirts were trailing over a velvet carpet.

A Universal Language.

The Overland Monthly has an interesting article on this subject, from which we quote the following: The tendency is to the consolidation of languages, rather than to their dispersion. That tendency will ultimately lead to a universal language, common to all. The political movements of the day are directed toward the unification of peoples kindred by race and language. The final and supreme political movement will be the unification of mankind. Unification has always been the dream of the world. Alexander, Cæsar and Napoleon were men who simply flourished in advance of the ages in which they lived. They aspired to universal empire, but they began at the wrong end. It is in proof that revolvers on the same pattern as those we now carry, were constructed centuries ago; but they were laid aside as useless, because the percussion-cap had not been invented. Colt did no more than apply a new contrivance to an old idea, when he went into the manufacture of the weapon which is now in general use. In like manner, the great generals mentioned above battled for unification before the nations of the world were fit for such a form of society. All that they accomplish d fell to pieces when their firm hands were removed from the direction of affairs. But the various races of the world are now drawing near and assimilating of their own accord. Which of the languages shall it be? We certainly never should have thought of putting in a claim for the difficult and somewhat crude language which we speak, if the selection were to be based on merit. The Spanish language may not be so copious as the English, but it is far superior to it in the softness of the tones and in scientific construction. It has also a never-failing reservoir, in the Latin to draw from, when expansion should become essential. But the universal language will depend upon considerations of a far different character from those of intrinsic merit and superior internal structure. Commerce, geographical situation, and increase in numbers, are the absolute factors in the problem.

To Mr. Mori, the Embassador of the Japanese Empire, we are indebted for starting the discussion as to whether the English is not the "coming" language. It is to be noted as one of the curious coincidences of the times that the representative of a nation which has been shut up for centuries in haughty exclusiveness, should have been first to point to one of the most curious and significant signs of the present epoch. That diplomat gave utterance to the desperate opinion, that as his countrymen were determined to embrace western civilization, they had better adopt some more copious and manageable language than their own, and English was the one which he thought would be the best suited for the purpose, provided something could be done to bring its orthography under simple rules.

No higher value, probably, ought to be set upon the suggestion of Mr. Mori than that of a mere incident, for at the time he gave expression to it he had not traveled farther than this country, and was not, therefore, capable of pronouncing a broad judgment upon all the facts of the case. When examined, it means no more than that the Japanese should adopt our language, because America was the nearest civilized country to them, and the one with which they are apparently destined to have the closest commercial relations. But recently a gentleman, whose opinion is entitled to greater weight than that of the Japanese Minister, has written a treatise in which he endeavors to show that English is certain, before a century has elapsed, to become the universal language of mankind. That gentleman is Professor Candolle, of Geneva, Switzerland. He bases his idea mainly on the prospective increase in numbers of English-speaking people. He estimates that by the close of the next century there will be 860,000,000 speaking English, while Germany will have only 74,000,000, and France 69,500,000. These conclusions are based upon the existing established increase of population in the United States, England, and the British Colonies. These are startling figures, it must be admitted. The territories occupied by English-speaking people are capable of sustaining this enormous expansion. But even if deductions be made for unexpected contingencies, the increase is certainly bound to be enormous. The favorable position of the various foci is also an element of the problem, but one to which the Swiss Professor paid no attention. We find that English-speaking people at this moment dominate the North American continent, with every prospect of overrunning the other. The Latin races in Mexico, Central America and South America will never be able to withstand the outpouring from the North which is destined, sooner or later, to take place.

—It makes a great deal of difference whether you take cough medicine or carbolic acid for a cold. John Casey, in Philadelphia, kept both of these fluids in similar bottles side by side; and the result of this unwise arrangement is that John Casey will never take any more medicine in this world.

Snow falls are reported at Fonda, N. Y., Pottsville, Pa., and other places.

Charlestown, Brighton and West Roxbury voted to be annexed to Boston, Tuesday. Brookline voted not to. Boston voted in favor of annexing all four places by over 4000 majority. Charlestown voted 2240 yeas to 1947 nays; Brighton, 632 to 183; West Roxbury, 720 to 613; Brookline 299 to 706. Boston gains a population of 41,-973, an area of 9,517 1-2 acres—double its former area—and a valuation of $71,639,251. Its population now is 292,486, and its valuation, $765,470,651.

Boston has voted to go back to Charlestown from whom she originated. She left her, in the early settlement, for the supposed lack of fresh water, and she returns to her gladly now that the old mother has secured a rich supply for herself and all her children.

Charges are preferred against Controller Green of New York, ignorant misapplication of the public funds being alleged. It is intended to induce Mayor Havemeyer to remove him or, failing in that, to restrict the controller by injunctions so as to compel his retirement.

Pennsylvania, Ohio and Iowa hold their State elections on the 14th inst. The respective republican majorities in the three States at the last State election, (in 1872) were: Pennsylvania, 35,627; Ohio, 14,-159, and Iowa, 57,862.

The business of the Portland and Ogdensburg Railroad is steadily increasing, and more rolling stock is imperatively necessary to carry the freight demanded of it.

The complete defeat of the Carlists in Navarre by the Spanish government forces under General Moniones is reported.

The St. Paul Press charges that "the Chicago Tribune is edited by an Irishman with a shovel, who performs his duties by loading into the concern whatever matter first comes to hand."

Duluth comes up smiling and says "Jay Cooke was only remotely connected with our metropolis."

Mr. Allen, the Methuseleh of Ohio politics, is said to eat with a hayfork in order to secure the vote of the Grangers.

It is a little singular that while a man can swallow whole whortleberries, cherry pits, and even buckshot without any uneasiness at all, yet a single pill will catch in his throat at a particular ticklish spot, and hang there four hours, and make faces at his stomach. And a man in a fix like that is not exactly the party to be selected to concoct mottoes for a festival.

An Incident of the Epidemic.

"A few nights ago," says the New-Orleans Republican of the 2d inst., "a young man and his wife called at the First Precinct Station-house, asking for lodging. They were quite neatly dressed, and had an appearance of refinement which indicated that they had met with sad reverses. The circumstance was so uncommon that Clerk Furnirs, after accommodating them as well as his poor quarters will admit, felt so inquisitive as to ask a few questions. The husband was formerly in tolerably fair circumstances, and, when he married, had a bright future before him, apparently. The wife was fair and hopeful and loving, and that was not long ago. They went to Shreveport, where he obtained a position which furnished them ample means for present sustenance. The pestilence came, business ceased, and every man was compelled to look out for himself. He had been unable to save any money, and his natural feeling was to fly from disease and death. They managed to reach this city, but he could not obtain employment or money. When all their little trinkets had been disposed of, they had no other resource, and were compelled to leave the boarding house. They were on the street, destitute and homeless—a forlorn couple. When night came their misery was doubled. To walk the streets through the weary hours of darkness was more than the weak wife could undertake, and as a last resort the unhappy pair sought temporary shelter in a police prison. At dawn they were on the streets again, not knowing how to obtain food unless they begged for it. The husband sought for employment, willing to try any task that would furnish them with money to procure necessities. He met with no success, and at night they returned to the prison; but through all their adversity they attempted to keep up their spirits. Yesterday the man obtained a few hours' work on the levee, and no sooner was the pay in his hand than he sought his patient wife, who was waiting for him in Lafayette square."

Mark Twain as an Experimentist.

Mr. Henry Lee writes to Land and Water (Eng.): "Apropos of porpoises hearing, my friend Mark Twain tells me that, after reading my little article on this subject, the idea struck him one morning, when he was performing his ablutions in a large zinc bath, that he would try to fancy himself a porpoise being rapped at on the front glass of its tank by thoughtless persons. So, while his head was under water, he tapped with his knuckles on the metal side of the bath. The sound, he says, was conveyed by his tympanum with surprising resonance, and, if not sufficient to cause him to commit suicide as the porpoise did at the Brighton Aquarium, was much louder than would have been produced by the same act in the external air."

—For real unadulterated sensation, for tragic and blood-curdling reading, to a person fifty miles from the locality, there is nothing that compares with a list of premiums to a county fair.

The Great Falls Manufacturing Company has nearly completed a stone dam across the Salmon Falls river at an expense of nearly $100,000. It is 350 feet long.

Alonzo Knight of Atkinson has a pumpkin vine one hundred feet long.

The body of William A. Wheeler of Keene, who has been missing a week, has been found in the river at Claremont. He was afflicted with heart disease, and is supposed to have drowned himself to be rid of suffering. He leaves a family.

The flooring of a stable belonging to the Franklin Falls Company, of Franklin, gave way a few nights ago, and four oxen, which were tied with chains, were strung up by the neck and choked.

Rev. S. H. Tolman committed suicide by hanging at Nelson, on the 6th. His health has been impaired and his mind depressed for some months. About three months since his people gave him a vacation, hoping that rest would restore health, but he, despairing of being able to return to his pastorate within the year, resigned it a few days since. He was more than an ordinary preacher, and, as a pastor, much beloved by them. He was about 45 years of age. He leaves a wife and three children.

The Androscoggin River has not been so low since 1825.

Geo. Parsons is clearing and making other preparations to build a hotel at Dixville Notch.

Mrs. Betsey Thompson, a resident of Belvidere, in Newmarket, went out into the pasture, the other day and picked from the bushes a half bushel of barberries in less than two hours' time. She will be 98 years of age the first day of November next, and still retains a fine growth of glossy, black hair.

Cast Away on Lake Michigan.

The brig Hampton, of Racine, which the mate Hatchell describes as "an old tub," sprung a leak on her voyage to Frith Creek Green Bay, for repairs, her yawl boat was stove in launching, and all her spars having been cut away a raft was constructed. The Chicago Tribune relates the sequel as follows:

The men watched eagerly the building of the raft, and when it was finished they wanted it launched immediately. Hatchell and the captain strenuously objected to this, preferring to wait until the last moment before trusting themselves to it. The terror-stricken sailors, however, threatened them, and the mate was compelled to stand guard with an ax to prevent them from ruining all chances of escape in their precipitate haste. Acting under his orders, they clung to the ship for about an hour longer and when it was about going under water the raft was thrown upon the the waves. Hatchell threw the captain's son, a boy of fifteen, from the deck, and the others got on the raft the best way they could. When the ship was going down it struck a corner of the raft, tipping it up, and knocking two men into the water. These were rescued with the greatest of difficulty, and then the raft and the freight were entirely alone, the brig having disappeared from sight. According to the mate's story, the weight was so heavy that the raft was about two feet under water all the time, and the crew only saved themselves from drowning by holding on to the short pieces of rope which had been attached to the middle and ends of the spars composing the rudely-constructed float.

They were tossed about in the rough sea all night. At daylight on Monday morning they observed a vessel but a short distance from them, and cried out with all their might for help. They could discern the man at the wheel and the other members of the crew bustling about the deck, but they could not make them hear their cries for assistance or see their signals of distress. And the sail passed on and left them without hope. The wind was blowing strong from the northwest, and taking them rapidly from the shore and out of the track of vessels. At noon on the same day they sighted another vessel bound for this port. Hatchell divested himself of his shirt, split it up the back, fastened it to a long board, and held it aloft as a flag. The signal was seen by the vessel, and she bore down toward the raft. When near enough to it a boat was lowered from her, and the famished crew of the Hampton were rescued from their perilous position.

Wisdom With Te.

[Portsmouth Times.]

"Their (balloonist's) experience simply demonstrates that the air current theories are all nonsense, and that there is no dependence to be placed upon the wind. It also proves that a balloon cannot be made to float steadily at a great attitude. The changes in the atmosphere caused by storms may bring it to the earth at any time. We are pleased to observe that we shall probably hear no more of proposed balloon trips across the Atlantic until Barnum takes the business in hand."

Which leads us to enquire whether Barnum can establish an air current and cause a balloon "to float steadily at a great attitude?" Don't slop over, my child.

Sufficiently Eligible.

[Nashua Telegraph.]

The Monitor make a suggestion calculated to dash the aspirations of its neighbor of the Patriot, who has been named as the next democratic candidate for governor. It thinks he is constitutionally ineligible inasmuch as he has not resided within the limits of the State the requisite length of time. This is a mistake. The constitution does not preclude anybody from being a democratic candidate for governor, and by the time he is elected he may not be as old as Methuselah, but he will be old enough to answer all the constitutional requirements of the case.

Mark Twain

Has been in Newgate prison, London, and Mr. M. D. Conway gives a pleasant account of what resulted, indirectly, from the visit, in a London letter to the Cincinnati Commercial, as follows:

An American lady who was being shown through one of the shows of London—Newgate—the other day expressed herself rather forcibly to the warder concerning several features of the prison which hardly appeared to her humane. She was grieved to see the elaborate and bran new machinery for holding prisoners tight while they are flogged with the cat, stocks for holding their feet, and similar arrangements for the body and hands. The lady asked where the thumb-screw was. The warder innocently replied that they hadn't any. However, he must afterwards have pondered more profoundly over the sarcasm of the inquiry for more recently another American lady upon giving expression to a similar feeling about the resuscitated stocks, was sharply told by the warder that they had managed to get along there without flogging for many years until Americans came over and began to garrote the citizens, and this was found to be the only way of dealing with them. The lady replied that it must have been because the English came over and took away their business, since American prisons were full of Englishmen.

"However," she added, "we don't torture them."

On coming to the small alley in which executed criminals are buried, this lady—who is a good Quaker—shuddered at that, and the warder said:
